By MARY LEYDECKER

SAN FRANCISCO — A crewman on one of the two tankers involved in the big oil spill last week said today the other vessel must have been on the wrong side of the channel when the ships collided in the Golden Gate.

Tetard, taking the witness stand in the third day of testimony before three Coast Guard hearing officers, said he last observed the Oregon Standard, the other vessel involved in the crash, just before it passed under the Golden Gate Bridge.

When last observed, he said, the outbound Oregon Standard was on a course parallel to the inbound Arizona.

"After you lost the Oregon Standard on the radar, what did you plan to do?" Capt. Joseph E. Gould, presiding officer of the hearing board, asked Tetard.

"I planned to stay on my side of the channel — the south side," he said.

Asked to explain how the collision could have occurred, Tetard slowly but firmly responded, "According to my best knowledge, we were on our side of the channel and she (the Oregon Standard) must have been south of center."

Yesterday, the Arizona's captain stuck by his guns to say that he had helped avert an even greater disaster.

Capt. Harry H. Parnell admitted at the inquiry, however, that he should "have anticipated losing a sister ship, the Oregon Standard, in a radar blurring caused by the Golden Gate Bridge.

He insisted, however, that — after sighting the Oregon Standard's red light 200 to 330 yards away — he had done the right thing by turning the Arizona hard to the left in order to take the collision on the Arizona's bow.

Otherwise, Parnell said, the Arizona's engine room might have been hit and the ship sunk with loss of life. "Oil might have been leaking for 100 years," he added.

The captain, looking as if he hadn't had a night's sleep since the disaster which spilled thousands of gallons of oil into the bay and ocean, testified that he was primarily concerned with his own ship.

But he said that in the seconds before collision, he did consider damage to the Oregon Standard. By ordering the hard turn to the left — it was not clear from testimony whether there was time to carry out his order — he was also, he said, trying to do the least damage to

'No Ground Troops In Cambodia' Despite Reports Of Their Use

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird assured Congress today that American ground forces "will not be introduced" in Cambodia and that the Cambodians understood this.

Laird made the assertion, in a statement to the Senate Armed Services Committee, despite pictorial evidence that there have been American soldiers on the ground in Cambodia very recently.

"In essence," he said, "the President has said repeatedly we are not going to retreat from the responsibilities of leadership in the world."

But while not retreating, the Secretary said the administration "continues to pursue negotiations vigorously in Paris."

"A negotiated settlement would be the quickest way to end the war, but I must, unfortunately, report that a negotiated settlement does not appear in sight."

Laird said he had made clear that while reduction of ground forces continued in Indochina "we will take whatever actions are necessary and appropriate —in compliance, of course, with congressional actions—to hasten the end of U.S. involvement in the fighting with a minimum loss of American lives.

"The Cambodians understand that American ground combat forces and American advisers will not be introduced into their country. Our objective for the future is that the United States will not need to rely on its own manpower to achieve the objective of self-determination for our friends and allies in Asia and to thwart Communist aggression in that part of the world."

Despite the congressional ban on sending U. S. advisers or ground troops into Cambodia, the Nixon administration now has acknowledged that some

Standard Sued; A Cleanup Case

A veterinarian with offices in San Rafael and two other persons filed suit in San Francisco yesterday for $12.5 million in damages against Standard Oil Co.

The class-action suit was filed in superior court in behalf of volunteers who have rescued birds and mopped up after an oil spill triggered by a collision Jan. 18 between two Standard tankers in the Golden Gate.

The suit asks $2.5 million for work done by volunteers, $1 million to cover their medical costs and punitive damages.

Attorney Gary J. Near, who filed the suit, said his clients have a "decided willingness" to contribute any financial recovery to conservation causes.

Near estimated that up to 5,000 volunteers have taken part in the cleanup and rescue operation, performing a "vital service."

"To think that these people worked for Standard Oil for free runs against the grain of usual concepts in this country," Near said. "Standard Oil has acknowledged its responsibility and duty to clean up."

Near is an attorney for the Friends of the Earth, a conservation organization, but it is not involved in the suit.

A Standard Oil spokesman declined comment on the suit until company attorneys have had a chance to study it.

The company already has been hit with a $3.5 billion class action in behalf of all

Drug Abuse Among GIs Held Rampant

There is an "unbelievable drug abuse problem" among men of the First Cavalry Division in Vietnam, while they are restricted to company compounds and denied an enlisted men's clubs, according to a San Rafael man who is a member of the company.

Michael K. McMillan, a former Independent-Journal circulation department employee, has sent a letter to publisher Wishard A. Brown, asking that it be published in the hope of bringing public pressure to bear.

Other members of his unit also have written to their hometown newspapers, McMillan told his former boss, circulation manager Allan Howells, in an accompanying note in which he said: "Morale is at an incredible low and drug abuse is running rampant. I think the people at home should know about it."

McMillan is a member of Company B, 228th Aviation Battalion, First Cavalry Division. His letter to the publisher follows:

"I am an Army serviceman now serving my tour in the Republic of Vietnam. I am a Marinite and worked for the Independent-Journal for three years in the circulation department . .

"Many enlisted men, including myself, are trying to bring attention to the deplorable conditions in the first Cavalry Division stationed in Vietnam. We feel we are being treated unfairly for no apparent reason. We have appealed and petitioned through normal channels with no response. Therefore, we feel our only recourse is to appeal to the American public and hope apathy will not prevail.

Wholesale Prices Take Giant Jump

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A sharp rise in farm produce prices this month has caused the largest boost in wholesale prices in a year—six-tenths of one per cent, the government said in preliminary estimates released today.

Farm product prices went up 1.7 per cent this month after falling sharply in three of the past five months, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The more stable industrial commodities price index went up 0.3 per cent in January, about average for the past year, but down from the 0.4 per cent advance in December.

The 0.6 per cent unadjusted wholesale price increase this month was the largest since a 0.7 per cent advance last January. After season adjustment, the increase was only 0.4 per cent, matching the seasonally adjusted jump last September.

The BLS report on wholesale prices was bad news for the Nixon administration, which has been claiming it has turned the corner on inflation and rising prices. Wholesale price increases usually point to higher consumer prices, beginning almost immediately for some commodities.

In a companion development, the government's composite index of leading business indicators increased by 1.4 per cent in December, reflecting the end of the auto strike but also indicating the troubled economy might be on the road to recovery.

Judge Orders Fines, Jailings In Rioting

Three union officials, including the president of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, were fined and ordered to jail yesterday in connection with the riotous demonstration at the Independent-Journal last Valentine's Day.

Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court found the three officials, as well as the typographical union itself, guilty of contempt of court for violating his injunction limiting picketing and forbidding violence in connection with the union's year-old strike against the I-J.

The union; its president, Leon Olson and Jack Goldberger, president of Periodical Drivers and Helpers Local 921 were given maximum fines of $1,500 each. Olson and Goldberger were sentenced to the maximum 15 days in jail.

They and Donald H. Abrams, a typographical union vice president, were found in contempt for three specific violations of the injunction which was issued last Jan. 28.

Abrams was fined $750 and sentenced to 15 days in jail.

Keating's action came on a petition filed last Feb. 17 by I-J attorneys charging the Valentine's Day demonstration violated the judge's injunction.

The I-J petition charged that

Finger Lickin' Chicken Is Approved

By LARRY MOWELL

Overruling the county planning commission and the wishes of Mill Valley's elected officials, the supervisors unanimously granted a use permit for the national chain's local franchiser, Harmon Investment Managers.

The approval ended years of effort on the part of the chain to open a Southern Marin outlet. Two previous sites along Highway 101 were rejected by the county; Mill Valley rebuffed the colonel three other times.

The approved take-out food restaurant will replace C's Drive-in at 510 Miller Avenue, flush with the Mill Valley city limit, but in an unincorporated area.

The city council, planning commission and architectural advisory committee of Mill Valley all opposed a new take-out restaurant at the Miller Avenue lot.

But San Rafael attorney Colin C. Claxon, representing the franchiser, argued that people in Mill Valley want an outlet of the chicken chain despite cries against more drive-ins.

He declared that a door-to-door survey of 1,000 Mill Valley residents conducted by his firm discovered that 87 per cent fa-

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Berlin Interference

BERLIN (UPI)—The East Germans for the third time in a month interfered with traffic for the third time in a month today to protest West German political activity in Berlin.

Communist border guards held up trucks carrying supplies to the city as the Russians told the Western allies they would.

The slowdown began about three hours before the scheduled arrival in West Berlin of West German President Gustav Heinemann in a U.S. Air Force transport, a trip called illegal by the East.

Airline Slowdown

LONDON (UPI) —A long-simmering pay dispute at London's Heathrow airport brought British European Airways (BEA) to a virtual standstill today and threatened to spread to British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC).

A spokesman for BEA, one of Europe's busiest carrying 14,000 passengers daily, said today the only service operating during the day would be inside Germany.

BOTH BEA and BOAC are state-run airlines. Flights of both airlines have suffered daily delays since 6,000 airport workers began a go-slow and overtime ban Dec. 14 to back demands for a 12.5 per cent raise. The airlines have offered 4.5 per cent.

Moscow Incident

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet plainclothesmen today punched and pushed an American newsman as he sought to meet a Russian on a busy Moscow street corner, the newsman said today.

It was the second such incident in the Soviet capital in four days.

James R. Peipert of the Associated Press said the men — apparently secret police agents —did not injure him or the man he had gone to meet. But they shoved, kicked and punched them, and knocked Peipert's eyeglasses to the ground, smashing one lens.

Peipert said the incident occurred shortly after midnight on Moscow's ultra-modern Kalinin Prospekt about a half block from the U.S. Embassy. He said he drove there to meet a Russian news source, keeping an appointment made by telephone and apparently monitored by secret police agents.

Ugandan Threat

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI)—Uganda's new military leader said today he had intelligence reports that troops from neighboring Tanzania, led by ousted President Milton Obote, were preparing to attack Uganda.

"I am not afraid,' said Maj. Gen. Idi Amin, who seized power from Obote in a coup Monday.

"I have just received intelligence reports that Tanzanian troops are preparing with modern (Communist) Chinese weapons requested by Dr. Milton Obote to come to attack Uganda," Amin said.

Steel Profit Drop

NEW YORK (UPI)—U.S. Steel Corp. says the 10-week long General Motors strike was the big factor in its profits dropping by $69.7 million compared with 1969.

Despite a slight gain in sales, the steel company said Tuesday its net income for 1970 amounted to $147.5 million, compared with $217.2 million the year before—a drop of 32 per cent.

Profits in the last three months of the year, the fourth quarter, dropped to $39 million from $66,322,000 in the same period in 1969. Steel shipments also declined from 22.4 million tons in 1969 to 21 million last year.

In addition to the General Motors strike, the nation's largest steel firm blamed the general economic decline in the nation and rising imports for its losses.

Credit Card Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Another worry has been removed from the consumer: the threat of financial loss through lost or stolen credit cards.

Under an amendment to the Truth in Lending Act, effective this week, no credit card holder may be held liable for more than $50 in unauthorized purchases made by someone using his lost or stolen credit card.

The new rules also require all credit cards within a year to bear some sort of identification. The law suggests a photograph, a signature, a thumbprint or electronic verification through coded magnetic symbols.

Intelsat 4 Up

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Intelsat 4 drifted toward a permanent orbit over the Atlantic Ocean today where it will operate as the world's most powerful commercial communications satellite.

The spacecraft was kicked into an "essentially synchronous orbit" late Tuesday night as it reached its third apogee, a maneuver which originally had been planned for this morning at the height of its elliptical orbit some 22,300 miles above Earth.

But the Communications Satellite Corp. (Comsat) said "an assessment of telementry information indicated it more appropriate to fire the apogee motor on the third apogee rather than the planned fourtt..."

Comsat said Intelsat 4 was in orbt at approximately 123 degrees east longitude and drifting toward its intended orbit at 24.5 degrees west.

Postal Strike Push

LONDON (UPI) – Workers staging the first postal and telecommunications strike in British history began their second week away from work today with a fresh injection of money from fellow unionists. Strike leaders centered attention on hurting the nation's businessmen.

Stanley Rosser, president of the Postal Engineering Union which is not on strike, delivered $24,000 to headquarters of striking mail carriers, switchboard and telegraph operators union as assistance to members suffering hardships in their walkout.

Nun Jailed

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—Smiling, Sister Jogues Egan briefly embraced and kissed her lawyer Tuesday night before going to jail for up to 18 months because she refused to answer questions by a federal grand jury investigating an alleged plot to kidnap a presidential adviser.

Despite full immunity from prosecution, the 52-year-old Roman Catholic New York City nun was remanded to York County jail by U. S. District Judge R. Dixon Herman for civil contempt for refusing to answer about 70 questions regarding her relationship with six persons accused of conspiracy in an alleged antiwar plot.

The six, including the Rev. Philip F. Berrigan, were indicted on charges of conspiring to bomb federal installations in Washington and to kidnap Henry A. Kissicger, President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser, to protest the Indochina war

Nixon State Dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President and Mrs. Nixon staged a state dinner for Prince Juan Carlos of Spain Tuesday night, the first time a member of the royal family of Spain has ever been entertained in the White House.

The prince, handpicked successor of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, also met with Nixon for an hour during the day to discuss trade and defense relations between the United States and Spain.

Juan Carlos and his wife, Princess Sophia, are on a two-day state visit to Washington. They also will visit San Diego and Houston, and will go to Cape Kennedy, Fla., to watch Sunday's scheduled launch of Apollo 14.

Novatan Committed To Napa Hospital

Reginald Bruce Johnson, 22, of Novato, has been committed to Napa State Hospital yesterday by Judge E. Warren McGuire.

On the basis of doctors' reports, Judge McGuire on Monday accepted Johnson's plea of not guilty by reason of insanity to charges of twice burglarizing a house at 1290 Lynwood Drive, Novato.

TOWED TO PORT TOGETHER

Two Venezuelan ships, locked together in a foggy collision Monday in the Gulf of Mexico 80 miles southeast of Galveston, Tex., are being towed to port together. Aboard the ships are tons of coffee, wheat, mail and 73 persons. The 382-foot Anzotegue (left) and the 420-foot Roraima were heavily damaged. One crewman was killed and another injured (UPI Telephoto)

Nixon 'Distorts Cambodian Ban'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield says the Nixon administration has distorted the meaning of legislation forbidding the use of U.S. ground troops in Cambodia.

The result is that the administration has violated the spirit if not the letter of the law, Mansfield said.

Mansfield said Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird "seems to indicate that what is being done in Cambodia is in accord with the Cooper-Church Amendment, which I think is contrary to the fact."

Mansfield made the statement in response to a question in a television interview about the use of close U.S. air support for Cambodian forces and the use of American "instructors" for Cambodian troops.

"I think that the intention (of the law) has been distorted," he said.

The Cooper-Church Amendment, passed Dec. 29, bars the use of funds for U.S. ground combat troops or advisers in Cambodia.

However, the amendment did not use the word "instructors," and Pentagon and high administration officials have since said they do not interpret the law as banning the use of U.S. "instructors" to train Cambodian troops.

These same officials have said the law does not ban the use of funds for air support of any kind in Cambodia.

Mansfield was interviewed by news correspondents on an Educational Television Network show, parts of which were broadcast later on commercial networks, arranged as a Democratic response to President Nixon's State of the Union address last week.

Mansfield said he foresaw no congressional move to deal with the administration's interpretation of Cooper-Church, but he promised to keep pressure on the administration to abide by Congress' wishes to wind down the war quickly.

"The time has come to work harder to convince the President to speed up the withdrawal," he said.

Mansfield said that hearings scheduled by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would serve to "show these people downtown — in the executive branch of government —that these things are not going unnoticed."

Another Boast For California

The state Agriculture Department boasted Tuesday that the Golden State's average cow produced 11,521 pounds of milk last year to lead the nation. This was 2,363 pounds above the national average.

In fact, the agency said, California has been the national leader the last 40 years in milk production.

And California milk is a bargain, the department said.

In San Francisco, a half gallon is sold for 54 cents in retail stores while the Los Angeles price is 52 cents. Officials said these were among the lowest in the nation.

Beatification Nearer For John

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—The late Pope John XXIII took another step toward possible sainthood Tuesday when a Venice Roman Catholic church court completed a preliminary investigation into his beatification cause.

Church sources said it still was likely to take decades before "Good Pope John," who died in 1963, is beatified — proclaimed a blessed of the church.

The Patriarch of Venice, Msgr. Albino Luciani, signed the court's secret findings in the presence of bishops from the Venetian region in the crowded church of St. Moses Tuesday.

Formal Nod On Interior Chief Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Former Rep. Rogers C. B. Morton R-Md., whose nomination to become secretary of the Interior easily won committee approval, apparently will make it through the full Senate just as easily this week.

The Senate Interior Committee Tuesday recommended confirmation of Morton after deliberating just 10 minutes following two days of public hearings.

Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said he would move for Morton's Senate confirmation today or Thursday. Jackson said he expected no opposition.

The only sour note came from conservation groups who said Morton had done nothing to distinguish himself in the environmental protection field and in fact had supported programs and plans that would harm the environment.

Morton, former Republican national chairman, was picked by President Nixon to succeed Walter J. Hickel, fired by Nixon in November.

During his final day of hearings, Morton assured the committee he owned no stocks or bonds that would present a conflict of interest with his duties as head of the Interior Department.

He also promised to recommend heavy penalties if oil companies damage Alaska's Arctic areas with a pipeline to be built to carry oil 400 miles from northern slope oil fields to southern seaports.

He said he would see that to protect the delicate Alaskan permafrost, safeguards were imposed in constructing the pipeline, including monitoring of pipeline development, construction and operation, and taking the same precautions with the road that is to be constructed beside it.

Morton also:

—Said he favored extending the voting franchise to American citizens living in U.S. territories or in associated jurisdictions.

—Pledged to support measures to control overuse of national parks and campgrounds, strong laws to require restoration of land ravaged by strip mining.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Berlin Interference

BERLIN (UPI)—The East Germans for the third time in a month interfered with traffic for the third time in a month today to protest West German political activity in Berlin.

Communist border guards held up trucks carrying supplies to the city as the Russians told the Western allies they would.

The slowdown began about three hours before the scheduled arrival in West Berlin of West German President Gustav Heinemann in a U.S. Air Force transport, a trip called illegal by the East.

Airline Slowdown

LONDON (UPI) —A long-simmering pay dispute at London's Heathrow airport brought British European Airways (BEA) to a virtual standstill today and threatened to spread to British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC).

A spokesman for BEA, one of Europe's busiest carrying 14,000 passengers daily, said today the only service operating during the day would be inside Germany.

BOTH BEA and BOAC are state-run airlines. Flights of both airlines have suffered daily delays since 6,000 airport workers began a go-slow and overtime ban Dec. 14 to back demands for a 12.5 per cent raise. The airlines have offered 4.5 per cent.

Moscow Incident

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet plainclothesmen today punched and pushed an American newsman as he sought to meet a Russian on a busy Moscow street corner, the newsman said today.

It was the second such incident in the Soviet capital in four days.

James R. Peipert of the Associated Press said the men — apparently secret police agents —did not injure him or the man he had gone to meet. But they shoved, kicked and punched them, and knocked Peipert's eyeglasses to the ground, smashing one lens.

Peipert said the incident occurred shortly after midnight' on Moscow's ultra-modern Kalinin Prospekt about a half block from the U.S. Embassy. He said he drove there to meet a Russian news source, keeping an appointment made by telephone and apparently monitored by secret police agents.

Ugandan Threat

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI)—Uganda's new military leader said today he had intelligence reports that troops from neighboring Tanzania, led by ousted President Milton Obote, were preparing to attack Uganda.

"I am not afraid,' said Maj. Gen. Idi Amin, who seized power from Obote in a coup Monday.

"I have just received intelligence reports that Tanzanian troops are preparing with modern (Communist) Chinese weapons requested by Dr. Milton Obote to come to attack Uganda," Amin said.

Steel Profit Drop

NEW YORK (UPI)—U.S. Steel Corp. says the 10-week long General Motors strike was the big factor in its profits dropping by $69.7 million compared with 1969.

Despite a slight gain in sales, the steel company said Tuesday its net income for 1970 amounted to $147.5 million, compared with $217.2 million the year before—a drop of 32 per cent.

Profits in the last three months of the year, the fourth quarter, dropped to $39 million from $66,322,000 in the same period in 1969. Steel shipments also declined from 22.4 million tons in 1969 to 21 million last year.

vored a Colonel Sanders outlet in Mill Valley.

"You just changed Michael's mind," said Chairman Louis H. Baar and Supervisor Michael Wornum did vote for the franchise.

The representative of Southern Marin on the board said he was at first inclined to go along with the Mill Valley City Council since it was "a freak of chance" that C's Drive-in is not in Mill Valley.

However, he said he changed his mind because the city council had approved two new drive-in restaurants in the past year, one only a block and a half from C's.

"I just don't see how in all conscience that I can vote against something that is wanted and needed by the people." he said.

Wornum, an architect, told Claxon, "Your product is fine, but your architecture is lousy."

In his motion to approve the use permit, Wornum tried to give power to veto the building's design to Mill Valley, but Richard V. Godino, assistant county counsel, said such abdication of authority would be illegal.

Godino said the final decision on the architecture of the building must rest with the county.

Although no design was offered yesterday, supervisors made it clear they won't accept the standard red and white structure with a chicken bucket rotating at the top of a tall pole and with the colonel's statue grinning in the window.

Wornum called it some of the worst architecture in America and Arnold M. Baptiste said, "I'm just sorry we didn't hold out like Mill Valley did."

Six Mill Valley residents were not as concerned about the design as they were about getting a Colonel Sanders outlet closer than San Rafael.

Mrs. Charles Zuffinetti of 9 Leyton Court said, "My husband, he is crazy about Colonel Sanders's chicken."

Others argued that the franchise would replace a hangout and provide variety from the string of hamburger drive-ins along Miller Avenue.

Arguing against the proposed use of the lot were Mrs. R. C. Mountjoy, a member of the architectural advisory committee and Robert E. Burton, chairman of the Mill Valley Planning Commission.

Burton, who had appealed staff approval of the use permit to the planning commission, argued that the Mill Valley master plan does not envision commercial use of the site.

Therefore, if the site were in Mill Valley proper, "this use permit would have been denied," Burton said.

The chairman of the architectural advisory committee, Kalvin Platt, wrote the board claiming there would be traffic congestion during commute hours, noise and litter, and the "corporate image building."

Claxon countered with figures he claimed proved there would be no traffic problem. He said the company would be willing to alter its design — a step it refused to take in the past.

Noise and litter would be reduced in comparison with the existing use, he said.

Supervisor John F. McInnis noted that the San Rafael branch seems to be neatly kept. During peak traffic hours in the afternoon, he said, it does not add to the congestion.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni said the lot has been commercially zoned since 1948 so the use would be consistent with past use.

Baar, summing up, said, "I think the people are saying that they want it there."

Four Fire Departments Sign Pact

Four fire departments have signed contracts with an Oakland firm which will prepare a study of fire department consolidation in Southern Marin, Carl H. Modell, chairman of the consolidation commission, announced today.

The four agencies participating are the Sausalito and Mill Valley departments, the Tamalpais Fire Protection District and the Marin County Fire Department (for Marin City and the Panoramic Highway areas.)

Modell said the firm of Gage, Babcock and Associates hope to complete the study and come up in June or July with "the most effective and best possible plan" to merge the fire agencies.

He said the consultants will survey fire protection facilities in Southern Marin and study consolidations in other areas and their effect on fire service and costs.

The company will also develop alternative plans for consolidation and a master plan for changes and additions to the current fire stations.

An estimate of the total cost of consolidation will be provided, as will a study of manpower requirements and an organizational plan for the new consolidated fire department, according to Modell.

ORDER

union officials urged thousands to come to San Rafael for a demonstration and that Goldberger had even warned there might be violence at the rally.

Furthermore, the I-J said that union members passed out handbills at colleges encouraging students to come to the demonstration.

During an early morning assault on the building, windows were broken and rocks, bolts, bottles and boards were thrown, and an I-J delivery truck was set afire.

After police arrived and circled the building, the demonstrators still continued to hurl objects at officers and refused repeatedly to disperse, the I-J said.

Earlier this month, a Solano County Superior Court jury found six men, including John J. DeMartini, a vice-president of the typographical union, guilty of a total of 18 criminal charges stemming from the Valentine's Day riot.

Seventeen persons, including three policemen were injured.

Keating ruled yesterday that the union and men had "engaged in combination and in concerted activity with each other and with others to violate the preliminary injunction."

The sections of the injunction violated, Keating said, were those limiting picketing at the I-J; preventing violence or threats of violence to the paper, its employees or customers, and preventing damage or destruction of I-J property or property of I-J employees.

Keating's order, which was issued in brief form yesterday, will be superseded by a formal order prepared by I-J attorneys. The formal order, on which a hearing will be held before it is signed by the judge, will specify when the fines are to be paid and the jail terms served.

Gary T. Giacomini, an I-J attorney, said the formal order would probably be submitted to the judge Friday.

Keating cleared six other organizations and individuals whom I-J attorneys had also charged were in contempt.

They are: Goldberger's drivers union; George Duncan, ITU international representative; DeMartini; Al Vergez, an officer of the drivers union; San Francisco and Marin County Central labor councils.

Keating's ruling was the second contempt order against the union in a week.

Last Friday, Judge William T. Sweigert of U.S. District Court in San Francisco, fined the typographical union and two teamsters unions $25,000 each for violating his orders against illegal secondary boycott activity aimed at I-J advertisers.

Abrams and two teamster officials were placed on a year's probation by Sweigert who found them guilty of criminal contempt.

PRICES

Commerce Department, is a statistical analysis of eight business indicators which usually point the way to future patterns in the economy.

The statistics bureau said the farm products index jump resulted largely from higher prices for fresh and dried vegetables and cattle. Live poultry and grain prices also went up, but prices for hogs, eggs and fresh fruit were down.

Prices of processed foods and fees advanced 1.1iper cent after three months of declines. The bureau said the increase resulted mainly from substantial price increases for meats and processed poultry.

property owners and boat owners affected by the spill. The company has announced a telephone number (894-3027) for persons wanting to make property damage claims.

Standard Oil and the Coast Guard reported very little oil left from the nine-day-old spill. Nearly three-fourths of the 800,000 gallons of goo that was lost has been recovered, the company said.

Despite Standard's reduction in cleanup operations, the Marin Ecology Center in Mill Valley said there was still a need for volunteers "no matter what Standard Oil says."

The Coast Guard theorized the remaining oil may have emulsified with seawater in subsurface Pacific Ocean currents, but Standard said it has been unable to find any underwater oil.

Greg Hewlett, a teacher aid at Bolinas School taking part in attempts to string a new boom across the lagoon entrance, reported today workers hoped to complete installation of the device by tomorrow.

He said Standard Oil, which previously had backed out of the operation, agreed to return with needed equipment and supplies as a result of a meeting among volunteers, a Standard Oil representative and county officials in West Marin last night.

Pierre W. Joske, county parks and recreation director, told the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday the battle to save the lagoon, a wildlife sanctuary, was far from over.

He said he saw more oil in the lagoon yesterday than before and urged the county to take over the cleanup operation. But the supervisors praised Standard Oil's mop-up efforts and said they would leave the job up to the company, with county officials keeping watch.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, yesterday toured the huge bird treatment center at the San Francisco zoo, where fowl plucked from oily waters are being cared for. Muskie held a bird in his hands and called the oil spill "a political issue."

Also yesterday, a task force of several federal and state agencies began a survey of affected areas to assure that "all public interests" are served in the cleanup, and Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, introduced in Sacramento a bill to permit closing of navigable waters during fog, much as airports are shut down.

LETTER

"Our complaints are as follows:

"1. Major General Putnam, First Cavalry Division commander, has forced us to close our enlisted men's club. Our club was closed because it sold beer and soft drinks. The proceeds from the club paid for what little entertainment we get and was spent only after approval of the club board of directors.

"2. We are not allowed to have alcoholic beverages of any kind. Other divisions have clubs that sell mixed drinks to their men and allow liquor in the billets. The First Cavalry Division is dry. With the unbelievable drug absue problem in Vietnam I cannot understand why the men here have to fight prohibition. Drugs are cheap and easy to get and the inability to have alcohol is in all likelihood going to turn many men to marijuana and even heroin.

"3. We are at all times restricted to the company compound. Other units allow the enlisted men to go into major villages and cities to unwind, but not the First Cavalry Division. We are allowed minimum contact with the Vietnamese people. We are allowed no cultural benefit.

"4. Sanitary conditions are deplorable. The dining area and billets we sleep in are infested with rats. The rats carry disease everywhere. Major General Putnam seems more concerned with our sobriety than our health because there is only minimal effort to control the rats. They are in our eating and sleeping areas and very often bite us while we sleep in our bunks.

"5. The food is so bad that men steal "C" rations rather than eat in the mess hall. Many men have become ill after eating in the mess hall. The food is very poor in quality and short in quantity.

"6. There is total and complete lack of privacy at all times, irregardless (sic) of whether materials are available to build rooms or not. Other units allow their men to have rooms but not the First Cavalry Division. A man can't even cry out his loneliness or fear without being humiliated in front of his friends.

"These may seem like trivial complaints to people living in the hygienic, orderly world of America, but to the men here they are real and important . . . Why can't the men of the First Cavalry Division, nicknamed the 'First Team' because it is America's finest defense force, be treated with the respect, trust and understanding that other divisions receive with lesser merits? Why do the men of the first team have to be treated like animals kept in a cage?"

HEARING

the other ship, also owned by Standard Oil.

Parnell said he had brought his ship through the Golden Gate perhaps 400 times. He did not deny awareness of the "merging" effect the big bridge has on radar images, an effect which canceled out the other ship's image on the screen.

A veteran of about 30 years at sea, Parnell said that after that image vanished, he had simply relied on his belief that the other ship was going to clear the bridge before his own shipped passed through in the dense fog.

Chief Mate Tetard, another longtime sailor who first went to sea in 1942, told how he had earlier followed the course of the Oregon Standard on the Arizona's radar, but then more or less gave up trying to locate it because he had "other problems."

Tetard worked with painful deliberation recreating the drawing of charts for the three Coast Guard officers seeking the cause of the crash. The task of redrawing the charts took so long that a recess was finally called.

In answer to questions from hearing officer Cmdr. Forrest E. Stewart, a lawyer who had conducted many Coast Guard investigations, Tetard admitted that he never tried to estimate the speed of the Oregon Standard.

"I assumed she was going the same speed we were," he said, referring to the 10-knot speed which Captain Parnell has said the Arizona Standard was maintaining in the heavy fog and darkness.

Tetard also testified that after he lost the Oregon Standard on his radar he busied himself with "directing our own course." He said he felt "it was vital" that the Arizona stay on "our own side of the bridge" — that is to the south end.

Like his captain, the first mate reacted to a call that there was a "red light" off the bow and looked out a port hole to find the sister ship within a few hundred yards.

"I don't think we were under the bridge yet," Tetard said about the point of collision.

Parnell had earlier testified that the point of impact was about 700 yards southwest of the center of the bridge.

The captain also said that his first concern was for fire when the collision occurred and that after he sounded the general alarm aboard his ship, his crew "responded well." Although the men quickly gathered fire extinguishing equipment, the vapors coming from the other ship turned out to be only from ruptured steam lines, he said.

There was a brief flurry yesterday in the courtroom in the federal building when two marshals ejected a television crew from Channel 7 because they had violated an order not to film while witnesses were testifying.

Gould had ordered that they not be allowed into the courtroom again after live portions of testimony were shown on television last night.

Bicycle Theft Suspect Booked

Michael A. Tournahu, 18, of 1217 Fourth Street, Novato, was arrested by Novato police at his home yesterday on suspicion of possession of stolen property.

Police said Tournahu had two bicycles, valued at $210, which where stolen in Novato earlier this month.

He was booked at Marin County Jail under $1,250 bail and scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court today.

POLICY

types of military personnel might soon be dispatched there.

In the first instance, military equipment delivery teams will be sent from Saigon to Cambodia to turn over various types of weapons to the Cambodians.

Defense Department press officer Jerry Friedheim outlined for newsmen Tuesday the functions of the delivery teams and said they might also make sure Cambodian forces know how to operate the equipment they are receiving.

Military specialists, however, insisted that this role was not that of an "adviser". In the strict definition of that term, an adviser actually accompanies local troops into combat and might become involved directly in hostilities, they said.

It was through the initial dispatching of "advisers" under President John F. Kennedy that the United States found itself slowly increasing its forces in South Vietnam.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers is expected to explain U.S. policy in Cambodia in greater detail when he appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday.

Meanwhile, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler repeated that administration policy remains in concert with the Cooper-Church amendment, passed by Congress late last year, which forbids the introduction of U.S. ground combat troops or advisers into Cambodia.

In a related development:

—The Pentagon said it "appears" that 15 to 20 U.S. personnel in civilian clothes were at the Phnom Penh airport to pick up a damaged helicopter. CBS reported Tuesday night that one of its film crews accidentally encountered the men, who it said were carrying weapons and wearing combat boots, but were dressed in "civies."

State Department officials said the activities of military delivery teams were being established by the Defense Department, the State Department, the U.S. Pacific Command and the U.S. Embassy in Phnom Penh.

State Department officials reported Emory C. Swank, the U.S. ambassador in Phnom Penh, was exercising his influence towards restricting the activities of the delivery teams which will be arriving from Saigon.

"You just changed Michael's mind," said Chairman Louis H. Baar and Supervisor Michael Wornum did vote for the franchise.

The representative of Southern Marin on the board said he was at first inclined to go along with the Mill Valley City Council since it was "a freak of chance" that C's Drive-in is not in Mill Valley.

However, he said he changed his mind because the city council had approved two new drive-in restaurants in the past year, one only a block and a half from C's.

"I just don't see how in all conscience that I can vote against something that is wanted and needed by the people." he said.

Wornum, an architect, told Claxon, "Your product is fine, but your architecture is lousy."

In his motion to approve the use permit, Wornum tried to give power to veto the building's design to Mill Valley, but Richard V. Godino, assistant county counsel, said such abdication of authority would be illegal.

Godino said the final decision on the architecture of the building must rest with the county.

Although no design was offered yesterday, supervisors made it clear they won't accept the standard red and white structure with a chicken bucket rotating at the top of a tall pole and with the colonel's statue grinning in the window.

Wornum called it some of the worst architecture in America and Arnold M. Baptiste said, "I'm just sorry we didn't hold out like Mill Valley did."

Six Mill Valley residents were not as concerned about the design as they were about getting a Colonel Sanders outlet closer than San Rafael.

Mrs. Charles Zuffinetti of 9 Leyton Court said, "My husband, he is crazy about Colonel Sanders's chicken."

Others argued that the franchise would replace a hangout and provide variety from the string of hamburger drive-ins along Miller Avenue.

Arguing against the proposed use of the lot were Mrs. R. C. Mountjoy, a member of the architectural advisory committee and Robert E. Burton, chairman of the Mill Valley Planning Commission.

Burton, who had appealed staff approval of the use permit to the planning commission, argued that the Mill Valley master plan does not envision commercial use of the site.

Therefore, if the site were in Mill Valley proper, "this use permit would have been denied," Burton said.

The chairman of the architectural advisory committee, Kalvin Platt, wrote the board claiming there would be traffic congestion during commute hours, noise and litter, and the "corporate image building."

Claxon countered with figures he claimed proved there would be no traffic problem. He said the company would be willing to alter its design — a step it refused to take in the past.

Noise and litter would be reduced in comparison with the existing use, he said.

Supervisor John F. McInnis noted that the San Rafael branch seems to be neatly kept. During peak traffic hours in the afternoon, he said, it does not add to the congestion.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni said the lot has been commercially zoned since 1948 so the use would be consistent with past use.

Baar, summing up, said, "I think the people are saying that they want it there."

ORDER

union officials urged thousands to come to San Rafael for a demonstration and that Goldberger had even warned there might be violence at the rally.

Furthermore, the I-J said that union members passed out handbills at colleges encouraging students to come to the demonstration.

During an early morning assault on the building, windows were broken and rocks, bolts, bottles and boards were thrown, and an I-J delivery truck was set afire.

After police arrived and circled the building, the demonstrators still continued to hurl objects at officers and refused repeatedly to disperse, the I-J said.

Earlier this month, a Solano County Superior Court jury found six men, including John J. DeMartini, a vice-president of the typographical union, guilty of a total of 18 criminal charges stemming from the Valentine's Day riot.

Seventeen persons, including three policemen were injured.

Keating ruled yesterday that the union and men had "engaged in combination and in concerted activity with each other and with others to violate the preliminary injunction."

The sections of the injunction violated, Keating said, were those limiting picketing at the I-J; preventing violence or threats of violence to the paper, its employees or customers, and preventing damage or destruction of I-J property or property of I-J employees.

Keating's order, which was issued in brief form yesterday, will be superseded by a formal order prepared by I-J attorneys. The formal order, on which a hearing will be held before it is signed by the judge, will specify when the fines are to be paid and the jail terms served.

Gary T. Giacomini, an I-J attorney, said the formal order would probably be submitted to the judge Friday.

Keating cleared six other organizations and individuals whom I-J attorneys had also charged were in contempt.

They are: Goldberger's drivers union; George Duncan, ITU international representative; DeMartini; Al Vergez, an officer of the drivers union; San Francisco and Marin County Central labor councils.

Keating's ruling was the second contempt order against the union in a week.

Last Friday, Judge William T. Sweigert of U.S. District Court in San Francisco, fined the typographical union and two teamsters unions $25,000 each for violating his orders against illegal secondary boycott activity aimed at I-J advertisers.

Abrams and two teamster officials were placed on a year's probation by Sweigert who found them guilty of criminal contempt.

Four Fire Departments Sign Pact

Four fire departments have signed contracts with an Oakland firm which will prepare a study of fire department consolidation in Southern Marin, Carl H. Modell, chairman of the consolidation commission, announced today.

The four agencies participating are the Sausalito and Mill Valley departments, the Tamalpais Fire Protection District and the Marin County Fire Department (for Marin City and the Panoramic Highway areas.)

Modell said the firm of Gage, Babcock and Associates hope to complete the study and come up in June or July with "the most effective and best possible plan" to merge the fire agencies.

He said the consultants will survey fire protection facilities in Southern Marin and study consolidations in other areas and their effect on fire service and costs.

The company will also develop alternative plans for consolidation and a master plan for changes and additions to the current fire stations.

An estimate of the total cost of consolidation will be provided, as will a study of manpower requirements and an organizational plan for the new consolidated fire department, according to Modell.

PRICES

Commerce Department, is a statistical analysis of eight business indicators which usually point the way to future patterns in the economy.

The statistics bureau said the farm products index jump resulted largely from higher prices for fresh and dried vegetables and cattle. Live poultry and grain prices also went up, but prices for hogs, eggs and fresh fruit were down.

Prices of processed foods and fees advanced 1.1iper cent after three months of declines. The bureau said the increase resulted mainly from substantial price increases for meats and processed poultry.

property owners and boat owners affected by the spill. The company has announced a telephone number (894-3027) for persons wanting to make property damage claims.

Standard Oil and the Coast Guard reported very little oil left from the nine-day-old spill. Nearly three-fourths of the 800,000 gallons of goo that was lost has been recovered, the company said.

Despite Standard's reduction in cleanup operations, the Marin Ecology Center in Mill Valley said there was still a need for volunteers "no matter what Standard Oil says."

The Coast Guard theorized the remaining oil may have emulsified with seawater in subsurface Pacific Ocean currents, but Standard said it has been unable to find any underwater oil.

Greg Hewlett, a teacher aid at Bolinas School taking part in attempts to string a new boom across the lagoon entrance, reported today workers hoped to complete installation of the device by tomorrow.

He said Standard Oil, which previously had backed out of the operation, agreed to return with needed equipment and supplies as a result of a meeting among volunteers, a Standard Oil representative and county officials in West Marin last night.

Pierre W. Joske, county parks and recreation director, told the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday the battle to save the lagoon, a wildlife sanctuary, was far from over.

He said he saw more oil in the lagoon yesterday than before and urged the county to take over the cleanup operation. But the supervisors praised Standard Oil's mop-up efforts and said they would leave the job up to the company, with county officials keeping watch.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, yesterday toured the huge bird treatment center at the San Francisco zoo, where fowl plucked from oily waters are being cared for. Muskie held a bird in his hands and called the oil spill "a political issue."

Also yesterday, a task force of several federal and state agencies began a survey of affected areas to assure that "all public interests" are served in the cleanup, and Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, introduced in Sacramento a bill to permit closing of navigable waters during fog, much as airports are shut down.

LETTER

"Our complaints are as follows:

"1. Major General Putnam, First Cavalry Division commander, has forced us to close our enlisted men's club. Our club was closed because it sold beer and soft drinks. The proceeds from the club paid for what little entertainment we get and was spent only after approval of the club board of directors.

"2. We are not allowed to have alcoholic beverages of any kind. Other divisions have clubs that sell mixed drinks to their men and allow liquor in the billets. The First Cavalry Division is dry. With the unbelievable drug absue problem in Vietnam I cannot understand why the men here have to fight prohibition. Drugs are cheap and easy to get and the inability to have alcohol is in all likelihood going to turn many men to marijuana and even heroin.

"3. We are at all times restricted to the company compound. Other units allow the enlisted men to go into major villages and cities to unwind, but not the First Cavalry Division. We are allowed minimum contact with the Vietnamese people. We are allowed no cultural benefit.

"4. Sanitary conditions are deplorable. The dining area and billets we sleep in are infested with rats. The rats carry disease everywhere. Major General Putnam seems more concerned with our sobriety than our health because there is only minimal effort to control the rats. They are in our eating and sleeping areas and very often bite us while we sleep in our bunks.

"5. The food is so bad that men steal "C" rations rather than eat in the mess hall. Many men have become ill after eating in the mess hall. The food is very poor in quality and short in quantity.

"6. There is total and complete lack of privacy at all times, irregardless (sic) of whether materials are available to build rooms or not. Other units allow their men to have rooms but not the First Cavalry Division. A man can't even cry out his loneliness or fear without being humiliated in front of his friends.

"These may seem like trivial complaints to people living in the hygienic, orderly world of America, but to the men here they are real and important . . . Why can't the men of the First Cavalry Division, nicknamed the 'First Team' because it is America's finest defense force, be treated with the respect, trust and understanding that other divisions receive with lesser merits? Why do the men of the first team have to be treated like animals kept in a cage?"

the other ship, also owned by Standard Oil.

Parnell said he had brought his ship through the Golden Gate perhaps 400 times. He did not deny awareness of the "merging" effect the big bridge has on radar images, an effect which canceled out the other ship's image on the screen.

A veteran of about 30 years at sea, Parnell said that after that image vanished, he had simply relied on his belief that the other ship was going to clear the bridge before his own shipped passed through in the dense fog.

Chief Mate Tetard, another longtime sailor who first went to sea in 1942, told how he had earlier followed the course of the Oregon Standard on the Arizona's radar, but then more or less gave up trying to locate it because he had "other problems."

Tetard worked with painful deliberation recreating the drawing of charts for the three Coast Guard officers seeking the cause of the crash. The task of redrawing the charts took so long that a recess was finally called.

In answer to questions from hearing officer Cmdr. Forrest E. Stewart, a lawyer who had conducted many Coast Guard investigations, Tetard admitted that he never tried to estimate the speed of the Oregon Standard.

"I assumed she was going the same speed we were," he said, referring to the 10-knot speed which Captain Parnell has said the Arizona Standard was maintaining in the heavy fog and darkness.

Tetard also testified that after he lost the Oregon Standard on his radar he busied himself with "directing our own course." He said he felt "it was vital" that the Arizona stay on "our own side of the bridge" — that is to the south end.

Like his captain, the first mate reacted to a call that there was a "red light" off the bow and looked out a port hole to find the sister ship within a few hundred yards.

"I don't think we were under the bridge yet," Tetard said about the point of collision.

Parnell had earlier testified that the point of impact was about 700 yards southwest of the center of the bridge.

The captain also said that his first concern was for fire when the collision occurred and that after he sounded the general alarm aboard his ship, his crew "responded well." Although the men quickly gathered fire extinguishing equipment, the vapors coming from the other ship turned out to be only from ruptured steam lines, he said.

There was a brief flurry yesterday in the courtroom in the federal building when two marshals ejected a television crew from Channel 7 because they had violated an order not to film while witnesses were testifying.

Gould had ordered that they not be allowed into the courtroom again after live portions of testimony were shown on television last night.

Bicycle Theft Suspect Booked

Michael A. Tournahu, 18, of 1217 Fourth Street, Novato, was arrested by Novato police at his home yesterday on suspicion of possession of stolen property.

Police said Tournahu had two bicycles, valued at $210, which where stolen in Novato earlier this month.

He was booked at Marin County Jail under $1,250 bail and scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court today.

types of military personnel might soon be dispatched there.

In the first instance, military equipment delivery teams will be sent from Saigon to Cambodia to turn over various types of weapons to the Cambodians.

Defense Department press officer Jerry Friedheim outlined for newsmen Tuesday the functions of the delivery teams and said they might also make sure Cambodian forces know how to operate the equipment they are receiving.

Military specialists, however, insisted that this role was not that of an "adviser". In the strict definition of that term, an adviser actually accompanies local troops into combat and might become involved directly in hostilities, they said.

It was through the initial dispatching of "advisers" under President John F. Kennedy that the United States found itself slowly increasing its forces in South Vietnam.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers is expected to explain U.S. policy in Cambodia in greater detail when he appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday.

Meanwhile, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler repeated that administration policy remains in concert with the Cooper-Church amendment, passed by Congress late last year, which forbids the introduction of U.S. ground combat troops or advisers into Cambodia.

In a related development:

—The Pentagon said it "appears" that 15 to 20 U.S. personnel in civilian clothes were at the Phnom Penh airport to pick up a damaged helicopter. CBS reported Tuesday night that one of its film crews accidentally encountered the men, who it said were carrying weapons and wearing combat boots, but were dressed in "civies."

State Department officials said the activities of military delivery teams were being established by the Defense Department, the State Department, the U.S. Pacific Command and the U.S. Embassy in Phnom Penh.

State Department officials reported Emory C. Swank, the U.S. ambassador in Phnom Penh, was exercising his influence towards restricting the activities of the delivery teams which will be arriving from Saigon.

Northgate Park Unit Is Approved

The San Rafael Planning Commission last night approved plans for a 14,465 square-foot commercial building in the Northgate Industrial Park for Ronald Antonioli.

Andre Bertauche of Novato, owner of property across from the proposed building site at 128-134 Carlos Drive, objected, claiming insufficient parking in the industrial park now.

The planning commission then instructed Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner to draw up some policy on future industrial parks so that they would have community parking and open spaces. No date was set on presenting the policy to the commission.

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

APARTMENTS — Approved plans for a 22-unit apartment building at 1428 Mission Avenue for Roland Johnson. These identical plans had been approved in 1969 but the approval expired before construction.

OFFICE BUILDING — Approved plans for a 7,200-square-foot, two-story office building at 818 Fifth Avenue for Robert H. Greene.

SCHOOL — Postponed until its Feb. 8 meeting a use permit for a pre-school school at the Methodist Church at 9 Ross Valley Drive.

RENEWALS — Renewed for one year, use permits for the construction yard of Holiday Magic at 2155 Francisco Boulevard and storage area for Quin Ongaro at 1625 Francisco Boulevard.

LOT SPLIT — Approved a lot split at 1747 Lincoln Avenue for Carlo Gnemmi. The upper 8,947 lot on Prospect Drive would be for a single-family dwelling and the lower 35,605 square feet on Lincoln Avenue would be used for multiple family development.

SETBACKS — Approved a setback within 13 feet where 25 feet is required for Peter C. Haywood at 208 Bret Harte Road, and 20.5 foot setbacks for five lots on Esmeyer Drive for Alameda Homes Corp.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. next Monday to take up the housing element in the general plan.

Pepperland Wins Year's Use Permit

Pepparland, San Rafael's rock concert hall, was granted a year's use permit last night by the San Rafael Planning Commission.

The commission granted the permit by a 5-1 vote with commissioner James Dougan against. The permit has a list of attached conditions for the property at 751 Francisco Boulevard.

The use permit may be appealed by anyone within five days, or until 5 p.m. Friday, said Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner. It would then have to go before the city council, he said.

Among the conditions of the permit are: curbs, gutter and sidewalk be installed on Francisco Boulevard; a limit of 3,000 persons in the building at one time; an overhead sprinklar system be installed; a largar airicirculaling system be added and more adequate exits made into the building.

Benjamin Blatt, owner of the concession, agreed to the conditions. He said he had 10 to 20 private guards at each performance. He agreed to furnish a guard for Bellach's Furniture Co. at 777 Francisco Boulevard, which complained about patrons of Pepperland using its parking lot before it closed at 9 p.m. Fridays.

"I'm real happy and I want to thank the commission," Blatt said after its aclion.

The only other complaint was made by W. C. McGarvey, owner of five commercialproperties and 11 aparlments at 32-38 Front Street. He complained of palrons of Pepperland using foul languaga and taking up the parking placas for his aparlments.

Although there were about 30 young people in the audience, James Lehman of Lagunitas was the only one who spoke in favor of the permit.

"It is a fine thing for Marin County to have a safe placa for the young people to enjoy their own music," he said.

The commission discussion centered around the cost of having to put in all the improvements if it granted only a six months use permit as recommended by Hotchner.

Hotchner said he had visited the area and counted about 600 cars during a performance. He thought that the area could handle about 1,000 cars.

On his recommendation, the commission granted a variance from the required 88 off-street parking placas based on the square footage of the building. It now has 20, Hotchner reported.

Rights Panel Will Consider Reorganization

Marin Human Rights commissioners will meet tomorrow night to consider a reorganization because the present system of miniboards is not effective.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the San Rafael High School cafeteria.

D. Curt Moody, executive director, said he will propose that an advisory body of 10 citizens be appointed from each of the five supervisorial districts as liaison between various communities and the human rights commission.

Also on tomorrow's agenda is discussion of Bella Aaron's letter of resignation from the commission.

Mrs. Aaron resigned with a blast at her fellow commissioners.

School Association To Hear Naturalist

Naturalist Clerin W. Zumwalt of the Audubon Canyon Ranch will address the Marin County School Boards Association Thursday at 8 p.m. at the county schools office in Corte Madera.

Zumwalt will speak on the "Ecological Environment or Where did all the Birds Go?"

Fireman Larry Salarpi (left) and Charles Ralston of the Corte Madera Fire Department gauge the pressure during an acceptance check of a newly installed hydrant on Casa Buena Drive. The hydrant, installed last week near Marin Joe's Restaurant in the recently annexed Meadowsweet Drive area, reportedly will reduce fire insurance premiums for property owners by about 50 per cent.

Northgate Park Unit Is Approved

The San Rafael Planning Commission last night approved plans for a 14,465 square-foot commercial building in the Northgate Industrial Park for Ronald Antonioli.

Andre Bertauche of Novato, owner of property across from the proposed building site at 128-134 Carlos Drive, objected, claiming insufficient parking in the industrial park now.

The planning commission then instructed Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner to draw up some policy on future industrial parks so that they would have community parking and open spaces. No date was set on presenting the policy to the commission.

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

APARTMENTS — Approved plans for a 22-unit apartment building at 1428 Mission Avenue for Roland Johnson. These identical plans had been approved in 1969 but the approval expired before construction.

OFFICE BUILDING — Approved plans for a 7,200-square-foot, two-story office building at 818 Fifth Avenue for Robert H. Greene.

SCHOOL — Postponed until its Feb. 8 meeting a use permit for a pre-school school at the Methodist Church at 9 Ross Valley Drive.

RENEWALS — Renewed for one year, use permits for the construction yard of Holiday Magic at 2155 Francisco Boulevard and storage area for Quin Ongaro at 1625 Francisco Boulevard.

LOT SPLIT — Approved a lot split at 1747 Lincoln Avenue for Carlo Gnemmi. The upper 8,947 lot on Prospect Drive would be for a single-family dwelling and the lower 35,605 square feet on Lincoln Avenue would be used for multiple family development.

SETBACKS — Approved a setback within 13 feet where 25 feet is required for Peter C. Haywood at 208 Bret Harte Road, and 20.5 foot setbacks for five lots on Esmeyer Drive for Alameda Homes Corp.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. next Monday to take up the housing element in the general plan.

Warrant Issued For Corte Maderan

Judge E. Warren McGuire issued the warrant when Luchessi, who is also known as Tony Corbello, failed to appear Monday to enter a plea to charges of burglarizing and concealing property stolen from a Kentfield residence Nov. 3.

Pepperland Wins Year's Use Permit

Pepparland, San Rafael's rock concert hall, was granted a year's use permit last night by the San Rafael Planning Commission.

The commission granted the permit by a 5-1 vote with commissioner James Dougan against. The permit has a list of attached conditions for the property at 751 Francisco Boulevard.

The use permit may be appealed by anyone within five days, or until 5 p.m. Friday, said Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner. It would then have to go before the city council, he said.

Among the conditions of the permit are: curbs, gutter and sidewalk be installed on Francisco Boulevard; a limit of 3,000 persons in the building at one time; an overhead sprinklar system be installed; a largar airicirculaling system be added and more adequate exits made into the building.

Benjamin Blatt, owner of the concession, agreed to the conditions. He said he had 10 to 20 private guards at each performance. He agreed to furnish a guard for Bellach's Furniture Co. at 777 Francisco Boulevard, which complained about patrons of Pepperland using its parking lot before it closed at 9 p.m. Fridays.

"I'm real happy and I want to thank the commission," Blatt said after its aclion.

The only other complaint was made by W. C. McGarvey, owner of five commercialiproperties and 11 aparlments at 32-38 Front Street. He complained of palrons of Pepperland using foul languaga and taking up the parking placas for his aparlments.

Although there were about 30 young people in the audience, James Lehman of Lagunitas was the only one who spoke in favor of the permit.

"It is a fine thing for Marin County to have a safe placa for the young people to enjoy their own music," he said.

The commission discussion centered around the cost of having to put in all the improvements if it granted only a six months use permit as recommended by Hotchner.

Hotchner said he had visited the area and counted about 600 cars during a performance. He thought that the area could handle about 1,000 cars.

On his recommendation, the commission granted a variance from the required 88 off-street parking placas based on the square footage of the building. It now has 20, Hotchner reported.

Rights Panel Will Consider Reorganization

Marin Human Rights commissioners will meet tomorrow night to consider a reorganization because the present system of miniboards is not effective.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the San Rafael High School cafeteria.

D. Curt Moody, executive director, said he will propose that an advisory body of 10 citizens be appointed from each of the five supervisorial districts as liaison between various communities and the human rights commission.

Also on tomorrow's agenda is discussion of Bella Aaron's letter of resignation from the commission.

Mrs. Aaron resigned with a blast at her fellow commissioners.

School Association To Hear Naturalist

Naturalist Clerin W. Zumwalt of the Audubon Canyon Ranch will address the Marin County School Boards Association Thursday at 8 p.m. at the county schools office in Corte Madera.

Zumwalt will speak on the "Ecological Environment or Where did all the Birds Go?"

Public Hearing Set On Police Tax Plan

The controversial county service area for police services, a proposal which is bitterly opposed by the unincorporated areas, will get a public hearing before the Marin County Board of Supervisors at 3:30 p.m. on Feb. 23.

Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday set the time for public hearing and announced that the door into the Civic Center Administration Building will be kept open until 6 p.m. that night. All doors at the Civic Center now close at 5 p.m. for security reasons.

The county service area for police services would include all areas patrolled by the sheriff's department. The cities want the county service area established so that communities that want more sheriff's patrols than they now get will pay for that added service.

At present, taxpayers throughout the county, including city residents who pay for their own city police, share the cost of the sheriff's patrols equally.

Marin County Board of Supervisors also:

ABATEMENT — Ordered the abatement of a dilapidated houseboat owned by Mrs. Ernest Beyer of Novato in Richardson Bay at Gate 6½. Last Oct. 20, supervisors gave Mrs. Beyer 60 days to repair the houseboat to county standards or face demolition.

TRANSIT — Decided to discuss the Golden Gate Bridge District's five proposals for rapid transit at next Tuesday's meeting of the Marin County Transit District board of directors.

REAGAN VETO — Voted 4 to 1 to ask the National Office of Economic Opportunity to overrule Governor Reagan's veto of $2 million in funds to the California Rural Legal Assistance. John F. McInnis, lone dissenter, said he voted "no" only because he did not have enough information to make a decision.

HAMILTON FIELD — Got a recommendation from Benjamin R. Ostlind of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce that the county unite behind a master plan for future full development of Hamilton Field for civilian use. Ostlind warned the air base may close next year, but supervisors said information from Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First Dis- and the Marin Aviation Commission indicate otherwise.

AUDITORIUM — Awarded these contracts for furnishings for the Veterans Memorial Auditorium at the Civic Center: Additional stage rigging to be installed by Stage Craft Industries for $4,400; motorized movable wall to be built between the theater seats and the flat floor area by L. W. Aubry Engineering for $19,578; and a three-year lease on the sound system to be provided by General Electronics for $607.49 per month.

DRYDOCKS — Asked County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney to try again to get the U. S. Army Engineers to remove the huge drydocks that are mired in county waters off Sausalito as a navigation hazard. If the Army will not do it, McInnis said he prefers burning the drydocks at a cost of about $40,000, much less expensive than the $75,000 to $100,000 it would cost to dismantle the drydocks.

FOSTER HOMES — Decided to continue licensing foster homes in Marin after being told by Betty L. Presley, director of county public social services, that the State Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation is unable to run fingerprint checks on foster home applicants because of a cutback in CII personnel. The board decided the need for homes was too great to brook delay and asked Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos to make security checks.

CLAIM — Rejected a claim by George M. Goulart of 4135 Bod-Avenue, Petaluma, who is asking $150,614 damages from the county and $50,614 from Constable Michael McLean. Goulart charges he was falsely arrested Nov. 29, 1969.

TOPOGRAPHIC STUDY — Agreed to pay $630 to Gerson/Overstreet of San Francisco for a topographical study of the plalnned site of the new Marin City Fire Station.) FIRE CONSOLIDATION STUDY — Agreed to contract with Gage-Babcock and Associates to study the feasibility of consolidating Southern Marin fire districts. Cost to the county will be $310.

PARKING MARKS — Passed an ordinance making it punishable by a $25 fine to remove traffic officers' chalk marks from the tires of parked vehicles.

CHILD DEVELOPMENT — Agreed to a contract with the Marin Child Development Center to provide psychiatric day care services to young children at a cost not to exceed $30,000 for the fiscal year.

POLICE RELATIONS — Authorized a renewal application for funds for the Marin Police-Community Relations Program for fiscal 1971-72.

FLOOD AND MUDSLIDE — Authorized application to the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for subsidized flood and mudslide insurance.

WELFARE STUDY — Put over one week approval of a proposed contract for Corey, Canapary and Galanis to study the effectiveness of the Department of Public Social Services. Although the state is to pay for the study, Supervisor Louis H. Baar said he would oppose it. The board therefore put the matter over to allow department director Betty L. Presley to explain the study.

ROSS — Delayed one week approving a right-of-way contract with the Town of Ross to see if the town will commit the money received to auxiliary flood problems. Supervisor Peter R. arrigoni said that since Ross required additional flood relief work as a condition of the Corte Madera Flood Control Project, the right-of-way funds should be used for that added work.

Giant Orange Juice Purchase Is Announced

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Agriculture Department has announced purchase of nearly 2.7 million gallons of frozen concentrated orange juice for school lunch rooms and other child nutrition programs.

The $5.1 million purchase program announced Tuesday was launched before the recent Florida freeze. It had been designed to help growers who have difficulties in marketing this year's big orange crop. Officials said there were no plans "at this time" for further purchases.

The purchases were made from one bidder in California and seven Florida bidders out of a total of 26 suppliers who offered a total of 19.2 million gallons of concentrated juice. A total of 2.7 million actually was purchased.

Phnom Penh Quiet, Solemn For Buddhist Chief's Rites

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—The Cambodian capital remained quiet today for solemn and elaborate funeral services for a Buddhist leader, but fighting was reported 18 miles south of the city where a Cambodian relief force that included 12 and 15-year-old boys was rushing to help.

American and South Vietnamese forces ended a 24-hour Tet lunar New Year truce in neighboring South Vietnam today and military spokesmen said it was violated 37 times by the Communists. A four-day Communist cease-fire remained in effect.

The Cambodian military remained on alert and the civilian population was tense because of the possibility of a Communist offensive during the three-day Chinese New Year, or Tet, starting today. But by nightfall there had been none of the terrorist bomb attacks of the past five days.

The Tet holidays coincide with three days of solemn Buddhist ceremonies culminating in the cremation of Huot Tath, the former chief Cambodian monk. Tanks guarded street corners and scores of blocks were cordoned off as Premier Lon Nol and Maj. Gen. Sisowath Sirikmatak joined the funeral procession.

Just 18 miles to the south two battles were reported near the beleaguered government outpost of Saang.

Reporters near Saang said a Cambodian column moved south today toward the town and that extremely young Cambodians were in the front lines.

There was no word from the high command late today on the progress of a new, large scale Cambodian army operation aimed at clearing areas west and northwest of the capital where Communists have been reported massing for a possible attack on Phnom Penh.

No major engagements were reported during the Tet truce in South Vietnam.

Vote Snafu Puts Man In, Then Out

San Rafael mortgage broker Richard Oesterman was appointed to the Marin County Personnel Commission yesterday morning, then later replaced by incumbent Robert B. McCreadie because a county supervisor said he voted for Oesterman on a misunderstanding.

McCreadie, whose term expired last Friday, was willing to accept reappointment for four more years, until Jan. 22, 1975. Supervisor Michael Wornum said he didn't realize McCreadie was willing to continue on the personnel commission and voted with John F. McInnis and Louis H. Baar for Oesterman during the morning session.

At 5:15 p.m. Wornum asked for reconsideration, explaining his misunderstanding, and voted for McCreadie. This reinstalled McCreadie by 3-to-2 vote, with McInnis and Baar dissenting.

"I didn't realize Mr. McCreadie was being dropped when he wanted to continue on," said Wornum. "I'll apologize to Mr. Oesterman publicly for this."

The supervisors also reappointed Herber C. Leney to the county parks and recreation commission as a representative from the fourth supervisorial district, replacing Lothar Salin, who did not want reappointment. Leney, already on the commission, was a representative from the second supervisorial district.

This leaves two more posts open on the parks and recreation commission. They are the representative from the second district, and another from the third district, where Helen E. Newman retired.

Supervisors voted a letter of commendation to Bella Aaron, who resigned from the Marin Human Rights Commission with a blast at fellow commissioners. She charged that the commission work has been dismal and ineffective, and the commissioners discriminated against her because she tried to do an effective job.

West Marin Density To Be Reviewed

The density of 1.5 dwelling units per acre in West Marin, adopted by the Marin County Board of Supervisors in 1967 by 3-to-2 vote, will be reviewed again sometime after the budget sessions next June for a possible lowering of density. (Another supervisors story, page 1.)

On a motion by Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste, the Marin County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously yesterday to decide at budget time whether the county planning department should review the West Marin density.

Supervisor Michael Wornum declared that a review of West Marin density is in order because two things have happened since the previous board of supervisors set the density of 1.15 units per acre.

Not only has the membership on the board of Supervisors changed but also the regional plan by the Association of Bay Area Governments shows far less density, said Wornum.

Chairman Louis H. Baar wanted to make sure that residents of West Marin are notified about the review of density.

On a suggestion by Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., the supervisors decided to wait until budget time before asking the county planning department to re-study the density.

The West Marin denisty question arose during a discussion of the countywide general plan, which County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell hopes to complete by mid-1972.

Von Gundell said he is working on major components of the countywide general plan, including studies and reports on tourism potential, housing, and environmental qualities.

Supervisors approved an $8,500 outlay to complete those components, if the department of Housing and Urban Development, which helps finance the studies, would extend the completion date from April 5 to Aug. 5.

Supervisors also voted a go-ahead for completion of the Marin City planning program, which is also aided by HUD funds. They asked the county administrator to see whether consulting firms, which will make the $30,000 Marin City study, will wait for payment until after HUD reimbursements arrive.

IRS Commissioner Will Leave Panel

Thrower was appointed Commissioner on March 28, 1969. President Nixon told Thrower "the exceptionally dedicated service you have given to our country merits the gratitude of all your fellow citizens."

West Marin Density To Be Reviewed

The density of 1.5 dwelling units per acre in West Marin, adopted by the Marin County Board of Supervisors in 1967 by 3-to-2 vote, will be reviewed again sometime after the budget sessions next June for a possible lowering of density. (Another supervisors story, page 1.)

On a motion by Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste, the Marin County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously yesterday to decide at budget time whether the county planning department should review the West Marin density.

Supervisor Michael Wornum declared that a review of West Marin density is in order because two things have happened since the previous board of supervisors set the density of 1.15 units per acre.

Not only has the membership on the board of Supervisors changed but also the regional plan by the Association of Bay Area Governments shows far less density, said Wornum.

Chairman Louis H. Baar wanted to make sure that residents of West Marin are notified about the review of density.

On a suggestion by Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., the supervisors decided to wait until budget time before asking the county planning department to re-study the density.

The West Marin denisty question arose during a discussion of the countywide general plan, which County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell hopes to complete by mid-1972.

Von Gundell said he is working on major components of the countywide general plan, including studies and reports on tourism potential, housing, and environmental qualities.

Supervisors approved an $8,500 outlay to complete those components, if the department of Housing and Urban Development, which helps finance the studies, would extend the completion date from April 5 to Aug. 5.

Supervisors also voted a go-ahead for completion of the Marin City planning program, which is also aided by HUD funds. They asked the county administrator to see whether consulting firms, which will make the $30,000 Marin City study, will wait for payment until after HUD reimbursements arrive.

Two Transit Proposals Are Backed

The staff reported that the dual system would offer the most benefits to Novato, and the busway appeared to be the most feasible economically, so these two systems should be preferred.

Novato Endorses Span's Proposed Transit System

Novato City Council last night endorsed the Golden Gate Bridge District's proposed busway transportation system for the Golden Gate Corridor, San Francisco to Novato.

After a review of the bridge's district's various plans including rapid transit and a combination of rapid transit and busway, the council gave first priority to the busway.

Councilman George C. Quesada said the proposed busway "would be the best interim solution" but wouldn't be the ultimate solution to the transportation problem.

Councilmen agreed that the busway terminal should be in downtown Novato, rather than at Rowland Avenue as shown in the bridge district's plan.

The city planning staff recommended endorsement of both the busway plan and the district's fifth alternate, a combination rapid and busway system.

The dual proposal called for a bus line between San Rafael and San Francisco and a rapid transit System in Richmond, across to San Rafael and then northward to Novato.

The Novato City Council also:

ASSISTANT — Heard that Rodney B. Brown, administrative assistant with the City of Berkeley, will become the city's first administrative assistant Feb. 16 at a salary of $988 a month. There were 61 applicants for the job.

VOLUNTEERS COMMENDED — Commended Novato residents who volunteered to work in the oil spill disaster in San Francisco Bay, and authorized a letter of commendation to Peter K. Pilaski of the A and W Root Beer outlet at the Nave Shopping Center, for delivering 280 hamburgers, 20 gallons of root beer, five gallons of coffee, 20 pounds of french fried potatoes and two gallons of orange drink to volunteers at Bolinas Beach.

NOVATO SQUARE — Approved amendments to the master plan for Novato Square, east of Highway 101, between Grant and DeLong avenues, which require a use permit for all food dispensing businesses. Councilman Joseph D. Gargiulo abstained. Developer Ben R. Ostlind of San Rafael filed a letter of protest saying any change in the plan would deprive property owners of rights.

NOVATO BOULEVARD — Passed an ordinance to annex 65.5 acres north of Novato Boulevard, west of the city limits.

RANCHO VILLAGE — Passed an ordinance rezoning 12.5 acres in Rancho Village Unit 10 from limited agricultural to single family residential.

WILSON AVENUE — Referred back to the city planning commission an ordinance to zone a nine-acre parcel on the east side of Wilson Avenue, opposite Sinaloa Junior High School, for planned residential development with a density of one unit per 20,000 square feet. The vote was 4-1 with Quesada dissenting. A motion to adopt the ordinance was defeated by a 3-2 vote, with Quesada and F. Wayne Sartain for adoption.

BOLLING DRIVE — Approved annexation of 6,000 square feet at the northeast and southeast corner of Bolling and Nave drives to the city.

PARKING LIMIT — Approved a 20-minute parking limit on the south side of Vineyard Road, in front of Sinaloa Junior High School, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays and Holidays.

STREET FUNDS — Heard a report from Public Works Director Clifford E. Temps that $60,000 in Marin County urban thoroughfare funds was available for revamping of the Novato Boulevard-Diable Avenue intersection, and authorized application for $70,000 in federal funds.

SIDEWALK — Ordered construction of a sidewalk along the south side Ignacio Boulevard, between Alameda Del Prado and Highway 101, a stretch heavily used by commuters walking to a bus stop.

The term Feudal Ages refers to the years 900-1300.

Master Plan For Big Housing Development Is Given Approval

The Novato City Council last night approved a master plan for development of 528 housing units, townhouses and apartments, northwest of Highway 101 and South Novato Boulevard.

The vote was 4-1 with Councilman George C. Quesada dissenting.

The plan by McKeon Construction Co. is for 204 townhouse units, 324 apartment units, six acres of commercial development and 21.8 acres of open space.

The property was designated in the Novato General Plan as a location for a sub-regional shopping center but the city is now considering a major shopping center in the dowtown area.

The council deleted a condition that access to the southern portion of the development be from Redwood Boulevard rather than South Novato Boulevard.

The developer is bound to provide a school site in the area, if a school is needed there.

The council also was alerted by City Mgr. Charles A. Brown that the Marin CountyiPlanning Commission's recommendation on development at Ignacio Industrial Park could be in contradiction to the city's proposed downtown plan.

The county planners voted Monday that offices, banks and retail stores be permitted on about 30 acres of the 250-acre park, along Bel Marin Keys Boulevard. In contrast, the Novato planning staff has urged that office use be restricted to six acres, contending that extensive office space at the industrial park, would hinder the goal of the city's plan for office use in downtown Novato.

Edwin V. Grundstrom of Soiland and Associates of Bel Marin Keys, the developers, said: "We're not out to kill the downtown plan and we don't think the city is out to kill our industrial park."

The council agreed to adjourn until next Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Novato Community House to discuss the industrial park proposal.

New Structure Wins Approval

Peter B. Haywood may build a house and garage at 100 Geldert Drive in Tiburon, the city's board of adjustments and design review board have decided.

The groups met together Monday and approved the design of the structures and a variance to allow what first was planned as a carport to be built four-and-a-half feet into the required 14-foot front yard setback.

Philemon V. Scott, development administrator, said the board of adjustments established one condition, that Haywood completely enclose the carport to make it a garage.

Additional $2,500 To Linear Fund

Receipt of an additional $2,500 in "after the goal" contributions toward purchase of a linear accelerator for Marin General Hospital was reported today by Mrs. Walter G. Strauss, campaign chairman.

The $50,000 sought in the drive already had been turned over to Marin Hospital District. Ray K. Bolinger, hospital administrator, said the additional $2,500 will reduce the amount to be spent from the hospital's depreciation fund in paying for the cancer treatment device.

Included in the $2,500, said Mrs. Strauss, was a contribution from three young people who turned over their Christmas gift money to the campaign.

Glenn Nichols, 20, and his sisters Leslie, 22, and Lynn, 16, gave $30 they had planned to use for Christmas presents for each other and for their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nichols of 30 Graceland Drive, San Rafael.

Hub Council Delays On Written Discussion Policy

The San Anselmo City Council agreed last night that the public should be allowed to speak on agenda items at council meetings but failed in several attempts to put the policy into writing.

After more than an hour of discussion, councilmen finally decided to strike from the bottom of the evening's agenda a note that discussion was limited to items listed as public hearings.

It was this note, which appeared for the first time on last night's agenda by order of Mayor James F. Reed, that prompted Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro to ask the council to define its policy on public discussion at meetings.

Although in agreement to strike a note reading "Unless an item is listed as a public hearing, the item is for council discussion and/or action," councilmen could come to no consensus on a written policy.

They finally agreed to look at policies at a future meeting.

Councilmen earlier heard several members of the small audience speak against any attempt to halt public discussion. One woman, Cynthia Barrows, said, "It's the duty of the council to listen to the public. Efficiency is not the first consideration at these meetings."

Judy Ainsworth, of 1635 San Anselmo Avenue, representing the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, read a statement criticizing the council for not acting "within the spirit of the law."

"It is our sincere hope," she said, "that if interested citizens of the community wish to speak on any item of interest to them, that the San Anselmo City Council will afford them, for a reasonable period of time, not the privilege, but the right to do so."

Another resident, David E. Bacigalupi Jr., of 56 Alder Avenue, read a list of suggestions on how to streamline meetings and yet retain public participation. His points included starting meetings a half hour earlier, putting items of widest interest high on the agenda, and distributing to audience members a list of pointers on how to speed up their presentations.

He also suggested the councilmen limit their own discussion.

After some parliamentary maneuvering and a few false starts, the council voted unanimously to remove the paragraph from the agenda and adopt a written policy at a later meeting.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

LOT SPLIT — Approved a three-lot subdivision for a parcel at 50 Park Way owned by Otto H. Poehlmann.

CREEK — Declared sewer lines in Sleepy Hollow Creek to be a public nuisance and ordered them abated.

POLICE — Accepted the resignation of Sgt. Richard B. Standridge from the police force and hired Louis Landini as a probationary officer at a monthly salary of $767. The council also authorized an examination to be given for the post of sergeant.

PARKING — Denied a variance to Betty Kaplun to allow a parking space within the required sideyard setback at 19 Carolina Avenue.

RECREATION — Stated its policy not to conduct recreation activities outside the city.

ZONING — Appointed John A. Levo Jr., of 16 Fairview Court, to the citizens committee on zoning.

STREETS — Heard Reed announce a vacancy on the city's streets and traffic committee and ask persons interested in the post to submit their names.

PARK — Invited Ribera and Sue, an Oakland planning firm, to present a proposal to the city council on development of Robson-Harrington Park.

FUND — Heard on first reading an ordinance establishing a fund for capital improvements.

'All Geared To Go' With North Campus But No Funds

"We're all geared up to go" on the north campus "except we don't have any money," Marin Junior College District trustee Theodore C. Wellman said last night.

Wellman and trustees Elizabeth M. Deedy and Donald K. Felt spent considerable time worrying whether delays in state matching funds would upset the district timetable to have the north campus in Novato ready for at least 1,162 students by September 1974. Last night's special meeting was a workshop on the status of plans for the campus.

John A. Grasham, district superintendent-president, warned that California's community colleges had requested $80 million in the 1972-73 state budget, but that the chancellor's office predicted only $30 million will be available. Graham said he had talked to the chancellor's office in Sacramento yesterday but "we have no official response. I'll be calling again."

He explained that the chancellor's office is preparing budget requests for the state Department of Finance. "By April, we'll know whether the chancellor's office will support our request. If they don't, the district is dead for at least another year" on getting the north campus ready, he said.

Mrs. Deedy warned that the state budget could have an adverse effect on voter response to the $16,920,000 bond issue on the April 20 college district ballot, to help finance north campus work.

In other discussion, Dale E. Fleming, district director of planning, reviewed the extensive timetable for north campus plans and outlined proposed space allocations staffing needs.

His report included a mass of data submitted with applications for state funding, but no actual drawings of the future campus.

He said the proposals are based on the concept of creating up to seven "inner colleges" each with up to 750 students.

Central facilities serving all the students should include a library — Fleming called for 4,000 volumes to start, building up to 34,000 volumes — a bookstore, a cafeteria and other items.

He said staffing requirements would be nearly the same whether the campus featured the traditional departments, or the inner college concept.

13 Miners Killed

KLERKSDORP, South Africa (UPI)—An underground fire killed 13 African miners and injured 14 others Tuesday in the Zandpan mine near here.

Mail Rate Hike Vote By Panel

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The board of governors of the new U.S. Postal Service has voted to request increases in mail rates.

Although the exact increases were not spelled out, it is likely it will cost 8 cents to mail a first class letter, beginning probably about mid-May.

The board Tuesday simply authorized the service to propose to the independent five-member Rate Commission a "recommended rate package." But Postmaster General Winton M. Blount has indicated for some time he would ask for a 33 1-3 per cent across-the-board increase.

A spokesman said the rate increase was expected to be submitted next week, which would mean the earliest possible date of implementation would be in mid-May.

Hub Council Delays On Written Discussion Policy

The San Anselmo City Council agreed last night that the public should be allowed to speak on agenda items at council meetings but failed in several attempts to put the policy into writing.

After more than an hour of discussion, councilmen finally decided to strike from the bottom of the evening's agenda a note that discussion was limited to items listed as public hearings.

It was this note, which appeared for the first time on last night's agenda by order of Mayor James F. Reed, that prompted Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro to ask the council to define its policy on public discussion at meetings.

Although in agreement to strike a note reading "Unless an item is listed as a public hearing, the item is for council discussion and/or action," councilmen could come to no consensus on a written policy.

They finally agreed to look at policies at a future meeting.

Councilmen earlier heard several members of the small audience speak against any attempt to halt public discussion. One woman, Cynthia Barrows, said, "It's the duty of the council to listen to the public. Efficiency is not the first consideration at these meetings."

Judy Ainsworth, of 1635 San Anselmo Avenue, representing the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, read a statement criticizing the council for not acting "within the spirit of the law."

"It is our sincere hope," she said, "that if interested citizens of the community wish to speak on any item of interest to them, that the San Anselmo City Council will afford them, for a reasonable period of time, not the privilege, but the right to do so."

Another resident, David E. Bacigalupi Jr., of 56 Alder Avenue, read a list of suggestions on how to streamline meetings and yet retain public participation. His points included starting meetings a half hour earlier, putting items of widest interest high on the agenda, and distributing to audience members a list of pointers on how to speed up their presentations.

He also suggested the councilmen limit their own discussion.

After some parliamentary maneuvering and a few false starts, the council voted unanimously to remove the paragraph from the agenda and adopt a written policy at a later meeting.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

LOT SPLIT — Approved a three-lot subdivision for a parcel at 50 Park Way owned by Otto H. Poehlmann.

CREEK — Declared sewer lines in Sleepy Hollow Creek to be a public nuisance and ordered them abated.

POLICE — Accepted the resignation of Sgt. Richard B. Standridge from the police force and hired Louis Landini as a probationary officer at a monthly salary of $767. The council also authorized an examination to be given for the post of sergeant.

PARKING — Denied a variance to Betty Kaplun to allow a parking space within the required sideyard setback at 19 Carolina Avenue.

RECREATION — Stated its policy not to conduct recreation activities outside the city.

ZONING — Appointed John A. Levo Jr., of 16 Fairview Court, to the citizens committee on zoning.

STREETS — Heard Reed announce a vacancy on the city's streets and traffic committee and ask persons interested in the post to submit their names.

PARK — Invited Ribera and Sue, an Oakland planning firm, to present a proposal to the city council on development of Robson-Harrington Park.

FUND — Heard on first reading an ordinance establishing a fund for capital improvements.

'All Geared To Go' With North Campus But No Funds

"We're all geared up to go" on the north campus "except we don't have any money," Marin Junior College District trustee Theodore C. Wellman said last night.

Wellman and trustees Elizabeth M. Deedy and Donald K. Felt spent considerable time worrying whether delays in state matching funds would upset the district timetable to have the north campus in Novato ready for at least 1,162 students by September 1974. Last night's special meeting was a workshop on the status of plans for the campus.

John A. Grasham, district superintendent-president, warned that California's community colleges had requested $80 million in the 1972-73 state budget, but that the chancellor's office predicted only $30 million will be available. Graham said he had talked to the chancellor's office in Sacramento yesterday but "we have no official response. I'll be calling again."

He explained that the chancellor's office is preparing budget requests for the state Department of Finance. "By April, we'll know whether the chancellor's office will support our request. If they don't, the district is dead for at least another year" on getting the north campus ready, he said.

Mrs. Deedy warned that the state budget could have an adverse effect on voter response to the $16,920,000 bond issue on the April 20 college district ballot, to help finance north campus work.

In other discussion, Dale E. Fleming, district director of planning, reviewed the extensive timetable for north campus plans and outlined proposed space allocations staffing needs.

His report included a mass of data submitted with applications for state funding, but no actual drawings of the future campus.

He said the proposals are based on the concept of creating up to seven "inner colleges" each with up to 750 students.

Central facilities serving all the students should include a library — Fleming called for 4,000 volumes to start, building up to 34,000 volumes — a bookstore, a cafeteria and other items.

He said staffing requirements would be nearly the same whether the campus featured the traditional departments, or the inner college concept.

13 Miners Killed

KLERKSDORP, South Africa (UPI)—An underground fire killed 13 African miners and injured 14 others Tuesday in the Zandpan mine near here.

Mail Rate Hike Vote By Panel

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The board of governors of the new U.S. Postal Service has voted to request increases in mail rates.

Although the exact increases were not spelled out, it is likely it will cost 8 cents to mail a first class letter, beginning probably about mid-May.

The board Tuesday simply authorized the service to propose to the independent five-member Rate Commission a "recommended rate package." But Postmaster General Winton M. Blount has indicated for some time he would ask for a 33 1-3 per cent across-the-board increase.

A spokesman said the rate increase was expected to be submitted next week, which would mean the earliest possible date of implementation would be in mid-May.

FEELING BETTER ALREADY

A surf scoter, rescued from last week's aftermath of oil spillage between two tankers at the entrance to the San Francisco Bay, waddles from its refuge center—a men's room at Marin World near Redwood City. The rest room — standing idle until the oceanographic park opens its season in late March, has provided a warm and quiet atmosphere for oil-soaked birds which so far have survived the disaster.

Forgery Probe Suspect Booked

A 17-year-old San Rafael youth was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall at 11:30 p.m. yesterday on suspicion of forgery, passing checks to defraud and possession of stolen property, police reported today.

Ronald Leigh Lukesh of 1710 Lincoln Avenue, tried to cash a $28 check at Villa Rafael Motel at 1606 Lincoln Avenue, using identification belonging to Christine Mae Potter of 1718 Lincoln Avenue, according to police.

Manager John Stewart Silman of the motel alerted Mrs. Potter when Lukesh tried to cash a check. The youth previously had cashed a $12 check using her identification. She asked to be notified, police reported. She called police who had Lukesh in custody when police arrived, according to reports.

Little Tykes To Get Their Ceremonies

Sixth grade promotion exercises nearly fell by the wayside last night, but the Cotati School District board acceded to the wishes of parents and voted to retain the formal programs.

Teachers and administrators had recommended that graduation ceremonies be dropped and questioned how much the programs really meant to the young children. Parents, however, told the board that their children would appreciate a formal program.

In a survey of parents of children in grades three through six, it was shown that 149 were in favor of commencement exercises, while 123 preferred an informal awards program.

The Cotati School District board also:

ELECTION — Approved a resolution consolidating the April 20 school board election with a special referendum sponsored by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors on whether to lift the current moratorium on mobile homes.

ENROLLMENT — Heard a report that enrollment had increased by 22 students since Jan. 11, the first significant increase of the school year.

Bureau To Give Aid To Job Seekers

The Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau is willing to send mailers to its members announcing that students from any Marin school are seeking part-time clerical jobs, according to manager Carroll A. Snyker.

The chamber of commerce Jan. 15 sent out a letter announcing, "Dominican College would appreciate any assistance in obtaining job placements for some of its students."

Snyker said that for the past three or four years the chamber of commerce has sent out similar letters for the College of Marin and will do so for any other school with students qualified for part-time "clerical-type" work.

The Dominican release states, "Many are qualified for special typing and clerical assignments, tutoring, babysitting and similar hourly jobs."

Forest Knolls Man Appeals Hash Case

CHANEA, Crete (UPI)—Five Californians appeared before a higher court today to appeal maximum prison sentences and heavy fines imposed on them six weeks ago for entering Greece with a load of hashish on their private plane.

John R. Moore, 50, Phillip Erwin Amos, 30, Kenneth Connel, 28, all of Sacramento, Calif., and Robert Black, 29, of Forest Knolls Calif., were given 10 years imprisonment, and David Lee Mantell, 30, of San Francisco, nine years jail when a court found them guilty of purchase, possession and transport of 1,325 pounds of Lebanese hashish.

In addition, they were fined a total of $75,900.

All had said they were unaware the drug was on the aircraft, and pleaded not guilty.

They were arrested last August when their plane landed from Lebanon at Heraklion Airport, Crete, after being chased across the eastern Mediterranean by British Royal Air Force planes.

In defense, the five said they were hired to help high political refugees escape from Lebanon. They denied any connection with international drug trafficing gangs, alleged by the prosecution.

The appeal hearing, which could last two days, is attended by the wives of Black and Amos and their children. A consular officer of the American embassy in Athens is also present.

The Americans are being defended by two Greek lawyers.

(The case has other lings to Marin County Sausalito attorney Michael Henry Metzger, 33, is awaiting trial after being arrested Dec. 6 on charges of possessing LSD, cocaine, marijuana and a tear gas weapon in his home.

(An informant in the Metzger case was Gerald N. McDonald, captain of a converted subchaser, who said Metzger had tried to talk him into using his craft to rescue the five Californians from Certan authorities.

Metzger's attorney's however, claimed that McDonald had tried to interest Metzger in the attempt, not the other way around.

Man Pulled From Court In Outburst

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Wesley Allen Johnson was removed from his superior court trial here yesterday after kicking over the defense table and accusing the judge of railroading him.

Johnson, facing four charges stemming from a 1969 holdup attempt and gun fight with police, was ordered to a holding cell by Judge Joseph J. Karesh while jury selection was completed, according to Cyril Weeks, assistant public defender.

Weeks said Johnson was to be readmitted to his trial when the prosecution opened its case this afternoon.

Johnson was ordered from the court after continuously interrupting proceedings to charge he wasn't properly represented and to ask for more time to prepare his case.

Three motions for continuance were denied by Judge Karesh.

The judge termed Johnson's behavior obstreperous and told the defendant he could be found in contempt, gagged and chained if he continued his "constant outbursts."

Johnson, also known as Joe Allen Johnson, is charged with burglary, attempted robbery, being an ex-felon in possession of a firearm and shooting at police.

Sentencing Set On Pot Charge

Alfred Carl Ensminger, 29, of Larkspur, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of being in a place where marijuana was used.

He had earlier pleaded innocent to a charge of possessing marijuana, but was allowed to change his plea Monday to the lesser offense.

Ensminger and Ralph Dennis Snow, 24, of San Rafael, who earlier pleaded guilty to being in a place where pot was used, will both be sentenced Feb. 22.

Preliminary School Plan Is Approved

Preliminary plans for an eight-classroom addition to Rancho Cotate High School, Rohnert Park, were approved last night by the Petaluma Board of Education.

The board approved employment of architects Reynolds and Chamberlain for the addition that will also include enlargement of the library and remodeling of the business area to accommodate home economics classes.

Board secretary Marion Beltzner said no cost estimates have yet been made, but that the addition will permit a total enrollment of 1,000 students and should be completed in late spring of 1972.

The plan also includes tennis courts and additional parking facilities and fits in with the master plan of development for the school.

The Petaluma Board of Education also:

DRUGS — Endorsed the efforts of the Third Way House of Petaluma Inc., to work with young people to combat drug abuse problems.

CONTRACTS — Heard a report on how performance contracts have been used in other school districts to solve specific problems and asked for further study on how the plan might be used in Petaluma.

HIRED — Approved employment and set salaries for three teachers including Philip Avila, $4,153; Arthur Banti, $3,900; and Mary Lynn Te Selle, $3,647.

San Jose Driver Suffers Cut Lip

A 30-year-old San Jose man was to see his own doctor for a cut lower lip after his car hit a utility pole at 12:30 a.m. yesterday, San Rafael police reported.

William Aldret Burns was northbound on Jordan Street east of Lindaro Street when he hit the pole. He told police that he must have dozed off while driving, according to police reports.

Fire Chief Raises Alarming Situation

Sausalito's fire alarm system for street alarm boxes is just about on its last legs and maintenance is becoming increasingly difficult and costly, the Sausalito City Council learned last night.

Fire Chief Charles E. Masten told the council the insulation has worn away on many wires which run through trees in the city's residential areas. "When the rain runs down through the trees, it hits the wires and the system can't carry the signal," the chief said, adding the alarm system has been broken down for the last several days.

Mayor Alexander R. Imlay said the system is necessary for insurance purposes. "We have too much of an investment not to continue it," the mayor said.

Masten said his department plans to renovate the equipment and he hopes to present a proposal to the council at budget time. The chief estimated the improvements will cost between $8,000 and $10,000 if his men do most of the work.

He said he would like to remove most of the boxes from the residential areas and concentrate them in the downtown area where telephones are not so accessible. "In the six years I've been here, we have never had a fire reported from an alarm box that we haven't gotten by phone first," he explained. Taking the boxes out of residential areas would make maintenance much easier, he added.

The Sausalito City Council also:

SALARY INCREASE — Approved a $483 salary increase for Sausalito Youth Center Paul Kozak to allow him to work more hours.

DECK ENLARGEMENT — Approved a variance application from James A. Roman to legalize the enlargement of a rear deck on property at 218 Fourth Street. The deck exceeds the city's maximum coverage limitations.

WORKROOM — Upheld a planning commission decision to grant a variance to Niels-Henrik Carlsen to add a workroom to a house at 308 Third Street, even thought the dwelling is non-conforming.

UNDERGROUND UTILITY DISTRICT — Passed a resolution establishing an underground utility district for Second Street, between Richardson and North streets.

TRANSFER — Agreed to transfer $18,244 earmarked for the widening of Bridgeway from Napa to Johnson streets to a new project to widen the city's main street between Nevada and Ebbtide streets. The city engineer told the Council he felt the northern widening was a higher priority because of the 450-unit Whiskey Springs development being built in that area.

BUS STOP — Asked for a plan for a canopy and lighting for the city's newly-designated Greyhound Bus Stop north of Bay Street. The old stop in front of city hall was discontinued last week when the city banned all parking, including bus parking, on Bridgeway between Princess and Anchor streets.

SUBCOMMITTEE — Appointed Councilmen Robin Sweeny and Stephen A.Fraser to a permanent subcommittee to keep the council informed of what is happening in the Marin Headlands in the way of proposed developments and the like.

Tax Rise, Aid Drop Seen In Red Ink School Budget

Officials of the San Rafael city school system said last night they expected more money from the local taxpayer in fiscal 1971-72 but less in state aid because of the tax rise.

Added up, this still means more income because the gain in tax revenue is predicted to be greater than the loss in funds from Sacramento, officials told the board of education.

However, the board was cautioned in a preliminary budget forecast, the school system also is expected to be more costly to run next fiscal year. Thus, schools probably will wind up poorer at the end of fiscal 1971-72 than at the conclusion of the current fiscal year.

Condrotte's preliminary figures showed projected 1971-72 income in the elementary district of $5,409,007, up about $250,000 from this fiscal year. In the high school district, income is tentatively projected at $5,392,700, up about $180,000.

Expenditures, however, were put at $5,544,856 in the elementary district and at $5,437,230, both up about $300,000.

The projected deficit spending will mean a total dip into reserves in both districts of about $179,000, meaning a plunge in 1971-72 ending balances to $303,018 in the elementary district and to $202,935 in the high school district, Condrotte's figures showed. Reserve levels, the figures illustrated, already are far below those of recent years.

Condrotte said he had included an employee pay increase of 7 per cent, along with step increases, in the preliminary spending program. The raises would cost $272,730 in the elementary district and $229,908 in the high school district.

Plank said income from assessed valuation probably would jump about 10 per cent in both districts because of the mandatory rise from 23 to 25 per cent in fair market value tabulations for properties.

However, according to the figures, state aid is expected to drop $126,538 in the elementary district and $104,155 in the high school district because of the rise in tax revenue.

In the high school district, Plank said, this will mean a drop from $171 to $125 in state aid per student, rendering the district what Plank called a "basic aid" entity.

"The weather districts receive a minimal amount of support," he said. "The poorer districts get more."

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ADVISORY — Heard a report from Lewis Pollock, chairman of the citizens advisory committee, on group progress and asked the board to name several replacements for members who couldn't serve.

AUDIT — Accepted the fiscal 1969-70 audit and hoped it could be submitted closer to the end of the fiscal year in the future.

TEXTBOOK — Heard of plans to continue an experimental world history course at San Rafael High School. Teachers of the class, Thomas Truchan and Angelo Douvos, reported student enthusiasm over the new format.

APPOINTMENTS — Named Everette Clark a substitute custodian at $3.11 hourly; Anoosh Mizany, high school science teacher, $9,117 annually; Patricia Stengall, high school English, $11,997 annually, and Mary Warren, high school mathematics, typing and geography, $13,738 annually. All teachers are replacements.

RESIGNATIONS — Accepted the resignations of Fred Hines, San Rafael High School physical education teacher, resigning after 33 years' service; Audren Johnson, San Rafael High School custodian, health reasons; Richard Kelly, San Rafael High School custodian, personal reasons, and granted leave without pay to Doreen Wasson, secretary at Laurel Dell Intermediate School, personal reasons. The board issued a special commendation to Hines.

GIFTS — Accepted gifts of books from Santa Venetia Middle School Parent-Teacher Association; miscellaneous play equipment from the Gallinas Parent-Teacher Association; a rug from Mrs. Harold Ellison; lumber and labor for an art display from Robin Hadley and Alan Gizzi and $150 from the Coleman School Parent-Teacher Association for play equipment.

Snakeless Hawaii Gets Zoo Reptile

HONOLULU (UPI)—Hawaii residents watched in awe today as the island's first legal snake slithered around in his cage and basked in artificial sunlight.

"He's not at all shy," said Honolulu Zoo Director Jack Throp.

Throp, who's been trying to get a snake imported into the zoo for years, was finally successful when the 1970 legislature relented, but only under strict conditions.

Only two non-poisonous, male, unrelated snakes would be allowed.

No snakes are native to the Hawaiian Islands.

Unlike some shy snakes which burrow into the ground, the three-foot-long Red Rat Snake "just likes to be where the sun is," Throp said.

Petaluma Reception Mild On Transit Plan

The Golden Gate Bridge District's long range transit plan got a mild reception in Petaluma last night with city officials reserving most comment and criticism for the final hearing next Wednesday at San Rafael City Hall.

In response to questions about what the rapid transit link to San Francisco would mean to Petaluma, Robert E. Shields, project manager, said buses would be provided to feed commuters from Santa Rosa and Petaluma to the transit system in Novato.

Petaluma City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer questioned whether the buses would circulate in residential areas, or if the district should plan on building a large parking lot for commuters cars.

Thomas Farrington of Petaluma offered the strongest criticism, saying the plan included on the old technology of trains, buses and ferries and was "not conceptual." "What we're doing is bailing out Marin County and giving us peanuts" he said.

Richard R. Day, of the Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce, protested that his city, the third largest in the county and home of Sonoma State College, had been totally ignored on the plans.

Looking at the plan generally, he said it would make Sonoma County a total bedroom community to San Francisco with no base of its own. Day said the plan would also generate urban sprawl because it would determine growth patterns since the county has no general plan.

Several of the 75 persons at the hearing questioned the possibility of using hydrofoils or hovercraft on the Petaluma River. Shields said consultants had taken a hard look at exotic crafts, but dismissed them because the narrowness of the river would severely limit speed and make the other modes of travel more attractive.

More major battlers of the Civil War were fought in Virginia than in any other state.

Marinwood CSD Eyes Fire Budget

The Marinwood Community Services District last night began consideration of a 1971-72 fire protection budget totaling $99,223, compared to $85,330 this year.

Business Mgr. Genevieve T. Bolding said that, despite the increase, the tax rate would remain at 61 cents because of increased assessed valuation in the district.

Accounting for most of the increase in the proposed budget are 5 per cent cost-of-living raises for the five Marinwood firemen and a possible retirement plan for which $6,300 is budgeted, Mrs. Bolding said.

Early consideration was required because a contract must be signed by March for fire protection in the Upper Lucas Valley area. Mrs. Bolding said the contract the board decided to submit to Upper Lucas Valley is for $33,223.

The community services district will take up the budgets for parks and recreation and administration in June, she said. The two have a total tax rate of 62 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

The board, according to Mrs. Bolding, also favored a sprinkler system at the new workshop at Marin County Juvenile Hall. The community services district is considering taking over fire protection of Juvenile Hall.

The board also voted to leave recreation fees the same this year and to purchase a used electric typewriter for $75.

Stolen Property Suspect Booked

A 20-year-old San Francisco man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of burglary and receiving stolen property after he was discovered emerging from a Belvedere home about 10:40 a.m.

Belvedere police said Arthur Lee Ward was apprehended at the James A. Mitchell residence on Golden Gate Avenue as he and two other youths emerged from the house carrying about $10,000 in furs. An employee of the Mitchell's held Ward until police arrived, but the other youths escaped.

Ward was held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear this afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

Once-Abducted, Buried Alive Heiress To Wed

MIAMI (UPI)—Heiress Barbara Jane Mackle, who was buried alive in north Georgia woods for more than 80 hours in 1968 while her kidnapers negotiated for $500,000 in ransom, will be married this spring.

Millionaire land developer Robert Mackle of Coral Gables has announced the engagement of his daughter to Stewart Hunt Woodward of Charlotte, N.C., who attended Emory University in Atlanta with Barbara at the time of the kidnaping. No wedding date was set.

Tax Rise, Aid Drop Seen In Red Ink School Budget

Officials of the San Rafael city school system said last night they expected more money from the local taxpayer in fiscal 1971-72 but less in state aid because of the tax rise.

Added up, this still means more income because the gain in tax revenue is predicted to be greater than the loss in funds from Sacramento, officials told the board of education.

However, the board was cautioned in a preliminary budget forecast, the school system also is expected to be more costly to run next fiscal year. Thus, schools probably will wind up poorer at the end of fiscal 1971-72 than at the conclusion of the current fiscal year.

Condrotte's preliminary figures showed projected 1971-72 income in the elementary district of $5,409,007, up about $250,000 from this fiscal year. In the high school district, income is tentatively projected at $5,392,700, up about $180,000.

Expenditures, however, were put at $5,544,856 in the elementary district and at $5,437,230, both up about $300,000.

The projected deficit spending will mean a total dip into reserves in both districts of about $179,000, meaning a plunge in 1971-72 ending balances to $303,018 in the elementary district and to $202,935 in the high school district, Condrotte's figures showed. Reserve levels, the figures illustrated, already are far below those of recent years.

Condrotte said he had included an employee pay increase of 7 per cent, along with step increases, in the preliminary spending program. The raises would cost $272,730 in the elementary district and $229,908 in the high school district.

Plank said income from assessed valuation probably would jump about 10 per cent in both districts because of the mandatory rise from 23 to 25 per cent in fair market value tabulations for properties.

However, according to the figures, state aid is expected to drop $126,538 in the elementary district and $104,155 in the high school district because of the rise in tax revenue.

In the high school district, Plank said, this will mean a drop from $171 to $125 in state aid per student, rendering the district what Plank called a "basic aid" entity.

"The weather districts receive a minimal amount of support," he said. "The poorer districts get more."

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ADVISORY — Heard a report from Lewis Pollock, chairman of the citizens advisory committee, on group progress and asked the board to name several replacements for members who couldn't serve.

AUDIT — Accepted the fiscal 1969-70 audit and hoped it could be submitted closer to the end of the fiscal year in the future.

TEXTBOOK — Heard of plans to continue an experimental world history course at San Rafael High School. Teachers of the class, Thomas Truchan and Angelo Douvos, reported student enthusiasm over the new format.

APPOINTMENTS — Named Everette Clark a substitute custodian at $3.11 hourly; Anoosh Mizany, high school science teacher, $9,117 annually; Patricia Stengall, high school English, $11,997 annually, and Mary Warren, high school mathematics, typing and geography, $13,738 annually. All teachers are replacements.

RESIGNATIONS — Accepted the resignations of Fred Hines, San Rafael High School physical education teacher, resigning after 33 years' service; Audren Johnson, San Rafael High School custodian, health reasons; Richard Kelly, San Rafael High School custodian, personal reasons, and granted leave without pay to Doreen Wasson, secretary at Laurel Dell Intermediate School, personal reasons. The board issued a special commendation to Hines.

GIFTS — Accepted gifts of books from Santa Venetia Middle School Parent-Teacher Association; miscellaneous play equipment from the Gallinas Parent-Teacher Association; a rug from Mrs. Harold Ellison; lumber and labor for an art display from Robin Hadley and Alan Gizzi and $150 from the Coleman School Parent-Teacher Association for play equipment.

Snakeless Hawaii Gets Zoo Reptile

HONOLULU (UPI)—Hawaii residents watched in awe today as the island's first legal snake slithered around in his cage and basked in artificial sunlight.

"He's not at all shy," said Honolulu Zoo Director Jack Throp.

Throp, who's been trying to get a snake imported into the zoo for years, was finally successful when the 1970 legislature relented, but only under strict conditions.

Only two non-poisonous, male, unrelated snakes would be allowed.

No snakes are native to the Hawaiian Islands.

Unlike some shy snakes which burrow into the ground, the three-foot-long Red Rat Snake "just likes to be where the sun is," Throp said.

Petaluma Reception Mild On Transit Plan

The Golden Gate Bridge District's long range transit plan got a mild reception in Petaluma last night with city officials reserving most comment and criticism for the final hearing next Wednesday at San Rafael City Hall.

In response to questions about what the rapid transit link to San Francisco would mean to Petaluma, Robert E. Shields, project manager, said buses would be provided to feed commuters from Santa Rosa and Petaluma to the transit system in Novato.

Petaluma City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer questioned whether the buses would circulate in residential areas, or if the district should plan on building a large parking lot for commuters cars.

Thomas Farrington of Petaluma offered the strongest criticism, saying the plan included on the old technology of trains, buses and ferries and was "not conceptual." "What we're doing is bailing out Marin County and giving us peanuts" he said.

Richard R. Day, of the Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce, protested that his city, the third largest in the county and home of Sonoma State College, had been totally ignored on the plans.

Looking at the plan generally, he said it would make Sonoma County a total bedroom community to San Francisco with no base of its own. Day said the plan would also generate urban sprawl because it would determine growth patterns since the county has no general plan.

Several of the 75 persons at the hearing questioned the possibility of using hydrofoils or hovercraft on the Petaluma River. Shields said consultants had taken a hard look at exotic crafts, but dismissed them because the narrowness of the river would severely limit speed and make the other modes of travel more attractive.

More major battlers of the Civil War were fought in Virginia than in any other state.

Marinwood CSD Eyes Fire Budget

The Marinwood Community Services District last night began consideration of a 1971-72 fire protection budget totaling $99,223, compared to $85,330 this year.

Business Mgr. Genevieve T. Bolding said that, despite the increase, the tax rate would remain at 61 cents because of increased assessed valuation in the district.

Accounting for most of the increase in the proposed budget are 5 per cent cost-of-living raises for the five Marinwood firemen and a possible retirement plan for which $6,300 is budgeted, Mrs. Bolding said.

Early consideration was required because a contract must be signed by March for fire protection in the Upper Lucas Valley area. Mrs.Bolding said the contract the board decided to submit to Upper Lucas Valley is for $33,223.

The community services district will take up the budgets for parks and recreation and administration in June, she said. The two have a total tax rate of 62 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

The board, according to Mrs. Bolding, also favored a sprinkler system at the new workshop at Marin County Juvenile Hall. The community services district is considering taking over fire protection of Juvenile Hall.

The board also voted to leave recreation fees the same this year and to purchase a used electric typewriter for $75.

Stolen Property Suspect Booked

A 20-year-old San Francisco man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of burglary and receiving stolen property after he was discovered emerging from a Belvedere home about 10:40 a.m.

Belvedere police said Arthur Lee Ward was apprehended at the James A. Mitchell residence on Golden Gate Avenue as he and two other youths emerged from the house carrying about $10,000 in furs. An employee of the Mitchell's held Ward until police arrived, but the other youths escaped.

Ward was held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear this afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

Once-Abducted, Buried Alive Heiress To Wed

MIAMI (UPI)—Heiress Barbara Jane Mackle, who was buried alive in north Georgia woods for more than 80 hours in 1968 while her kidnapers negotiated for $500,000 in ransom, will be married this spring.

Millionaire land developer Robert Mackle of Coral Gables has announced the engagement of his daughter to Stewart Hunt Woodward of Charlotte, N.C., who attended Emory University in Atlanta with Barbara at the time of the kidnaping. No wedding date was set.

Miss Mackle was abducted from a motel room where she was staying with her mother by two persons who put her in a ventilated box and buried her. After Mackle paid the ransom, the kidnapers told FBI agents where to find the girl.

LIBRARIAN RETIRES

Readers Ducking Sexy New Novels

By LARRY MOWELL

San Anselmo library patrons haven't changed much in 20 years. Books, unfortunately, have, according to retired librarian Lucille C. Klieforth.

Mrs. Klieforth, who retired Dec. 31 because she reached the city's mandatory retirement age of 70, has watched the library double its space and grow from 27,000 volumes to more than 50,000.

Despite its growth, she said, the library's clientele remains the same. Most of the people checking out books are middleaged and elderly, just as when she began working as a substitute librarian about 1950, she said.

Men still favor nonfiction, history, travelogues and westerns; women still seek mystery novels and bestsellers; and youngsters still look for science fiction thrillers, she said.

While tastes haven't changed much in San Anselmo, books have, she said. "Authors don't write the good books that they wrote at one time. There is too much sex and all," she said.

"The patrons that I have known for years say they just can't read these books. They just bring them back in a day or two," she said.

Those who hastily return the titillating modern novels are mostly women, she said. Men tend to keep them out longer.

While declining to single out any objectionable works, she was willing to list what readers do approve of: "(John) Steinbeck — you know — like that. These books have always been popular."

Readers are also partial to Nevil Shute, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway and Agatha Christie, she said.

In fact, she said, San Anselmans are rereading their works rather than read some of the current bestsellers.

While San Anselmo readers wish authors would return to the fiction of the past, Mrs. Klieforth wishes she could have continued to work at the library at 110 Tunstead Avenue.

Still energetic, Mrs. Klieforth said she wanted to stay on the job because she enjoyed the work and the people she met during her tenure.

Although she started about 20 years ago, she did not become a full-time employee until 1956. She said she usually worked about 26 hours a week after gaining a full-time designation.

Legally too old to work, Mrs. Kleiforth said she will remain active nevertheless.

"That is what I am looking forward to. I really relax outside. I like to be outdoors."

A daughter, Carol Klieforth is a service representative for Pacific Telephone in San Francisco. Her other daughter, Diane Culler lives in Layton, Utah, and her son, Harold Klieforth Jr. is a meteorologist working for the Desert Research Institute of the University of Nevada.

Mrs. Klieforth, a native San Franciscan, and her husband, Harold, a retired San Quentin guard, moved to San Anselmo from San Francisco in 1933.

No Roses Cake For Angela

Angela Davis spent her 27th birthday yesterday in her Marin County jail cell, without cake or flowers to mark the day.

Capt. Harvey Teague of the sheriff's office said jail regulations prohibited both cake and flowers.

Teague said arrangements were made last week with Allan Brotsky, one of Miss Davis's attorneys, to handle any flowers sent Miss Davis.

An order for 27 roses was wired from Italy through Burns Florist, 1230 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, but the florist said the order was being returned because of the jail regulations.

Miss Davis is charged, along with San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with the unsuccessful escape attempt last Aug. 7 at the Marin Hall of Justice which left four men, including Judge Harold J. Haley of Superior Court, dead.

Charges On Marijuana Dismissed

Marijuana charges against Mill Valley attorney Mark Susnow and a friend, Susan Gay Pasley, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court.

Smith dismissed the case after the district attorney's office asked for a postponement of a preliminary hearing because it did not have enough evidence to proceed.

The district attorney's problems arose Jan. 14 when Judge E. Warren McGuire of superior court granted a defense motion and quashed the search warrant with which state, county and Mill Valley officers raided Susnow's home and confiscated a half kilo of marijuana.

Judge McGuire ruled the warrant was invalid because of technical irregularities in its preparation.

Fifteen persons were arrested in the Dec. 11 raid, but only Susnow and Miss Pasley were charged, both with possession of marijuana.

The district attorney's office yesterday asked Judge Smith to continue the proceedings against Susnow and Miss Pasley until an appeal of Judge McGuire's action could be made, but Judge Smith dismissed the case.

Theft From Car

A tape deck and stereo tapes, valued at $100, were taken Jan. 8 from a car parked in a College of Marin parking lot, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

Deputies said the car was owned by Kristopher G. O'Conner of 8 East Drive, Mill Valley.

Cyclist Killed In Head-On Crash

A 23-year-old San Rafael man was killed and another man injured last night in a car-motorcycle crash on fogbound Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in the San Geronimo Valley.

Killed was James Leonard Long Jr., the motorcyclist, of 873 Fourth Street, Apt. 5, San Rafael. Injured was Leslie M. Booth, 32, of 60 Frustuck Avenue, Apt. B, Fairfax.

The California Highway Patrol gave this account of the 10:30 p.m. accident:

A compact car driven by John F. Neilson Jr., 47, of Forest Knolls, was eastbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard west of San Geronimo Valley Road behind an unidentified vehicle when Booth's station wagon came up from behind.

Neilson and Booth simultaneously pulled out to pass the other car. Neilson completed his pass but Booth still was in the left lane when, he told officers, he suddenly saw the headlight of a motorcycle in the fog ahead.

He tried to swerve back into the right lane but collided both with Neilson's car and head-on with Long's motorcycle.

Officers said Long probably was killed instantly but was rushed to Marin General Hospital by ambulance where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Long moved to Marin one month ago from Sparks, Nevada. He worked at McDonald's restaurant in San Rafael. Funeral arrangements were pending today at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

The death was the county's second traffic fatality of 1971, the same as at this time last year.

Innocent Plea To Pot Possession

Clayton Duane Blackmore, 39, of Mill Valley has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana and misdemeanor counts of driving under the influence of drugs and possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Preliminary hearing was set for March 2.

Mental Health Center Gets Inspection Nod

The Marin Hospital District board was told last night that a federal inspection team apparently was satisfied with operation of the Marin Community Mental Health Center during recent inspection.

Dr. John S. Guerrant, center director, reported today that he told the board the survey team of the National Institute of Mental Health unofficially advised him it was satisfied with the way federal funds were being used at the center.

The center receives four federal staffing grants which are used to finance partially about 80 per cent of the center's employees. This year's grant totaled about $640,000.

"Their overall impression of the center was quite favorable," Guerrant said adding that an official written report is forthcoming.

He said the team appeared impressed with group therapy programs in both children and adult servies as well as the center's in-service training for its staff and college students.

The team directed some criticism, he said, at the method planned for developing a community master plan of mental health services.

"This is one area of the report we will be quite anxious to read," he said adding that the team expressed some concern that representatives from agencies supplied services be involved in the planning.

Guerrant said he was not sure when the written report would be received from the team's first visit to the center two weeks ago.

The Marin Hospital District Board also:

GIFTS — Accepted two specially designed record players from the hospital volunteers which acquired them from the California State Library for the Blind. The machines were designed to play records of books for persons unable to see or read.

COMMITTEES — Appointed board members to the board's six standing committees.

CONTRACT — Referred to Harold F. Riede, attorney for the district, a letter from the Kentfield Fire District asking the hospital board to consider increasing its fire service fee. The hospital currently pays $1 per year.

PHYSICIANS — Extended for one month an agreement with the hospital's emergency room doctors increasing their pay from $5 to $10 per hour. Negotiations on the question of fees are continuing.

Ross Merger On 'Sounding Board'

The proposed $30,000 study for the unification of upper Ross Valley will be discussed at 9 a.m. tomorrow on KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board" program.

Joining moderator Kitty Oppenheimer will be San Anselmo Mayor James Reed, Fairfax Vice-Mayor Cornelis van Vliet, ABAG's senior planner, Frederick Silva, and Mrs. Louis Emis of the San Anselmo Citizens Action Committee.

Questions phoned during the live broadcast will be answered. The program will be repeated on tape Sunday at 10:05 a.m.

Autopsy On Lewis Remains Uncompleted

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The autopsy performed yesterday on Samuel L. Lewis, 74, American patriarch of the Sufireligious sect, showed that he had a "marked swelling of the brain," the San Francisco coroner has announced.

Lewis, formerly of Mill Valley, died last Jan. 15 after an apparent fall in his San Francisco home.

Coroner Henry Turkel reported yesterday that initial study could find no cause for the swelling and that the final determination of the cause of death would depend on laboratory, pathological and toxicological tests.

Permission for the autopsy was granted by a San Francisco superior court judge after Lewis's followers protested the autopsy as in violation of their beliefs.

Woman's Condition Is Listed As Good

Officers said Joyce D. Sellers of 477 East Blithedale Avenue at first appeared dead but a slight pulse was noted and the woman was moved to Kaiser where she was treated for an overdose of medicine.

In fact, she said, San Anselmans are rereading their works rather than read some of the current bestsellers.

While San Anselmo readers wish authors would return to the fiction of the past, Mrs. Klieforth wishes she could have continued to work at the library at 110 Tunstead Avenue.

Still energetic, Mrs. Klieforth said she wanted to stay on the job because she enjoyed the work and the people she met during her tenure.

Although she started about 20 years ago, she did not become a full-time employee until 1956. She said she usually worked about 26 hours a week after gaining a full-time designation.

Legally too old to work, Mrs. Kleiforth said she will remain active nevertheless.

"That is what I am looking forward to. I really relax outside. I like to be outdoors."

A daughter, Carol Klieforth is a service representative for Pacific Telephone in San Francisco. Her other daughter, Diane Culler lives in Layton, Utah, and her son, Harold Klieforth Jr. is a meteorologist working for the Desert Research Institute of the University of Nevada.

Mrs. Klieforth, a native San Franciscan, and her husband, Harold, a retired San Quentin guard, moved to San Anselmo from San Francisco in 1933.

No Roses Cake For Angela

Angela Davis spent her 27th birthday yesterday in her Marin County jail cell, without cake or flowers to mark the day.

Capt. Harvey Teague of the sheriff's office said jail regulations prohibited both cake and flowers.

Teague said arrangements were made last week with Allan Brotsky, one of Miss Davis's attorneys, to handle any flowers sent Miss Davis.

An order for 27 roses was wired from Italy through Burns Florist, 1230 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, but the florist said the order was being returned because of the jail regulations.

Miss Davis is charged, along with San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with the unsuccessful escape attempt last Aug. 7 at the Marin Hall of Justice which left four men, including Judge Harold J. Haley of Superior Court, dead.

Charges On Marijuana Dismissed

Marijuana charges against Mill Valley attorney Mark Susnow and a friend, Susan Gay Pasley, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court.

Smith dismissed the case after the district attorney's office asked for a postponement of a preliminary hearing because it did not have enough evidence to proceed.

The district attorney's problems arose Jan. 14 when Judge E. Warren McGuire of superior court granted a defense motion and quashed the search warrant with which state, county and Mill Valley officers raided Susnow's home and confiscated a half kilo of marijuana.

Judge McGuire ruled the warrant was invalid because of technical irregularities in its preparation.

Fifteen persons were arrested in the Dec. 11 raid, but only Susnow and Miss Pasley were charged, both with possession of marijuana.

The district attorney's office yesterday asked Judge Smith to continue the proceedings against Susnow and Miss Pasley until an appeal of Judge McGuire's action could be made, but Judge Smith dismissed the case.

Theft From Car

A tape deck and stereo tapes, valued at $100, were taken Jan. 8 from a car parked in a College of Marin parking lot, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

Deputies said the car was owned by Kristopher G. O'Conner of 8 East Drive, Mill Valley.

Cyclist Killed In Head-On Crash

A 23-year-old San Rafael man was killed and another man injured last night in a car-motorcycle crash on fogbound Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in the San Geronimo Valley.

Killed was James Leonard Long Jr., the motorcyclist, of 873 Fourth Street, Apt. 5, San Rafael. Injured was Leslie M. Booth, 32, of 60 Frustuck Avenue, Apt. B, Fairfax.

The California Highway Patrol gave this account of the 10:30 p.m. accident:

A compact car driven by John F. Neilson Jr., 47, of Forest Knolls, was eastbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard west of San Geronimo Valley Road behind an unidentified vehicle when Booth's station wagon came up from behind.

Neilson and Booth simultaneously pulled out to pass the other car. Neilson completed his pass but Booth still was in the left lane when, he told officers, he suddenly saw the headlight of a motorcycle in the fog ahead.

He tried to swerve back into the right lane but collided both with Neilson's car and head-on with Long's motorcycle.

Officers said Long probably was killed instantly but was rushed to Marin General Hospital by ambulance where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Long moved to Marin one month ago from Sparks, Nevada. He worked at McDonald's restaurant in San Rafael. Funeral arrangements were pending today at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

The death was the county's second traffic fatality of 1971, the same as at this time last year.

Innocent Plea To Pot Possession

Clayton Duane Blackmore, 39, of Mill Valley has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana and misdemeanor counts of driving under the influence of drugs and possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Preliminary hearing was set for March 2.

Mental Health Center Gets Inspection Nod

The Marin Hospital District board was told last night that a federal inspection team apparently was satisfied with operation of the Marin Community Mental Health Center during recent inspection.

Dr. John S. Guerrant, center director, reported today that he told the board the survey team of the National Institute of Mental Health unofficially advised him it was satisfied with the way federal funds were being used at the center.

The center receives four federal staffing grants which are used to finance partially about 80 per cent of the center's employees. This year's grant totaled about $640,000.

"Their overall impression of the center was quite favorable," Guerrant said adding that an official written report is forthcoming.

He said the team appeared impressed with group therapy programs in both children and adult servies as well as the center's in-service training for its staff and college students.

The team directed some criticism, he said, at the method planned for developing a community master plan of mental health services.

"This is one area of the report we will be quite anxious to read," he said adding that the team expressed some concern that representatives from agencies supplied services be involved in the planning.

Guerrant said he was not sure when the written report would be received from the team's first visit to the center two weeks ago.

The Marin Hospital District Board also:

GIFTS — Accepted two specially designed record players from the hospital volunteers which acquired them from the California State Library for the Blind. The machines were designed to play records of books for persons unable to see or read.

COMMITTEES — Appointed board members to the board's six standing committees.

CONTRACT — Referred to Harold F. Riede, attorney for the district, a letter from the Kentfield Fire District asking the hospital board to consider increasing its fire service fee. The hospital currently pays $1 per year.

PHYSICIANS — Extended for one month an agreement with the hospital's emergency room doctors increasing their pay from $5 to $10 per hour. Negotiations on the question of fees are continuing.

Autopsy On Lewis Remains Uncompleted

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The autopsy performed yesterday on Samuel L. Lewis, 74, American patriarch of the Sufireligious sect, showed that he had a "marked swelling of the brain," the San Francisco coroner has announced.

Coroner Henry Turkel reported yesterday that initial study could find no cause for the swelling and that the final determination of the cause of death would depend on laboratory, pathological and toxicological tests.

Permission for the autopsy was granted by a San Francisco superior court judge after Lewis's followers protested the autopsy as in violation of their beliefs.

Woman's Condition Is Listed As Good

Officers said Joyce D. Sellers of 477 East Blithedale Avenue at first appeared dead but a slight pulse was noted and the woman was moved to Kaiser where she was treated for an overdose of medicine.

Hugh Burns Launches A New Career

SACRAMENTO (UPI) Former Democratic Sen. Hugh M. Burns who wanted an easy government job, launched a new career today as a $14,000-a-year state liquor control commissioner.

Burns, the dean of the Legislature who retired last year, was appointed by Gov. Ronald Reagan Tuesday to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board.

The ABC board is a three-member commission which reviews disciplinary decisions against licensees made by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Department.

The colorful 68-year-old Burns currently is entitled to a monthly $1,053 state pension as a retired lawmaker. He served 34 years in the legislature. The pension payment will drop to $824 when he takes his new post.

Burns told newsmen on the last day of the legislative session in 1970 that he intended to ask Reagan to name him to a part-time board or commission.

The affable, barrel-chested Democrat told newsmen he wanted "something with a minimum amount of labor. I'm not interested in anything that entails a lot of work."

He endorsed Reagan over fellow Democrat Jess Unruh last year for governor and headed a Democrats-for-Reagan campaign committee. In 1968, he endorsed Richard M. Nixon for President and declined to support Democrat Alan Cranston for the U.S. Senate.

Burns will serve at Reagan's pleasure—meaning he can be replaced at any time.

The appointment of Burns is subject to confirmation by the Senate, which he headed for 13 years as president pro tem.

Did Reagan Goof On Medi-Cal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) A state health official indicated Tuesday Gov. Ronald Reagan's decision to cut Medi-Cal services could have resulted more from bookkeeping errors than what the governor called "excesses."

"A projection was missed," Richard L. Camilli, deputy diirector of the State Department of Health Care Services which runs Medi-Cal, said in a story by the Sacramento bureau of the Los Angeles Times.

He said his department failed last spring to count 20,900 Medi-Cal recipients in its caseload estimates for the current fiscal year.

The Legislature, as a result, failed to put money for them in the current budget, which runs to June 30, 1971.

Camilli also said his department predicted last spring that several cost controls would take effect early in the year, thus cutting Medi-Cal costs during the balance of the year. The controls, however, failed to be implemented as expected, he said.

Reagan announced Dec. 2 that the Medi-Cal program threatened to go over its budget, a situation that allows the administration under state law to make cuts in the program.

Creek Building Guidelines May Prove Something Of Challenge

The new guidelines for proposed construction along Corte Madera Creek may prove a challenge for both the Larkspur Planning Commission and the builders.

In their first meeting since the stringent requirements were established in a joint city council meeting Monday, the commission approved with design recommendations two architectural proposals for apartment buildings that did not conform to the policy guidelines.

These guidelines would require a wider space between adjacent buildings on South Eliseo Avenue and would limit the width of the buildings to less than 140 feet.

In approving an application for architectural supervision of Mrs. J. Buchanan for a five-unit apartment on 725 South Eliseo Avenue, the commission agreed that the creative design that was offered was a "welcome addition to the shoreline even if the sideyard space was not wide enough.

Councilmen agreed that the guidelines should not restrict or limit the structures to the extent that the waterfront would be lined with a long row of three-story block-shaped buildings.

Also because of its unique design, the commission unanimously approved plans for a seven-unit apartment building for 705 South Eliseo. Any increase in the sideyard width, according to the architect representing applicant Mrs. Carol Auslen, would result in increasing the number of stories or change the design.

Here again, the commissioners noted that by requiring adherence to the guidelines they would be defeating their own purpose, which was originally an attempt to maintain environmental quality of Corte Madera Creek.

The commission approved architectural design submitted by developer Neils J. Schultz Jr. for a 10-unit apartment along South Eliseo on condition that recommendations concerning roofing materials and plans for mechanical equipment be considered. Schultz's architectural plans met the guidelines of the new policy.

The Larkspur Planning Commission also:

CARPORT Approved an application for variance proposed by A. Lamperti of 209 Wilson Way to add a carport three feet from the front property line.

GENERAL PLAN Approved the addition of a recreation and open space element for local parks and recreational facilities to the 1965 General Plan.

COMMITTEE Chose three architects, Arthur Sestak of 359 Wilson Way, Malcolm Smith of 160 Marina Vista Road and Paul L. Gruner of Broadwalk No. 1 to form the nucleus for the proposed five-man architectural review committee to meetMonday. The committee would review the architectural proposals for the commission and make recommendations.

RENTAL OFFICE Reviewed parking plans of the Schultz Investment Co. rental office at El Portal and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and recommended commissioners observe the development of the parking area for its traffic hazards.

Sharing Their Salad Secrets

Salads, salads, salads will be the feature of the Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society sustaining membership luncheon at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley on Monday, and members have been practicing and perfecting their own best recipes.

They also got together and wrote them down to produce a cookbook of their best salad ideas, with ingredients and method given.

MOLDED SPINACH SALAD
(Mrs. Douglas O'Conner, Tiburon)

1½ T. vinegar
½ c. mayonnaise
¼ tsp. salt
½ c. chopped celery
1½ Tbsp. minced onion
1 c. chopped frozen spinach (thawed & drained)
¾ c. cottage cheese

Dissolve gelatin in ¾ cup boiling water. Add cup cold water. Add vinegar, mayonnaise and salt. Chill until almost firm in fair-sizing mixing bowl. Beat until fluffy. Add celery, onion, spinach and cottage cheese. Place in 1 qt. mold and chill till firm. Best done day ahead. Serves 6.

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD

Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in cabbage and pour into 6½-inch ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold, surround with endive, tomato wedges and cucumber slices.

SALADS ARE the thing to be served by Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society members at their special luncheon and collected into the chapter's new salad cookbook. Here's A Quick Meatball Strogonoff

Obviously mushrooms are becoming more and more popular on the American dinner table, for the use of canned mushrooms alone has increased 11-fold in the last 35 years. Food stores large and small sell them whole, sliced and as stems and pieces.

Canned mushrooms add flavor and texture to all kinds of sauces, soups, casseroles, stews. As a for-instance, do try this quick Mushroom Meatball Stroganoff.

QUICK MEATBALL STROGANOFF

1/4 cup soft bread crumbs
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce, divided
1-1/2 pounds ground lean beef
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1-1/4 teaspoons salt, divided
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon butter or oil
1 tablespoon flour
1 can (6 to 8 oz.) sliced mushrooms
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 teaspoon chopped fresh dill or dill weed
Cooked rice or noodles

In a large mixing bowl combine bread crumbs with 3/4 cup of the tomato sauce; mix lightly. Add beef, onion, 1 teaspoon of the salt, nutmeg and black pepper; mix well but do not overmix. Shape into 1-1/2 to 2-inch meatballs. In a large skillet heat butter.

Add meatballs, turning to brown on all sides, about 8 minutes. Remove meatballs to serving dish; keep warm. To butter remaining in skillet stir in flour. Gradually add liquid from mushrooms; blend well. Add mushrooms, remaining 1/4 cup tomato sauce and 1/4 teaspoon salt, sour cream and dill. Cook until hot but do not boil.

Serve with cooked rice or noodles.

Yield: 6 portions

MUSHROOM SALAD A LA RUSSE

1 can (6 to 8 oz.) sliced mushrooms
1 can (1 lb.) mixed vegetables
1/2 cup diced canned beets
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
3 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 tablespoons milk
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
Lettuce
Chopped parsley

Drain mushrooms and mixed vegetables. In a medium bowl, combine mushrooms with mixed vegetables, beets and onion. Blend mayonnaise with milk, lemon juice, salt and black pepper. Spoon over mushroom mixture; toss gently. Serve on lettuce lined plates. Garnish with parsley.

Yield: 6 portions

You Can Save On Coatings And Seasonings By Mixing Your Own

NEW YORK (UPI) —Dramatic savings on coating and seasoning mixes for meat, poultry and fish are possible when you make the mixes yourself.

A homemade version of coating mix for chicken costs about one-third as much as a comparable commercial one designed to prepare 10 pounds, or four (2½-pound) chickens. The homemade variety will cost slightly more if you buy national instead of store brands of ingredients.

The following recipes were developed by test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association. The chicken mix will keep for months in airtight containers in a cool, dry pantry; the two containing cheese should be refrigerated, and will also keep for months.

HERBED BREAD coating for chicken is a mixture of 2 cups of dry bread crumbs, ¼ cup of flour, 3 tablespoons of paprika, 4 teaspoons of salt, 2 teaspoons each of sugar, onion powder and ground oregano, 1 teaspoon of ground red pepper and ½ teaspoon of garlic powder, plus hortening. Mix dry ingredients well together and cut in ¼ cup of shortening until mixture is again crumbly. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 2⅔ cups, enough for 4 chickens, cut in serving-size pieces. Use about ⅔ cup per chicken. Dip the chicken pieces into milk and then into coating. Arrange in single layer in ungreased shallow baking dish. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 50-60 minutes, or until tender and brown. This mix also is suitable for fish or pork chops. Use same method for coating and bake until done.

To prepare 1 meat loaf, mix ½ cup of the herbed blend with 1-3 cup of water, 2 tablespoons of ketchup and 1 egg, lightly beaten. Add 1 pound of ground beef and mix well, but do not overmix. Bake in an 8½ by 4¼ by 2½ inch loaf pan in a preheated 350-degree oven for 40 minutes. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

HERBED MEAT loaf blend starts with 2 cups of dry unflavored bread crumbs. Mix well with ¼ cup ofgrated romano or parmesan cheese, 4 teaspoons of salt, 4 teaspoons of dried parsley flakes, 2 reaspoons of basil leaves, 1 teaspoons of oregano leaves and ½ teaspoon of ground red pepper. Refrigerate in tightly covered container. Makes about 2 cups, enough for four meat loaves using 1 pound of ground beef each.

HERBED BREAD crumb blend for meatballs starts with 2 cups of unflavored dry bread crumbs and ½ cup of grated romano or parmesan cheese. Mix these well with 3 tablespoons of paprika, 5 teaspoons of salt, 1 tablespoon of dried parsley flakes, 2 teaspoons of marjoram leaves, 1 teaspoon each of powdered mustard and rosemary leaves and ½ teaspoon of ground black pepper. Refrigerate in tightly closed container. Makes 2⅔ cups, enough for 4 pounds of meat.

To use, mix 1 cup of herbed blend with ½ cup of water. Add 1 pound of ground meat and 1 egg, lightly beaten. Mix gently and shape into 1-inch balls. Place in a single layer in a casserole, pour over 1 cup of tomato sauce, cover and bake 1 hour in preheated 350-degree oven. Makes 4 servings.

Numb Fingers And Toes

BOSTON (UPI) — When you're cold or under emotional stress, do your fingers or toes blanch or go numb? If so, medical men have a name for it: Raynaud's phenomenon. It's a chronic clampdown of tiny blood-carrying vessels in the body's extremities, and is common to young adults, especially women.

The cause is unknown, but studies by Dr. Jay Coffman of Boston Medical Center revealed that reserpine, a drug widely used to treat high blood pressure, can produce improvement in some patients.

Diet Lacking

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Extension food and nutrition specialists at the Pennsylvania State University say the diets of many children fall short of the essential nutrients — calcium, ascorbic acid and vitamin A. Adequate amounts of milk, citrus fruits, and dark green and deep yellow vegetables should be in each day's meal pattern to assure adequate amounts of these nutrients.

Oven-Cooked Beef Stew Saves Time

With this recipe there's no need to brown beef cubes, adjust heat or thicken gravy. Preparation is simply a matter of combine and bake until the beef is tender and the stew delicious.

SPANISH BEEF OVEN STEW

2 pounds boneless beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
4 medium-sized carrots, cut in half crosswise and lengthwise
1 pound turnips, pared and cut in quarters.
1 leek (or 3 green onions), cut in 1-inch pieces
1 can (15 ounces) garbanzo beans, drained
1 cup tomato juice
¼ cup water
⅓ cup quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon rosemary
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Place beef, carrots, turnips, leek, garbanzo beans, tomato juice, water, tapioca, rosemary, salt and pepper in a Dutch oven. Combine thoroughly. Cover and cook in a slow oven (300°F.) for 3 to 3½ hours until meat is tender. Stir occasionally. 8 servings.

Dryer Efficiency

To keep washer and gas dryer operating efficiently, clean the lint trap after each load. Wipe the inside of the dryer drum with a damp cloth occasionally, especially if you have dried heavily starched or tinted items.

COLESLAW PARFAIT
(Mrs. Robert Bramman, Tiburon)

1 envelope gelatin
1 cup cold milk
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup cream
2 tsp. prepared mustard
1 tsp. celery seed
1 tsp. grated onion
1 tsp. salt and dash of pepper
2 cups finely shredded cabbage
Curly Endive
Peeled tomato wedges
Cucumber twists

Soften gelatin in ½ cup milk and dissolve over hot water. Cool. Combine with mayonnaise, remaining milk, cream, mustard, celery seed, onion, salt, pepper and gelatin and mix well. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in cabbage and pour into 6½-inch ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold, surround with endive, tomato wedges and cucumber slices.

24 HOUR SALAD
(Mrs. Richard Marchand, Greenbrae)

2 eggs, beaten
4 Tbsp. vinegar
4 Tbsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. butter
2 cups white cherries (halves), drained
2 cups pineapple (chunks) drained
2 cans Mandarin oranges, drained
2 cups marshmallows, quartered
1 cup whipping cream

Put eggs in double boiler and add vinegar and sugar. Beat constantly until thick and smooth. Remove from heat. Add butter and cool. When cooled, fold in whipped cream and fruit mixture. Put in molds. Serves 12-14.

RASPBERRY SURPRISE
(Mrs. Frank A. Tessin, Kentfield)

3 regular-sized package raspberry gelatin dissolved in 1¼ cups hot water. Stir in: 3 cans stewed tomatoes (break up tomatoes with fork). Add 6 drops Tabasco sauce.

Pour into a lightly oiled 12-cup ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on greens and fill center with 1 pint commercial sour cream mixed with 1 tablespoon creamed horseradish, ½ tsp. salt, and 1 tsp. sugar.

ASPIC AND AVOCADO
(Mrs. Edwin Thomas, San Rafael)

3 oz. lime flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
⅓ cup lemon juice
1½ cup mashed avocado
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup mayonnaise

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Pour lemon juice over avocado. When gelatin is cooled add remainder of ingredients. For nice texture put through a blender. Chill until set.

1 envelope plain gelatin
¼ c. cold water
1 c. boiling water
2 tbsp. sugar
1 can (10 oz.) tomato soup
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add boiling water. When cool add remaining ingredients. Stir until smooth. Add to already-set avocado very gently. Chill.

PINEAPPLE-COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD
(Mrs. James Reese, Ross)

Drain juice (save) from:
1 medium can pineapple
1 medium can apricots

Dissolve 1 pkg. orange gelatin in 1 cup hot water.

Add ½ cup pineapple and apricot juice

8 large marshmallows, cut up

When set, spread with:
¾ cup pineapple and apricot juice
¼ cup sugar
1 rounded Tbsp. flour
1 well-beaten egg
1 Tbsp. butter

Cook till thick; cool and add:
½ cup whipped cream
2 Tbsp. mayonnaise

Cover with grated American cheese. Pour into utility dish. Cut in squares to serve.

Here's A Quick Meatball Strogonoff

Obviously mushrooms are becoming more and more popular on the American dinner table, for the use of canned mushrooms alone has increased 11-fold in the last 35 years. Food stores large and small sell them whole, sliced and as stems and pieces.

Canned mushrooms add flavor and texture to all kinds of sauces, soups, casseroles, stews. As a for-instance, do try this quick Mushroom Meatball Stroganoff.

QUICK MEATBALL STROGANOFF

1/4 cup soft bread crumbs
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce, divided
1-1/2 pounds ground lean beef
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1-1/4 teaspoons salt, divided
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon butter or oil
1 tablespoon flour
1 can (6 to 8 oz.) sliced mushrooms
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 teaspoon chopped fresh dill or dill weed
Cooked rice or noodles

In a large mixing bowl combine bread crumbs with 3/4 cup of the tomato sauce; mix lightly. Add beef, onion, 1 teaspoon of the salt, nutmeg and black pepper; mix well but do not overmix. Shape into 1-1/2 to 2-inch meatballs. In a large skillet heat butter.

Add meatballs, turning to brown on all sides, about 8 minutes. Remove meatballs to serving dish; keep warm. To butter remaining in skillet stir in flour. Gradually add liquid from mushrooms; blend well. Add mushrooms, remaining 1/4 cup tomato sauce and 1/4 teaspoon salt, sour cream and dill. Cook until hot but do not boil.

Serve with cooked rice or noodles.

Yield: 6 portions

MUSHROOM SALAD A LA RUSSE

1 can (6 to 8 oz.) sliced mushrooms
1 can (1 lb.) mixed vegetables
1/2 cup diced canned beets
1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
3 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 tablespoons milk
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
Lettuce
Chopped parsley

Drain mushrooms and mixed vegetables. In a medium bowl, combine mushrooms with mixed vegetables, beets and onion. Blend mayonnaise with milk, lemon juice, salt and black pepper. Spoon over mushroom mixture; toss gently. Serve on lettuce lined plates. Garnish with parsley.

Yield: 6 portions

You Can Save On Coatings And Seasonings By Mixing Your Own

NEW YORK (UPI) —Dramatic savings on coating and seasoning mixes for meat, poultry and fish are possible when you make the mixes yourself.

A homemade version of coating mix for chicken costs about one-third as much as a comparable commercial one designed to prepare 10 pounds, or four (2½-pound) chickens. The homemade variety will cost slightly more if you buy national instead of store brands of ingredients.

The following recipes were developed by test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association. The chicken mix will keep for months in airtight containers in a cool, dry pantry; the two containing cheese should be refrigerated, and will also keep for months.

HERBED BREAD coating for chicken is a mixture of 2 cups of dry bread crumbs, ¼ cup of flour, 3 tablespoons of paprika, 4 teaspoons of salt, 2 teaspoons each of sugar, onion powder and ground oregano, 1 teaspoon of ground red pepper and ½ teaspoon of garlic powder, plus hortening. Mix dry ingredients well together and cut in ¼ cup of shortening until mixture is again crumbly. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 2⅔ cups, enough for 4 chickens, cut in serving-size pieces. Use about ⅔ cup per chicken. Dip the chicken pieces into milk and then into coating. Arrange in single layer in ungreased shallow baking dish. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 50-60 minutes, or until tender and brown. This mix also is suitable for fish or pork chops. Use same method for coating and bake until done.

To prepare 1 meat loaf, mix ½ cup of the herbed blend with 1-3 cup of water, 2 tablespoons of ketchup and 1 egg, lightly beaten. Add 1 pound of ground beef and mix well, but do not overmix. Bake in an 8½ by 4¼ by 2½ inch loaf pan in a preheated 350-degree oven for 40 minutes. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

HERBED MEAT loaf blend starts with 2 cups of dry unflavored bread crumbs. Mix well with ¼ cup ofgrated romano or parmesan cheese, 4 teaspoons of salt, 4 teaspoons of dried parsley flakes, 2 reaspoons of basil leaves, 1 teaspoons of oregano leaves and ½ teaspoon of ground red pepper. Refrigerate in tightly covered container. Makes about 2 cups, enough for four meat loaves using 1 pound of ground beef each.

HERBED BREAD crumb blend for meatballs starts with 2 cups of unflavored dry bread crumbs and ½ cup of grated romano or parmesan cheese. Mix these well with 3 tablespoons of paprika, 5 teaspoons of salt, 1 tablespoon of dried parsley flakes, 2 teaspoons of marjoram leaves, 1 teaspoon each of powdered mustard and rosemary leaves and ½ teaspoon of ground black pepper. Refrigerate in tightly closed container. Makes 2⅔ cups, enough for 4 pounds of meat.

To use, mix 1 cup of herbed blend with ½ cup of water. Add 1 pound of ground meat and 1 egg, lightly beaten. Mix gently and shape into 1-inch balls. Place in a single layer in a casserole, pour over 1 cup of tomato sauce, cover and bake 1 hour in preheated 350-degree oven. Makes 4 servings.

Numb Fingers And Toes

BOSTON (UPI) — When you're cold or under emotional stress, do your fingers or toes blanch or go numb? If so, medical men have a name for it: Raynaud's phenomenon. It's a chronic clampdown of tiny blood-carrying vessels in the body's extremities, and is common to young adults, especially women.

The cause is unknown, but studies by Dr. Jay Coffman of Boston Medical Center revealed that reserpine, a drug widely used to treat high blood pressure, can produce improvement in some patients.

Diet Lacking

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Extension food and nutrition specialists at the Pennsylvania State University say the diets of many children fall short of the essential nutrients — calcium, ascorbic acid and vitamin A. Adequate amounts of milk, citrus fruits, and dark green and deep yellow vegetables should be in each day's meal pattern to assure adequate amounts of these nutrients.

Oven-Cooked Beef Stew Saves Time

With this recipe there's no need to brown beef cubes, adjust heat or thicken gravy. Preparation is simply a matter of combine and bake until the beef is tender and the stew delicious.

SPANISH BEEF OVEN STEW

2 pounds boneless beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
4 medium-sized carrots, cut in half crosswise and lengthwise
1 pound turnips, pared and cut in quarters.
1 leek (or 3 green onions), cut in 1-inch pieces
1 can (15 ounces) garbanzo beans, drained
1 cup tomato juice
¼ cup water
⅓ cup quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon rosemary
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Place beef, carrots, turnips, leek, garbanzo beans, tomato juice, water, tapioca, rosemary, salt and pepper in a Dutch oven. Combine thoroughly. Cover and cook in a slow oven (300°F.) for 3 to 3½ hours until meat is tender. Stir occasionally. 8 servings.

Dryer Efficiency

To keep washer and gas dryer operating efficiently, clean the lint trap after each load. Wipe the inside of the dryer drum with a damp cloth occasionally, especially if you have dried heavily starched or tinted items.

Chanel's Last Collection Is Shown Without Coco

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—The top step of the mirrored staircase at Chanel was empty yesterday.

Gabrielle "Coco" Chanel sat on that step during every collection of her famous casual clothes since the salon was remodeled in 1931.

Two weeks after the last great female Paris designer died at the age of 87, only two of her old journalist friends who always accompanied her, sat on the lower steps on the staircase.

IN THE GOLD and white salon below, her wealthy clients, including Madame Claude Pompidou, wife of the president of France, and several Rothschilds, paid the designer homage by gathering for the last collection that Chanel personally attended to before she died.

One of the executives of the house said that the Chanel No. 5 perfume will carry on and the designing part of the business will continue with fabrics and designs Chanel left behind. But the spokesman admitted frankly, "We know it will be difficult."

Fashion experts said they believed the salon might only last another two seasons without Chanel's personal touch. The house of the late Jacques Fath closed in similar circumstances but Dior, Lanvin and Patou salons kept going after their founders' deaths because other designers took over. But Chanel styles were only Chanel. They were again today.

Pierre Cardin, leader of the fashion revolutionists, returned the leg to glory with half-hidden shorts and a few mini dresses at his spring-summer collection today.

AND BACK at the quiet beige salon of Pierre Balmain, his regime kept in power longer classic clothes covering the knees that have delighted millionaires wives for 25 years and inspired the "silent majority" of women the world over.

Cardin's show is not just for the young in heart who rebel against traditional clothes, however. His collection was so large that there were plenty of sheaths with wrap-around skirts and trailing scarves or beautiful little buttonless coats covering matching dresses that the wife of any ambassador could wear.

While electronic music droned away in the black glass showroom of his theater, the Cardin girls paraded black leather shorts discreetly half-hidden by matching leather skirts slit up both sides and topped by tight ribbed sewaters.

For resort wear there were printed cotton dresses cut in a U-shape and split up each side to reveal shorts. The Cardin evening shorts were topped by navy silk slit sheaths or micro-mini dresses in satin with swirling accordion pleated skirts and long sleeves.

BELOW-KNEE coats were split up the back to the waist. Suits at mid-knee had long jackets with scalloped edges.

"Fashion freedom" is the new motto in Paris, with designer Rosette Mett of the Torrente Salon proclaiming "there are no decrees, no imposed skirt lengths but a liberty of hemlines."

But even the Torrente show had its limitations—every coat and every dress covered the knee, from just below to midi. The long knee-covered look also held sway at Louis Feraud, Jean-Louis Scherrer, Marc Vaughan and Madeleine De Rauch. Only Philippe Venet showed mini dresses, and those always were worn with much longer coats. The designers were unanimous in choosing midi-maxi for after 5 pm.

IN OTHER words, trouser lengths range from the ankle to as short as nature allows. But skirt lengths mainly are below the knee so far in the collections.

Even with this limitation, for the first time in the history of women's clothing women are free to show as much or little of the leg as they want.

As Miss Mett says, "women of today must be able to say no to the dictates of a style which often does not suit their bodies, their personality, their life and their tastes. Our ambition is to make all women well-dressed, the thin, the fat, the short and the tall, the young and the less young, the classics and the originals."

For females who groan at the idea of shorts, the collections feature plenty of slim dresses just covering the knee with matching belted coats.

THE BIG dress of spring so far is the shirtmaker or shirtwaist. Venet and Jean Louis Scherrer and Torrente all showed those soft printed silks with long full sleeves, swinging pleated skirts, snugly belted waists and long matching scarves around the neckline.

Long trousers still are shown, usually one-piece jump suits with some midilengths polka dot vinyl pants at Louis Feraud to go with his matching maxi raincoats and souwester hats. Not many suits are around. Knickers have not appeared so far.

The Scherrer collection was his first in two years.

AAUW Hears Talk On Equal Education, Employment For Women

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Women who believe there is little or no discrimination against them because of their sex would have been surprised and enlightened had they attended yesterday mornings meetings of the Mill Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women at the Mill Valley Library.

Guest speakers were Jacqueline Bradford, deputy regional director of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission from the San Francisco office, and Mrs. Alvin Zimmerman of Pleasanton, chairman of the AAUW State Division's Status of Women Committee.

"EQUAL EDUCATION and Employment of Women" was the topic, with Miss Bradford explaining the current situation in employment and Mrs. Zimmerman, the state division's newest projects.

The most recent development came Monday, Miss Bradford said with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in its first sex discrimination decision under the employment provision of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. This was that employers cannot refuse to hire women solely because they have small children unless fathers are also denied jobs.

"It was a bitter-sweet victory, however," Miss Bradford reported, "because the court sent the matter back to the trial court for hearing as to whether the test case of Mrs. Ida Phillips, mother of seven children, could be denied a job under the special exception to the law. This exception says it isn't illegal to refuse a job because of race, color, religion, natural origin or sex where such trait is a bona fide occupational requirement.

"The Supreme Court said that parenthood, if demonstrably more relevant to job performance for a woman than for a man, could be a basis for refusal to hire a woman.

"This point has not been settled in this case," Miss Bradford said. "Bona fide occupational qualification is the key term. Since it has not been spelled out by law, many claims cannot be settled.

THERE ARE many cases of sex discrimination in the lower courts, she pointed out. She said many of the cases the Equal Opportunities Commission deals with involve the state's so-called "Protective" laws for women in connection with limitations on number of hours of regular work, overtime and weight lifting.

Typical was the complaint she described of a Mrs. Rosenfeld who was denied a job as a station master by the Southern Pacific Railroad under these laws. Though she worked all day in an office job, then went home to her ranch and pitched hay and lifted up to 95 pounds — and the company itself admitting she was qualified — the state law prohibited her from taking the job at a higher rate of pay.

"These state laws are invalid," said Miss Bradford. If for no other reasons than federal law supremacy and that they have a discriminatory effect against women because of their sex."

Equal pay cases, she explained, are settled on the basis of the Equal Pay Act, and more and more claims are being filed and won.

MISS BRADFORD said the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission covers basically private employers — there are special laws for government and educational institution employment.

"We accept charges of discrimination, investigate them and

Family Dinner On Golden Occasion

By MOLLY MARIN

The 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer A. Weden, who were married Jan. 26, 1921, in Boston, Mass., was celebrated with a family dinner Saturday at Sabella's restaurant in Mill Valley.

Twenty-four relatives, including the Wedens' son, Elmer Weden Jr., joined the celebration. Mr. Weden was vice president and general manager of the J.W. Hale Corp. in Manchester, Conn., and president of the Manchester Memorial Hospital board of trustees before retiring in Fairfax in 1961.

The couple was also honored by the First Methodist Church of San Rafael when they were presented with 50 golden roses at the Sunday service.

MR. AND Mrs. Robert Sockolov of San Rafael have returned from a 13-day cruise from Los Angeles to Mexico stopping at Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and Manzanillo.

SGT. STEPHEN E. Hansen, who claimed Hyon Chee Kim of Seoul, Korea, as his bride on Dec. 18, returned to Novato Monday. His bride will join him in March.

Sergeant Hansen, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hansen of Novato, was graduated from Novato High School and went to Korea in 1969, serving in the Army. He is the brother of Norman Hansen of Crocket and Martin and Barbara Hansen of Novato. His bride is the daughter of Yon Hong Kim and the late Mrs. Kim. They were married at Munsanni Ceremonial Hall in Seoul.

'Housewives Should Reshape Industry'

Ralph Nader's sister has urged American women "to really wheel around some of the companies whose products they use."

U. S. housewives should use their collective purchasing power to reshape the thinking of American industry, says Laura Nader Milleron.

"American women haven't taken advantage of their buying clout. One of the most powerful consumer groups in Japan is the housewives' consumer group. Women in this country could really wheel around some of the companies whose products they use," she says.

American women, declares Mrs. Milleron, must also be given further opportunity to compete in the professions.

"There are more women physicists in Italy than in America," says the anthropology professor at the University of California.

The answer to upgrading the status of women does not lie in telling them all to become professionals. Most women are housewives. We should upgrade the job of housekeeper. American housewives have one of the hardest jobs in the world, simply because of their isolation.

HELEN HELP US!

A Good Put-Down For The Woman Who Constantly Ogles Her Face

DEAR HELEN:

You know the type: The woman who has everything and calls attention to it by "worrying" about her perfection. She spends more time on her face than I do on my whole family. Her skin is flawless, every eyelash perfect. She's entirely in love with herself.

And she's always making less endowed girl friends aware by "seeing" a tiny blemish in the mirror; then we're supposed to respond with lavish praise.

Please tell me a good put-down, next time she ogles herself with those gorgeous orbs and asks, "What do you do for bags under your eyes?" when she expects me to exclaim, "What bags?" — TIRED OF BEING MRS. STOOGE

DEAR TIRED:

Tell her to wear an "eyebra," says my husband, Bob. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Five months ago, Tony and I were married after knowing each other three weeks.

Today a letter came in the mail and I opened it by mistake. It was from a lawyer in Ohio, and it contained a legal paper for Tony to sign so that he may obtain his final divorce decree.

I'm afraid to show it to him, as this means we aren't married, and maybe he wants it that way. He is a perfect husband, but do I really know him? I knew there was a former wife, but assumed he was free. Maybe he thought so, too — I hope!!

If I seal the letter up I may never know the truth. If I tell Tony I snooped, he may hate me. Either way, will we have to get married again? And will he want to? — NOT QUITE A WIFE

DEAR NOT:

Tell Tony the truth and expect the same from him. A "perfect husband" (almost) won't let you down, though it may require another ceremony to make him perfectly legal. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Why is it that my wonderful, strong, handsome husband isn't normal?

I mean any normal male of 24 would be satisfied with looking at baseball and football games on television, playing golf or tennis. But my man is some kind of nut who flirts with danger. He skis on impossible trails, plays La Crosse, surfs, skin dives — and his last announcement of sky diving is the final blow.

How can he do this to me? I'm all worried out after only six months of marriage. Will he ever become that non-athletic guy I want for a husband and father of our children, or should I join him and we can at least die together? — SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN:

Is your husband really a danger freak or are you a chicken?

I'd guess there's a little of both in your family, and the only solution is compromise. Get involved in his sports and perhaps some of your caution will rub off on him — especially after he becomes a father. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

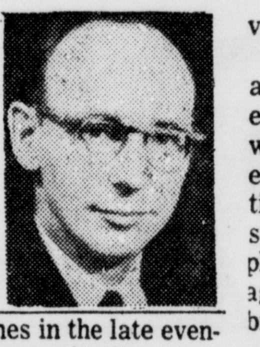
Trapped Into Buying Magazines You Don't Want? — Take Heart



WASHINGTON — People who feel tricked or trapped into buying subscriptions to magazines they don't want stand to benefit from a court case just concluded by the Justice Department and Cowles Communications Inc., publisher of Look and several other magazines.

Settlement of the case makes clear that magazine subscribers have a right to cancel a subscription and get a proportionate refund at any time despite a written contract that appears to bind them to make monthly payments for 2-1/2 years for 5-year subscriptions.

In most magazine subscriptions, where the entire fee is paid in advance, the right to cancel and get a refund for the unused portion of the subscription price has been honored by publishers.

BUT IN in monthly payment subscriptions, known as Paid During Service (PDS), companies have usually insisted that the long-term contracts were binding and that no refunds were required even when the subscriber may have a legitimate complaint.

People who stopped paying because of alleged misrepresentation have often been subjected to high-pressure dunning tactics. These have included long distance telephone calls to subscribers and their employers, sometimes in the late evenings or early morning hours.

The PDS system of selling magazines has grown into yearly sales of more than $100 million. The principal companies involved, in addition to Cowles, have included the Hearst Corp., Time, Inc., and the former Curtis publishing organization now run by Perfect Film and Chemical Co.

After a long investigation, sparked by Rep. Fred B. Rooney (D-Pa.), the Justice Department filed formal charges of mail fraud against five subsidiaries of Cowles. They are Home Reference Library, Home Reader Service, Mutual Readers League, Civic Reading Club and Educational Book Club.

IN THE settlement, the firms were fined $50,000 after pleading "no contest." They also agreed to a consent order forbidding them from continuing certain practices but not forcing them to admit that they violated any law.

In effect, the settlement was a deal which allowed the government to appear as the victor while granting Cowles, the parent organization, some protection against massive consumer suits. The absence of a guilty plea, for example, makes damage suits more difficult to bring.

Terms of the settlement also seem to indicate little chance of a subscriber getting a full refund on the basis of the fraud charge. But refunds for the unused portion of cancelled subscriptions would definitely appear to be collectible.

This is the view of the prosecuting attorney, A. L. Donielson, of Des Moines. He says there should be no question about the subscriber's right to cancel and get a refund.

FUTURE SUBSCRIBERS would also be protected under the terms of the consent order requiring full disclosure during the sales pitch. Salesmen would have to disclose that the purpose of the call is to sell magazines, not to conduct a quiz or survey, as many have indicated.

Companies also would be prohibited from threatening legal action when they did not intend to do so.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

A Good Put-Down For The Woman Who Constantly Ogles Her Face

DEAR HELEN:

You know the type: The woman who has everything and calls attention to it by "worrying" about her perfection. She spends more time on her face than I do on my whole family. Her skin is flawless, every eyelash perfect. She's entirely in love with herself.

And she's always making less endowed girl friends aware by "seeing" a tiny blemish in the mirror; then we're supposed to respond with lavish praise.

Please tell me a good put-down, next time she ogles herself with those gorgeous orbs and asks, "What do you do for bags under your eyes?" when she expects me to exclaim, "What bags?" — TIRED OF BEING MRS. STOOGE

DEAR TIRED:

Tell her to wear an "eye-bra," says my husband, Bob. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Five months ago, Tony and I were married after knowing each other three weeks.

Today a letter came in the mail and I opened it by mistake. It was from a lawyer in Ohio, and it contained a legal paper for Tony to sign so that he may obtain his final divorce decree.

I'm afraid to show it to him, as this means we aren't married, and maybe he wants it that way. He is a perfect husband, but do I really know him? I knew there was a former wife, but assumed he was free. Maybe he thought so, too — I hope!!

If I seal the letter up I may never know the truth. If I tell Tony I snooped, he may hate me. Either way, will we have to get married again? And will he want to? — NOT QUITE A WIFE

DEAR NOT:

Tell Tony the truth and expect the same from him. A "perfect husband" (almost) won't let you down, though it may require another ceremony to make him perfectiy legal. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Why is it that my wonderful, strong, handsome husband isn't normal?

I mean any normal male of 24 would be satisfied with looking at baseball and football games on television, playing golf or tennis. But my man is some kind of nut who flirts with danger. He skis on impossible trails, plays La Crosse, surfs, skin dives — and his last announcement of sky diving is the final blow.

How can he do this to me? I'm all worried out after only six months of marriage. Will he ever become that non-athletic guy I want for a husband and father of our children, or should I join him and we can at least die together? — SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN:

Is your husband really a danger freak or are you a chicken?

I'd guess there's a little of both in your family, and the only solution is compromise. Get involved in his sports and perhaps some of your caution will rub off on him — especially after he becomes a father. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

Trapped Into Buying Magazines You Don't Want? — Take Heart

WASHINGTON — People who feel tricked or trapped into buying subscriptions to magazines they don't want stand to benefit from a court case just concluded by the Justice Department and Cowles Communications Inc., publisher of Look and several other magazines.

Settlement of the case makes clear that magazine subscribers have a right to cancel a subscription and get a proportionate refund at any time despite a written contract that appears to bind them to make monthly payments for 2-1/2 years for 5-year subscriptions.

In most magazine subscriptions, where the entire fee is paid in advance, the right to cancel and get a refund for the unused portion of the subscription price has been honored by publishers.

BUT IN in monthly payment subscriptions, known as Paid During Service (PDS), companies have usually insisted that the long-term contracts were binding and that no refunds were required even when the subscriber may have a legitimate complaint.

People who stopped paying because of alleged misrepresentation have often been subjected to high-pressure dunning tactics. These have included long distance telephone calls to subscribers and their employers, sometimes in the late evenings or early morning hours.

Companies also would be prohibited from threatening legal action when they did not intend to do so.

Sonoma Volunteer Heads New Unit

MRS. JOHN SCIUTTO

A new organization, Auxiliary of Sonoma State Hospital, has elected Mrs. John J. Sciutto of Novato its first president. She has been a volunteer for three years at Sonoma.

Barbara Sciutto and her husband, a partner of Sunset Scavenger Co. in San Francisco have five children, Mrs. Jack Rademann of Novato, Mrs. Gary Vann of San Francisco, Michael Sciutto of San Luis Obispo and Patricia Sciutto, 16 years old and a patient at Sonoma State Hospital; and Thomas Sciutto, 9 years old, living at home.

She was born in Kansas City, Mo., and attended schools there. She moved to San Francisco 21 years ago and has lived in Marin County three years. Bowling, oil painting and sewing are among the new president's interests.

"The auxiliary hopes to assist in obtaining those items for the hospital that the State of California cannot provide," Mrs. Sciutto said. An elephant train for the transportation of the physically handicapped patients is just coming off the production line. This has been made possible by a handful of parents and interested friends of the hospital and has taken five years to accomplish," she said.

"Sonomaland, a park and recreational area on the hospital grounds has been in the 'wishing' stage longer than the train with occasional contributions coming in.) "There is a picnic area without tables or benches," she says. "These are but two of the items we would like to help the people of Sonoma State Hospital have and enjoy."

Listed among its projects and activities are an orientation coffee and membership drive on Feb. 18, a golf-a-thon this spring and a Christmas bazaar.

Officers elected to serve with Mrs. Sciutto are Mmes. James Marsh, of Glen Ellen, first vice president; Jack Rademann of Novato, second vice president; John Jackson of San Rafael, secretary; and Jerome Schuman of Fairfax, treasurer.

Equality For Women In Employment And Education

attempt first to conciliate the parties. Many cases never get to the courts because we work out a great many agreements. Companies may see clearly what is right or don't want the bother of going to court or don't like the bad publicity.

"The commission has issued hundreds of decisions" she said. "Many deal with stereotypes of the conception of the female role, and there are no guide lines."

Typical of objections on this basis were denial of jobs as night watchman and guards handling firearms because of the danger, and one company's refusal to give a woman a position as messenger because they had no women's bicycles.

"Decisions have to be on an individual basis," she maintained. "Not all women want such jobs, but if they do, they should have the opportunity to be hired."

SHE SAID a large number of cases of discrimination against women involve job classifications and seniority systems.

"Standards, qualifications and requirements are set up with built-in discriminatory effects against certain groups, and one of the groups can be women. The whole problem is really one of combating a system which has often been unconsciously and unintentionally constructed so that it keeps out certain groups," she said.

Offenders are not only industry, she said, but businesses such as banks and insurance companies and educational institutions.

"When there is no compliance with a decision of the commission, everything leads to the courts," she declared, adding that though this is an extremely slow process, progress is being made.

"Previously women haven't fought, but they have more support now. They don't have to take discrimination any more."

Mrs. Zimmerman's special concern was discrimination against women in education.

QUOTING FROM a report by faculty women to the academic senate of the University of California regarding the differential treatment of women, she said statistics were very incriminating on how many had applied for positions, been accepted or been given full professorships.

"There are only 15 women who are full professors!" she exclaimed.

New projects of the state AAUW, she said, are an educated women power committee set up to work on such inequities and apply social pressures in behalf of changing policies, and a committee that will be concerned with wrong attitudes in school counseling programs given young girls regarding their second rate roles.

"If we can get the money," she said, "we hope to make a semidocumentary movie to appeal to both boys and girls about planning their lives."

Child care centers are another important interest of the state AAUW, she indicated, since: "3,000,000 women work in California — at least half have to work — one in 10 are the sole support of families — and one-third have minor children."

Working in child care centers is the profession of the future she predicted; yet there are no university programs for training directors.

attempt first to conciliate the parties. Many cases never get to the courts because we work out a great many agreements. Companies may see clearly what is right or don't want the bother of going to court or don't like the bad publicity.

"The commission has issued hundreds of decisions" she said. "Many deal with stereotypes of the conception of the female role, and there are no guide lines."

Typical of objections on this basis were denial of jobs as night watchman and guards handling firearms because of the danger, and one company's refusal to give a woman a position as messenger because they had no women's bicycles.

"Decisions have to be on an individual basis," she maintained. "Not all women want such jobs, but if they do, they should have the opportunity to be hired."

SHE SAID a large number of cases of discrimination against women involve job classifications and seniority systems.

"Standards, qualifications and requirements are set up with built-in discriminatory effects against certain groups, and one of the groups can be women. The whole problem is really one of combating a system which has often been unconsciously and unintentionally constructed so that it keeps out certain groups," she said.

Offenders are not only industry, she said, but businesses such as banks and insurance companies and educational institutions.

"When there is no compliance with a decision of the commission, everything leads to the courts," she declared, adding that though this is an extremely slow process, progress is being made.

"Previously women haven't fought, but they have more support now. They don't have to take discrimination any more."

Mrs. Zimmerman's special concern was discrimination against women in education.

QUOTING FROM a report by faculty women to the academic senate of the University of California regarding the differential treatment of women, she said statistics were very incriminating on how many had applied for positions, been accepted or been given full professorships.

"There are only 15 women who are full professors!" she exclaimed.

New projects of the state AAUW, she said, are an educated women power committee set up to work on such inequities and apply social pressures in behalf of changing policies, and a committee that will be concerned with wrong attitudes in school counseling programs given young girls regarding their second rate roles.

"If we can get the money," she said, "we hope to make a semidocumentary movie to appeal to both boys and girls about planning their lives."

Child care centers are another important interest of the state AAUW, she indicated, since: "3,000,000 women work in California — at least half have to work — one in 10 are the sole support of families — and one-third have minor children."

Working in child care centers is the profession of the future she predicted; yet there are no university programs for training directors.

Sonoma Volunteer Heads New Unit

A new organization, Auxiliary of Sonoma State Hospital, has elected Mrs. John J. Sciutto of Novato its first president. She has been a volunteer for three years at Sonoma.

Barbara Sciutto and her husband, a partner of Sunset Scavenger Co. in San Francisco have five children, Mrs. Jack Rademann of Novato, Mrs. Gary Vann of San Francisco, Michael Sciutto of San Luis Obispo and Patricia Sciutto, 16 years old and a patient at Sonoma State Hospital; and Thomas Sciutto, 9 years old, living at home.

She was born in Kansas City, Mo., and attended schools there. She moved to San Francisco 21 years ago and has lived in Marin County three years. Bowling, oil painting and sewing are among the new president's interests.

"The auxiliary hopes to assist in obtaining those items for the hospital that the State of California cannot provide," Mrs. Sciutto said. An elephant train for the transportation of the physically handicapped patients is just coming off the production line. This has been made possible by a handful of parents and interested friends of the hospital and has taken five years to accomplish," she said.

"Sonomaland, a park and recreational area on the hospital grounds has been in the 'wishing' stage longer than the train with occasional contributions coming in.) "There is a picnic area without tables or benches," she says. "These are but two of the items we would like to help the people of Sonoma State Hospital have and enjoy."

Listed among its projects and activities are an orientation coffee and membership drive on Feb. 18, a golf-a-thon this spring and a Christmas bazaar.

MRS. JOHN SCIUTTO

Officers elected to serve with Mrs. Sciutto are Mmes. James Marsh, of Glen Ellen, first vice president; Jack Rademann of Novato, second vice president; John Jackson of San Rafael, secretary; and Jerome Schuman of Fairfax, treasurer.

DRAMA REVIEW

Should A Comic Be A Salesman?

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

"PLAY IT AGAIN, SAM" — A comedy by Woody Allen. Directed by Ben Gerard. Settings by William Ritman; lighting by Martin Aronstein, and costumes by Ann Roth. The cast: Red Buttons as Allen Felix, Connie Day as Nancy Felix, Peter De Maio as Bogey, William Bogert as Dick Christie, Deborah Deeble as Linda Christie, Glory McRae as Dream Sharon, Rebecca Shaw as Sharon Lake, Tanya Duncan as Gina, Jan Cobler as Vanessa, Marika Choma as a go-go girl, Julie Prince as a museum girl, and Miss McRae as Barbara Tyler.

SAN FRANCISCO — At least one thing about Red Buttons, noted stage film and television personality, he knew how to keep the usually quick-exit Curran Theater audience a little longer last night — just throw in a little nightclub patter and fast one-liners.

But if he was sincere in his final post-curtain call pitch about drumming up trade for Woody Allen's comedy, "Play It Again, Sam," of which he is the star, he spoiled a sometimes amusing evening. Hopefully it was all in jest.

"Play It Again, Sam," is an ideal vehicle for the older-than-30 generation who likes to gobble up sexy one-liners. It should make a tremendous hit when it makes the town and gown circuit and most likely a future production of the Ross Valley Players.

While Allen is one of our finer young comics, some of the crispness which he penned in his first play, "Don't Drink the Water" and the delightful film, "What's New, Pussycat?", is lacking in "Sam."

Such lines as "I smoked pot once and had a bad reaction; I tried to take my pants off over my head'' were just a little wearing.

Most of the evening Buttons as Allen Felix, a film critic in search of a girl after his wife walked out on him, is delightful. The veteran comic knows how to handle his lines, playing them for sustained laughter. He even comes off good as a loser in his finally found affair with his best friend's wife. He is however, counseled, by his alter-ego — the film image of Humphrey Bogart — handled expertly by Peter De Maio right down to the pulled down hat, trench coat and cigarette.

As his amour, Deborah Deeble, makes a sweet and rather wacky Linda Christie. When Buttons seemed to overact in his advancements, she managed to stave off awkward stage movements.

Helping to make the evening bounce along a little tighter were Connie Day as Nancy Felix, who is only seen in Allan's daydreaming, and William Bogert as Dick Christie, the young corporate upstart who probably dialed telephone numbers in his sleep.

For a touring company, the setting by William Ritman was in far better shape and done in more tasteful decor than seen in past roadshow productions and Martin Aronstein's lighting played an integral part in the over-all presentation.

As Buttons mentioned "Sam" will be at the Curran Theater through Feb. 6 with evening performances at 8:30 p.m., except Sunday at 7 p.m. with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, 2:30 p.m.

Behr Preparing Bill To Ban Seismic Explorations

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, announced today that he was preparing legislation to prohibit the oil industry from conducting seismic explorations off the California coast.

Behr said his measure was sparked by a request from Humble Oil Co. and Phillips Oil Co. for renewal of their permits to conduct such explorations along the coast from Mendocino County to the Mexican border. The permits expire this month, and Behr said he would oppose their renewal in testimony tomorrow before the State Lands Commission in Sacramento.

Behr said his measure would close the last loophole in state laws establishing an oil sanctuary along the coast and in San Francisco Bay. Oil and gas drilling and core sampling were barred in the sanctuary, which last year was extended by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, to include the bay and most of the north coast to Oregon.

But the state's oil sanctuary law was silent on seismic explorations, in which explosive charges are detonated and measurements of their shock waves used to find underwater oil deposits.

Permits for such explorations, Behr said, "represent the first link in a chain reaction leading to core drilling and then platform drilling." If seismic explorations turned up oil, he said, the inevitable result would be "tremendous pressure" on the state by the oil companies to open up the sanctuary to full-scale drilling.

The oil sanctuary law was passed after the 1969 oil leak in the Santa Barbara Channel.

Since the oil companies were barred from taking core samples or drilling within the sanctuary, Behr said, "then no proper reason can be advanced for the granting of this (seismic exploration) permit."

He noted that the Humble and Phillips permits were first granted in 1964 and had been renewed by the State Lands Commission routinely every six months since that date. The last reported explorations under the permit were in 1966 and 1967, Behr said.

Behr stressed that the state permit was of crucial importance to the oil companies, since a state permit was required in order to conduct seismic explorations on adjacent federal lands beyond the state's three-mile jurisdiction. The freshman senator noted that his point was not revealed on the commission's agenda for tomorrow.

Behr, noting the lands commission's staff previously justified such permits for providing scientific information, said that this rationale was "ridiculous." He said that such information was "like feeding lettuce to a hungry rabbit."

As for the lands commission's hearing on the permits, Behr said, "There is no need for further hearings. Santa Barbara and San Francisco Bay are testimony enough."

North Marin Federation Shows Growth

The North Marin Federation of Homeowners Associations has grown to a membership of 11 associations representing about 3,500 homes, it was reported at a recent federation meeting by president Guthrie R. Greene.

Plans for 1971 include expansion of some existing associations and formation of new associations, Greene said.

Holdout Is Threatening Market Halt

I-J Special Report

WALNUT CREEK—A walkout by one holdout local of the Retail Clerks Union still could shut down practically all supermarkets in eight Bay Area counties, a negotiator warned today.

John Bacon, negotiator for the Food Employers Association, said no changes have been made in the offer that six Retail Clerks' locals accepted in voting Sunday. The Contra Costa Local 1179 rejected the offer by a vote of 470 to 455.

Should the Contra Costa union members strike, other counties' supermarkets — including Marin and Sonoma — would close by previous agrement, Bacon explained.

A spokesman for the Contra Costa local said the members would meet in two shifts tomorrow for more discussion and possibly second votes on the three-year contract offer. The meetings will be held at 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. in the Richmond Civic Auditorium.

Both Bacon and the clerks' spokesman said no new offers have been made since Sunday's vote. The negotiated package would provide a 75-cent hourly raise retroactive to Jan. 1, 25-cent raises for the second and third years, and a 4-cent improvement in payments to health care and pension benefits.

The maximum pension for retiring clerks would be increased from the present $250 and $425 per month, the union spokesman said.

No more negotiations are scheduled, pending the outcome of tomorrow's vote in Contra Costa, Bacon said today.

Cost-Cutting Plan For Angela's Trial

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation that could save Marin taxpayers several $100,000 in trial costs from the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Hall of Justice has been introduced by Assemblyman Pauline Davis, D-Portola.

A 1961 law by Mrs. Davis provided state reimbursement to counties for any homicide trial cost in excess of the amount the county could raise by 10 cents on its property tax rate.

Her new measure (AB 26) would cut the figure to five cents, thus halving the amount a county would have to pay before the state picks up the rest of the trial cost.

In Marin, 10 cents on the property tax raises about $650,000, thus her bill would cut to $325,000 the amount the county would pay before qualifying for state reimbursement.

Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell has estimated the cost of trying Angela Y. Davis and Ruchell Magee at $200,000 just to June 30, but he has figured the total cost of damage suits, insurance, medical expenses and security following the shoot-out at $1.25 million.

How much of this total would qualify under Mrs. Davis' bill was unclear, but she told the Independent-Journal yesterday that it would cover "anything related with the trial."

Mrs. Davis noted that she won passage last year of a bill cutting the figure from 10 to three cents, but that Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed it on the ground that the state could not afford such payments. She said no estimate was available on the cost to the state of her measure, but that one would be made soon.

She said that she passed the 10-cent measure in 1961 when Sierra County was hit with the cost of the Larry Lord Motherwell trial. It also took a special state appropriation to help the little county pay for the trial.

Nelson To Show Cause On Request

Warden Louis S. Nelson of San Quentin Prison was ordered yesterday to show cause in Marin Superior Court Feb. 23 why convict Ruchell Magee should not be interviewed by a reporter for a weekly Marin publication.

Alice Yarish, a writer for the Pacific Sun, obtained the order on Nelson from Judge Joseph Wilson

Mrs. Yarish said Magee was willing to see her but was blocked by a prison order.

Both Magee and Angela Y. Davis are covered by an order from Judge E. Warren McGuire that no one connected with their case shall discuss it in public.

Miss Davis and Magee are charged with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in the unsuccessful courtroom escape attempt that killed four persons, including a judge, at the Hall of Justice in August.

Stringent Pollution Plan

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Unprecedented legislation to prohibit any variance from air pollution controls has been introduced by Sen. Gordon Cologne, R-Indio.

The Bay Area Air Pollution Control District had 19 variances outstanding on Jan. 1, including special exemptions for oil refineries, Pacific Gas and Electric Co. and for open burning at Angel Island State Park and at Point Reyes National Seashore. Some of the variances were more than six years old.

But under Cologne's bill (SB 87), all sources of air contamination would have to meet all district rules, regulations and orders. The bills would apply to all air pollution control districts in the state.

The effect of Cologne's bill would be to shut down emission sources if they could not meet district regulations. Variances in the Bay Area district are granted by its hearing board upon a showing by the affected source that it temporarily cannot meet district emission limits.

Protest Hearing For Booted UBAC Groups

OAKLAND (UPI) —The United Bay Area Crusade's new president says that agencies which have been notified their funds would be slashed could count on their usual amounts of money pending appeals.

Jerome W. Hull, the new president, also told a Tuesday night crusade group that a meeting would be held Feb. 8 with agencies protesting cutbacks.

"It is our hope that at this meeting not only can differences be aired but at least initial steps can be taken toward their resolution," added Hull, who is the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. president.

(Marin agencies cut off entirely were St. Vincent's School for Boys in Marinwood and Marin Aid to Retarded Children. The Red Cross, Salvation Army and Young Men's Christian Association, all in Marin, received sharp cuts.

Saying it was seeking "new directions," particularly in the field of minority groups, the crusade has announced plans to cut off support to 29 agencies, trim funds for another 66 and ask 72 to merge into 13 area-wide organizations.

"If, as a result of this appeal process, we find that there have been inequities, we intend to correct them," Hull declared.

Another speaker, volunteer Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, warned:

"UBAC presently faces a crisis of confidence which arises in part because it has acted unilaterally, sometimes without knowledge of all the pertinent facts, and without adequate notice or process, in its relations with some of its agencies."

They also criticized agencies who had declared opposition to the plan which would set aside $1 million for minority groups.

"We applaud the UBAC leadership who have had the guts to say 'Yes, we've got to make changes and let's start now,' said Larry Gonzales, chairman of the Bay Area Raza for United Funds at a news conference.

"Those agencies who complain about budget cuts should instead be taking a supercritical look at themselves, because for the first time in years they're having to prove their relevancy, not only to the crusade budget committee but also to the entire Bay Area community," he added.

Maria Salazar, Spanish Speaking Information Center director, said, "Our people are giving too. They are the people who work in the factories, where they are more pressured to give."

DRAMA REVIEW

Should A Comic Be A Salesman?

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

"PLAY IT AGAIN, SAM" — A comedy by Woody Allen. Directed by Ben Gerard. Settings by William Ritman; lighting by Martin Aronstein, and costumes by Ann Roth. The cast: Red Buttons as Allen Felix, Connie Day as Nancy Felix, Peter De Maio as Bogey, William Bogert as Dick Christie, Deborah Deeble as Linda Christie, Glory McRae as Dream Sharon, Rebecca Shaw as Sharon Lake, Tanya Duncan as Gina, Jan Cobler as Vanessa, Marika Choma as a go-go girl, Julie Prince as a museum girl, and Miss McRae as Barbara Tyler.

SAN FRANCISCO — At least one thing about Red Buttons, noted stage film and television personality, he knew how to keep the usually quick-exit Curran Theater audience a little longer last night — just throw in a little nightclub patter and fast one-liners.

But if he was sincere in his final post-curtain call pitch about drumming up trade for Woody Allen's comedy, "Play It Again, Sam," of which he is the star, he spoiled a sometimes amusing evening. Hopefully it was all in jest.

"Play It Again, Sam," is an ideal vehicle for the older-than-30 generation who likes to gobble up sexy one-liners. It should make a tremendous hit when it makes the town and gown circuit and most likely a future production of the Ross Valley Players.

While Allen is one of our finer young comics, some of the crispness which he penned in his first play, "Don't Drink the Water" and the delightful film, "What's New, Pussycat?", is lacking in "Sam."

Such lines as "I smoked pot once and had a bad reaction; I tried to take my pants off over my head'' were just a little wearing.

Most of the evening Buttons as Allen Felix, a film critic in search of a girl after his wife walked out on him, is delightful. The veteran comic knows how to handle his lines, playing them for sustained laughter. He even comes off good as a loser in his finally found affair with his best friend's wife. He is however, counseled, by his alter-ego — the film image of Humphrey Bogart — handled expertly by Peter De Maio right down to the pulled down hat, trench coat and cigarette.

As his amour, Deborah Deeble, makes a sweet and rather wacky Linda Christie. When Buttons seemed to overact in his advancements, she managed to stave off awkward stage movements.

Helping to make the evening bounce along a little tighter were Connie Day as Nancy Felix, who is only seen in Allan's daydreaming, and William Bogert as Dick Christie, the young corporate upstart who probably dialed telephone numbers in his sleep.

For a touring company, the setting by William Ritman was in far better shape and done in more tasteful decor than seen in past roadshow productions and Martin Aronstein's lighting played an integral part in the over-all presentation.

As Buttons mentioned "Sam" will be at the Curran Theater through Feb. 6 with evening performances at 8:30 p.m., except Sunday at 7 p.m. with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, 2:30 p.m.

Holdout Is Threatening Market Halt

I-J Special Report

WALNUT CREEK—A walkout by one holdout local of the Retail Clerks Union still could shut down practically all supermarkets in eight Bay Area counties, a negotiator warned today.

John Bacon, negotiator for the Food Employers Association, said no changes have been made in the offer that six Retail Clerks' locals accepted in voting Sunday. The Contra Costa Local 1179 rejected the offer by a vote of 470 to 455.

Should the Contra Costa union members strike, other counties' supermarkets — including Marin and Sonoma — would close by previous agrement, Bacon explained.

A spokesman for the Contra Costa local said the members would meet in two shifts tomorrow for more discussion and possibly second votes on the three-year contract offer. The meetings will be held at 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. in the Richmond Civic Auditorium.

Both Bacon and the clerks' spokesman said no new offers have been made since Sunday's vote. The negotiated package would provide a 75-cent hourly raise retroactive to Jan. 1, 25-cent raises for the second and third years, and a 4-cent improvement in payments to health care and pension benefits.

The maximum pension for retiring clerks would be increased from the present $250 and $425 per month, the union spokesman said.

No more negotiations are scheduled, pending the outcome of tomorrow's vote in Contra Costa, Bacon said today.

Cost-Cutting Plan For Angela's Trial

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation that could save Marin taxpayers several $100,000 in trial costs from the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Hall of Justice has been introduced by Assemblyman Pauline Davis, D-Portola.

A 1961 law by Mrs. Davis provided state reimbursement to counties for any homicide trial cost in excess of the amount the county could raise by 10 cents on its property tax rate.

Her new measure (AB 26) would cut the figure to five cents, thus halving the amount a county would have to pay before the state picks up the rest of the trial cost.

In Marin, 10 cents on the property tax raises about $650,000, thus her bill would cut to $325,000 the amount the county would pay before qualifying for state reimbursement.

Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell has estimated the cost of trying Angela Y. Davis and Ruchell Magee at $200,000 just to June 30, but he has figured the total cost of damage suits, insurance, medical expenses and security following the shoot-out at $1.25 million.

How much of this total would qualify under Mrs. Davis' bill was unclear, but she told the Independent-Journal yesterday that it would cover "anything related with the trial."

Mrs. Davis noted that she won passage last year of a bill cutting the figure from 10 to three cents, but that Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed it on the ground that the state could not afford such payments. She said no estimate was available on the cost to the state of her measure, but that one would be made soon.

She said that she passed the 10-cent measure in 1961 when Sierra County was hit with the cost of the Larry Lord Motherwell trial. It also took a special state appropriation to help the little county pay for the trial.

Behr Preparing Bill To Ban Seismic Explorations

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, announced today that he was preparing legislation to prohibit the oil industry from conducting seismic explorations off the California coast.

Behr said his measure was sparked by a request from Humble Oil Co. and Phillips Oil Co. for renewal of their permits to conduct such explorations along the coast from Mendocino County to the Mexican border. The permits expire this month, and Behr said he would oppose their renewal in testimony tomorrow before the State Lands Commission in Sacramento.

Behr said his measure would close the last loophole in state laws establishing an oil sanctuary along the coast and in San Francisco Bay. Oil and gas drilling and core sampling were barred in the sanctuary, which last year was extended by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, to include the bay and most of the north coast to Oregon.

But the state's oil sanctuary law was silent on seismic explorations, in which explosive charges are detonated and measurements of their shock waves used to find underwater oil deposits.

Permits for such explorations, Behr said, "represent the first link in a chain reaction leading to core drilling and then platform drilling." If seismic explorations turned up oil, he said, the inevitable result would be "tremendous pressure" on the state by the oil companies to open up the sanctuary to full-scale drilling.

The oil sanctuary law was passed after the 1969 oil leak in the Santa Barbara Channel.

Since the oil companies were barred from taking core samples or drilling within the sanctuary, Behr said, "then no proper reason can be advanced for the granting of this (seismic exploration) permit."

He noted that the Humble and Phillips permits were first granted in 1964 and had been renewed by the State Lands Commission routinely every six months since that date. The last reported explorations under the permit were in 1966 and 1967, Behr said.

Behr stressed that the state permit was of crucial importance to the oil companies, since a state permit was required in order to conduct seismic explorations on adjacent federal lands beyond the state's three-mile jurisdiction. The freshman senator noted that his point was not revealed on the commission's agenda for tomorrow.

Behr, noting the lands commission's staff previously justified such permits for providing scientific information, said that this rationale was "ridiculous." He said that such information was "like feeding lettuce to a hungry rabbit."

As for the lands commission's hearing on the permits, Behr said, "There is no need for further hearings. Santa Barbara and San Francisco Bay are testimony enough."

North Marin Federation Shows Growth

The North Marin Federation of Homeowners Associations has grown to a membership of 11 associations representing about 3,500 homes, it was reported at a recent federation meeting by president Guthrie R. Greene.

Plans for 1971 include expansion of some existing associations and formation of new associations, Greene said.

Abandoning Plans On Communes Urged

The Mill Valley Planning Commission has asked the city council to abandon plans to adopt an ordinance outlawing communes in the city, saying that the city has no authority over intra-family matters.

Zoning Administrator Howard R. McGill said the commission voted Monday to ask that the council not amend the zoning ordinance to define family as no more than five unrelated persons. The amendment, if adopted, would prohibit communes in single-family zones.

McGill said a resolution adopted by the commission noted the "ordinances controlling trespassing, noise and other objective matters arising in the community," but stated that "a redefinition of the word family does not relate to these objective problems."

The commission said that "it is not the city's function to legislate intra-family relationships but only to govern their objective impact on the community." It called the amendment "difficult to interpret and enforce" and said it may be unconstitutional and discriminatory.

The council will consider the ordinance on second reading Monday and could adopt it then.

The commission, which met until 2 a.m., set an adjourned meeting next Wednesday at 8 p.m. at city hall to take up items from Monday's agenda.

These include approval of a precise development plan and tentative map for 38 dwelling units in Scott Valley, and consideration of a planned unit development of 203 apartments near Sabella's restaurant on Redwood Highway.

The Mill Valley Planning Commission also:

SPLIT - Approved a request by S. E. Behrens for a two-lot subdivision at East Blithedale Avenue and Kipling Drive.

APARTMENTS - Approved a development plan for construction of 10 apartments at 230 Miller Avenue. The applicant is Marinways Co.

RECYCLING - Continued to Feb. 3 consideration of a use permit to allow a recycling operation at the city's corporation yard. City Atty. Leland H. Jordan has said the use is prohibited by city ordinance.

$27,000 Property Bid Turned Down: Too Low

Trustees of the Mill Valley School District have rejected the single bid received for the district's Harvard Avenue property because the amount offered was less than the $33,360 minimum set by the board for the 1.6 acres.

Carol Taylor, secretary to the superintendent, said the lone bid of $27,000 came Monday from Jeffrey Morehead of Frank Howard Allen and Company, Marin realtors.

Morehead's low bid could affect negotiations on a 5.13 acre parcel of land in the Tamalpais Valley which has been the object of a dispute between the school district which owns it, and the Tamalpais Community Services District which wants to buy it.

An appraisal commissioned by the school district set the value of the land, at Eastwood Way and Glenwood Avenue, at $85,000, while a services district appraisal values the land at $55,000.

Last Tuesday the boards of both districts agreed to postpone negotiations on the land until bids were received on the Harvard property. At that time Glenn Lambacher, president of the services district, said if bids for the Harvard property were substantially lower than the school district's appraisal, negotiators will have a better idea of fair market value of the Tamalpais Valley land.

The school board tabled the matter until its Feb. 8 meeting.

The Mill Valley School District board also:

APPLICATIONS — Voted to proceed with printing of invitations for prospective applicants for the principalship of Edna Maguire School, vacant since the death of Principal Glenn Skelton last November. The principal chosen will head the district's new middle school when it opens. Deadline for applications is March 12, Mrs. Taylor said.

BEAUTIFICATION — Approved first step work in a master plan for beautification of Strawberry Point School which will include planter boxes, trees, shrubs and playing fields. The Strawberry Point Parent-Teachers Association has contributed $1,400 to the project.

CLOSED SESSION — Met in closed session for 20 minutes to instruct its agent, Supt. James A. Collins, in regard to negotiations with employee organizations.

$85,000 Cost On Sewer Plan

A subregional sewage planning study covering North Marin and Southern Sonoma will cost about $85,000, according to Charles A. Joseph, manager of the Novato Sanitary District.

Joseph told district diractors Monday night that about $30,000 in federal funds are expected for the study; the remainder to be financed by local agencies.

Directors also applied to the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission to annex 43 acres owned by Robert C. Roberts off Trumball Avenue, near the Oaks subdivision.

Camera, Tape Gear Stolen From Car

A camera and tape equipment, valued at more than $400, were taken from an Alameda man's car in Marinwood Jan. 12, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

The car of Earl D. Sertahl was parked near 310 Blackstone Drive, deputies said.

Field Cut To 11 For School Job

The Marin County Schools Office Personnel Commission has narrowed to 11 the field of applicants for the position of personnel director.

Byron W. Mauzy, assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday the commission reviewed 80 applications Monday, discarding 69.

The commission set Monday and Tuesday for interviews with the 11 finalists for the half-time position which will pay $8,520 per year.

The position, which oversees a county schools clerical force of 140 persons, is expected to be filled by Feb. 7, he said.

In other action, the commission reviewed but took no action on a preliminary budget totaling $18,801.

About $13,000 of the proposed fiscal 1971-72 budget will go to salaries, Mauzy said, including $900 for the commissioners who receive $10 per meeting.

Other budget items include $4,100 for operating expenses; $1,300 fringe benefits and $550 for meetings and conferences. The proposed budget is down about $2,500 from this year's projected budget, he said, adding it may be increased if office equipment is deemed necessary. The commission is expected to act on the budget at its next meeting, Feb. 8.

List Cut To Six Candidates

The Fairfax City Council, meeting in closed session Monday night, weeded out all but six of about 100 candidates for city administrator, according to city clerk Eileen L. Foster.

Mrs. Foster said the council scheduled interviews with the six candidates for Saturday and Sunday.

That is all that was done at the adjourned meeting, Mrs. Foster said.

15 Drunk Drivers Sentenced, Fined

Fifteen persons have been sentenced in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

Third Grader Reads Well In Kentfield

The reading ability of the average third grader in the Kentfield School District is about eight months ahead of the average California third grade, the district board has been told.

Supt. Anthony G. Bacich said yesterday reading results from the manditory Stanford Reading Test, administered yearly to the primary grades, were reported Monday to the board.

He said first graders tested at the state average while second graders were about three months ahead of their contemporaries.

The board also learned the parent-teacher associations at Wolfe Grade and Greenbrae school next week will sponsor a five-day outdoor education excursion to the Santa Cruz Mountains.

On personnel matters, the board went into closed session to consider dismissal of a teacher. No decision was reached, Bacich said.

$300 Theft From Petaluman's Car

A guitar, tape recorder and cash, valued at about $300, were taken from a car parked near 29 Circle Drive, San Rafael, last Friday, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

The car was owned by Karen Killgaard of 75 Queens Lane, Petaluma, deputies said.

Shepherd Resigning At Nicasio

John L. Shepherd, president of the Nicasio School District board, last night announced that he intended to resign June 30 from the board on which he has served 18 months.

Shepherd, a Christian Science Practitioner and reserve Chaplain at Hamilton Air Force Base, told fellow trustees that demands of his career as a teacher of Christian Science would not allow him sufficient time to serve as a trustee.

Shepherd said he expected the election of his successor to be held April 20.

The Nicasio School District Board also:

BOOKS — Approved that a request be made for $200 from the Elementary Secondary Education Act, to purchase library books.

CONTRACT — Approved a motion that a new contract be sent to former principal Jeffery Pflugrath who was on a one year leave of absence but who wished to return to the Nicasio school.

Nine-Month Jail Term In Burglary

Paul Waldmar Brust, 25, of San Francisco, has been sentenced to nine months in Marin County Jail for burglarizing a Novato business in November 1969 and concealing stolen property last August.

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court also placed Brust on probation for three years.

He had pleaded guilty to burglarizing and possessing property stolen from the Shamrock Building Supply Co. as well as stealing and concealing a car at his home.

Charges that he burglarized three Larkspur shops last December are pending in Marin Municipal Court.

Revenue Potential For Gambling Nil

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative analyst A. Alan Post says he hasn't made up his mind about legalizing off-track betting in California but he is definitely opposed to a state-operated lottery.

Post said Tuesday that based on the experience of the New York State lottery, such an operation is an expensive producer of only small amounts of revenue.

He said in 1969-70 that lottery sold $47 million worth of tickets, from which $14 million was paid to winners, $7 million went for administrative expense while only $26 million in net revenues flowed into the state treasury.

For California, Post said his "investigation indicates this would be a very expensive revenue source to administer and the net proceeds would be very minor compared to our needs."

The state currently faces a potential budget deficit of $150 million. Post has estimated that if left unchecked the sum would balloon to a huge $712 million shortage next year.

Post said he is studying other forms of gambling as potential producers of state revenue but that his investigations were incomplete and he could not now "express a view on that in the same economic terms."

Gov. Ronald Reagan earlier said he opposed a California lottery but added he was "willing to listen" to arguments favoring legalization of bookmaking away from horse race tracks.

A bill proposing a state-operated lottery to finance education has been introduced in the Senate. Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, has ordered an investigation into the feasibility of raising state revenue through liberalization of antigambling laws, including offtrack wagering.

Abandoning Plans On Communes Urged

The Mill Valley Planning Commission has asked the city council to abandon plans to adopt an ordinance outlawing communes in the city, saying that the city has no authority over intra-family matters.

Zoning Administrator Howard R. McGill said the commission voted Monday to ask that the council not amend the zoning ordinance to define family as no more than five unrelated persons. The amendment, if adopted, would prohibit communes in single-family zones.

McGill said a resolution adopted by the commission noted the "ordinances controlling trespassing, noise and other objective matters arising in the community," but stated that "a redefinition of the word family does not relate to these objective problems."

The commission said that "it is not the city's function to legislate intra-family relationships but only to govern their objective impact on the community." It called the amendment "difficult to interpret and enforce" and said it may be unconstitutional and discriminatory.

The council will consider the ordinance on second reading Monday and could adopt it then.

The commission, which met until 2 a.m., set an adjourned meeting next Wednesday at 8 p.m. at city hall to take up items from Monday's agenda.

These include approval of a precise development plan and tentative map for 38 dwelling units in Scott Valley, and consideration of a planned unit development of 203 apartments near Sabella's restaurant on Redwood Highway.

The Mill Valley Planning Commission also:

SPLIT - Approved a request by S. E. Behrens for a two-lot subdivision at East Blithedale Avenue and Kipling Drive.

APARTMENTS - Approved a development plan for construction of 10 apartments at 230 Miller Avenue. The applicant is Marinways Co.

RECYCLING - Continued to Feb. 3 consideration of a use permit to allow a recycling operation at the city's corporation yard. City Atty. Leland H. Jordan has said the use is prohibited by city ordinance.

$27,000 Property Bid Turned Down: Too Low

Trustees of the Mill Valley School District have rejected the single bid received for the district's Harvard Avenue property because the amount offered was less than the $33,360 minimum set by the board for the 1.6 acres.

Carol Taylor, secretary to the superintendent, said the lone bid of $27,000 came Monday from Jeffrey Morehead of Frank Howard Allen and Company, Marin realtors.

Morehead's low bid could affect negotiations on a 5.13 acre parcel of land in the Tamalpais Valley which has been the object of a dispute between the school district which owns it, and the Tamalpais Community Services District which wants to buy it.

An appraisal commissioned by the school district set the value of the land, at Eastwood Way and Glenwood Avenue, at $85,000, while a services district appraisal values the land at $55,000.

Last Tuesday the boards of both districts agreed to postpone negotiations on the land until bids were received on the Harvard property. At that time Glenn Lambacher, president of the services district, said if bids for the Harvard property were substantially lower than the school district's appraisal, negotiators will have a better idea of fair market value of the Tamalpais Valley land.

The school board tabled the matter until its Feb. 8 meeting.

The Mill Valley School District board also:

APPLICATIONS — Voted to proceed with printing of invitations for prospective applicants for the principalship of Edna Maguire School, vacant since the death of Principal Glenn Skelton last November. The principal chosen will head the district's new middle school when it opens. Deadline for applications is March 12, Mrs. Taylor said.

BEAUTIFICATION — Approved first step work in a master plan for beautification of Strawberry Point School which will include planter boxes, trees, shrubs and playing fields. The Strawberry Point Parent-Teachers Association has contributed $1,400 to the project.

CLOSED SESSION — Met in closed session for 20 minutes to instruct its agent, Supt. James A. Collins, in regard to negotiations with employee organizations.

Camera, Tape Gear Stolen From Car

A camera and tape equipment, valued at more than $400, were taken from an Alameda man's car in Marinwood Jan. 12, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

The car of Earl D. Sertahl was parked near 310 Blackstone Drive, deputies said.

$85,000 Cost On Sewer Plan

A subregional sewage planning study covering North Marin and Southern Sonoma will cost about $85,000, according to Charles A. Joseph, manager of the Novato Sanitary District.

Joseph told district diractors Monday night that about $30,000 in federal funds are expected for the study; the remainder to be financed by local agencies.

Directors also applied to the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission to annex 43 acres owned by Robert C. Roberts off Trumball Avenue, near the Oaks subdivision.

Field Cut To 11 For School Job

The Marin County Schools Office Personnel Commission has narrowed to 11 the field of applicants for the position of personnel director.

Byron W. Mauzy, assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday the commission reviewed 80 applications Monday, discarding 69.

The commission set Monday and Tuesday for interviews with the 11 finalists for the half-time position which will pay $8,520 per year.

The position, which oversees a county schools clerical force of 140 persons, is expected to be filled by Feb. 7, he said.

In other action, the commission reviewed but took no action on a preliminary budget totaling $18,801.

About $13,000 of the proposed fiscal 1971-72 budget will go to salaries, Mauzy said, including $900 for the commissioners who receive $10 per meeting.

Other budget items include $4,100 for operating expenses; $1,300 fringe benefits and $550 for meetings and conferences. The proposed budget is down about $2,500 from this year's projected budget, he said, adding it may be increased if office equipment is deemed necessary. The commission is expected to act on the budget at its next meeting, Feb. 8.

List Cut To Six Candidates

The Fairfax City Council, meeting in closed session Monday night, weeded out all but six of about 100 candidates for city administrator, according to city clerk Eileen L. Foster.

Mrs. Foster said the council scheduled interviews with the six candidates for Saturday and Sunday.

That is all that was done at the adjourned meeting, Mrs. Foster said.

Third Grader Reads Well In Kentfield

The reading ability of the average third grader in the Kentfield School District is about eight months ahead of the average California third grade, the district board has been told.

Supt. Anthony G. Bacich said yesterday reading results from the manditory Stanford Reading Test, administered yearly to the primary grades, were reported Monday to the board.

He said first graders tested at the state average while second graders were about three months ahead of their contemporaries.

The board also learned the parent-teacher associations at Wolfe Grade and Greenbrae school next week will sponsor a five-day outdoor education excursion to the Santa Cruz Mountains.

On personnel matters, the board went into closed session to consider dismissal of a teacher. No decision was reached, Bacich said.

$300 Theft From Petaluman's Car

A guitar, tape recorder and cash, valued at about $300, were taken from a car parked near 29 Circle Drive, San Rafael, last Friday, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

The car was owned by Karen Killgaard of 75 Queens Lane, Petaluma, deputies said.

Shepherd Resigning At Nicasio

John L. Shepherd, president of the Nicasio School District board, last night announced that he intended to resign June 30 from the board on which he has served 18 months.

Shepherd, a Christian Science Practitioner and reserve Chaplain at Hamilton Air Force Base, told fellow trustees that demands of his career as a teacher of Christian Science would not allow him sufficient time to serve as a trustee.

Shepherd said he expected the election of his successor to be held April 20.

The Nicasio School District Board also:

BOOKS — Approved that a request be made for $200 from the Elementary Secondary Education Act, to purchase library books.

CONTRACT — Approved a motion that a new contract be sent to former principal Jeffery Pflugrath who was on a one year leave of absence but who wished to return to the Nicasio school.

Nine-Month Jail Term In Burglary

Paul Waldmar Brust, 25, of San Francisco, has been sentenced to nine months in Marin County Jail for burglarizing a Novato business in November 1969 and concealing stolen property last August.

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court also placed Brust on probation for three years.

He had pleaded guilty to burglarizing and possessing property stolen from the Shamrock Building Supply Co. as well as stealing and concealing a car at his home.

Charges that he burglarized three Larkspur shops last December are pending in Marin Municipal Court.

Revenue Potential For Gambling Nil

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative analyst A. Alan Post says he hasn't made up his mind about legalizing offtrack betting in California but he is definitely opposed to a state-operated lottery.

Post said Tuesday that based on the experience of the New York State lottery, such an operation is an expensive producer of only small amounts of revenue.

He said in 1969-70 that lottery sold $47 million worth of tickets, from which $14 million was paid to winners, $7 million went for administrative expense while only $26 million in net revenues flowed into the state treasury.

For California, Post said his "investigation indicates this would be a very expensive revenue source to administer and the net proceeds would be very minor compared to our needs."

The state currently faces a potential budget deficit of $150 million. Post has estimated that if left unchecked the sum would balloon to a huge $712 million shortage next year.

Post said he is studying other forms of gambling as potential producers of state revenue but that his investigations were incomplete and he could not now "express a view on that in the same economic terms."

Gov. Ronald Reagan earlier said he opposed a California lottery but added he was "willing to listen" to arguments favoring legalization of bookmaking away from horse race tracks.

A bill proposing a state-operated lottery to finance education has been introduced in the Senate. Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, has ordered an investigation into the feasibility of raising state revenue through liberalization of antigambling laws, including offtrack wagering.

Bomb Scare Halts Tam-Redwood Basketball Game

FIGHT FOR POSSESSION — Clifford Hall of Tam went over Redwood's Tim Hennessey as they fought for a rebound in the second quarter, but neither came down with the ball. Scott Trobbe of Redwood (33), who led all scorers with 11 points, stood by apprehensively. Redwood led, 30-27 when the game was called in the third quarter.

Gym Emptied After Call; To Finish Game Tuesday

By DAVID EINSTEIN

A capacity crowd of some 650 fans threatened to blow the place up, figuratively speaking, as Tam met Redwood in a crucial Marin County Athletic League basketball game. But one anonymous phone caller threatened to really blow it up, and at 8:07 p.m., Mill Valley Police ordered the building evacuated.

In hurried council, coaches Bernie Schneider of Tamalpais and Dick Hart of Redwood agreed to postpone the game until next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the Tam gym. It will pick up where it left off, with 4:06 left in the third quarter and Redwood leading, 30-27.

According to Mill Valley Police Sgt. Robert Dyche, who issued the order to empty the gym and adjoining locker room, the caller claimed a bomb had been set to go off in 15 minutes. There was no choice but to clear the building, Dyche said, and conditions were so chaotic outside, what with several hundred disappointed fans milling around looking for a way in, that it would have been impossible to resume the game after waiting out the threat.

Even though there turned out to be no bomb, it's possible that had the league leading Giants from Larkspur continued to defeat the Indians, the fans inside might have torn the gym down anyway. Most of them had been sitting there since 6 o'clock, when the capacity of 600 was reached and the doors were shut, by edict of the fire marshall.

About 50 determined fans gained entrance after that, either through special connections with people inside, or by storming the side doors; the crowd swelled in numbers until standing-room-only became hanging-room-only, as some younger fans dangled from the basket installations on the side walls.

The game itself had reached fever pitch during the early moments of the third quarter, as Tam, down by eight at halftime, scored seven in the space of a minute to close to within one at 27-26. It was anyone's game when the halt came, and players and fans from both sides reacted to the evacuation order with anger and frustration.

First place in the league was at stake; Redwood was 5-0 going into the game, Tam was 4-1.

All the trouble, from the hopeless situation of the giant crowd and the cramped old gym to the bomb scare itself might have been avoided had the game been changed to a more worthy site, namely College of Marin. But when asked for the use of its gym by the Tam adminstration, the Marin athletic department said no, according to Schneider, even though no activity was scheduled there for last night.

Up until the time the game was called, Scott Trobbe of Redwood led all scorers with 11 points, followed by teammate Tim Hennessey and Tam's John Earl Huff with eight apiece. Tam's Will Garner and Redwood's Steve McGee, opposing centers who are among the league leaders in scoring, were held to just three and two points respectively.

Drake In Big Upset

The Drake High School Pirates played their "best game" of the season last night, and, behind Mark Daubenfeld's 18 points, upset Marin Catholic, 54-44 at Drake in San Anselmo.

The victory was only the second of the year for the Pirates, who, with only one returning letterman, have lost four games. For the Wildcats of Kentfield, the loss was the second in a row, and now they too are 2-4.

Daubenfeld, a junior who played his freshman year at Marin Catholic, was, according to Pirate coach Bob Fitzhenry, "The Game's outstanding player," as he hit a career high scoring figure, and most for any Drake player in one game this year.

Fitzhenry said afterwards, "We played our best game. We made the fewest mistakes of any game this year." Besides Daubenfeld, he cited the work of guard Dave Wilkinson, another junior, who came in at the start of the third quarter, and pulled the Pirates together as they outscored the Wildcats in the second half, 36-24.

High point man for Marin was Bill Donellan, the league's third leading scorer, with 13 points, and Tim Stone was second with 10.

Jim Gregg had 12 points to back up Daubenfeld, and he along with Jim Forni, the only letterman, dominated the board for the Pirates.

Marin Catholic	20	24—44
Drake	18	36—54

Marin Catholic — Vanni, 1-2-4; T. Stone, 5-0-10; Donellan, 6-1-13; Stahl, 0-2-2; Hurley, 1-4-6; Sullivan, 1-0-2; D. Stone, 0-2-2; Mahoney, 1-1-3; Christensen, 1-0-2; Totals — 16-12-44.

Drake — Forni, 2-1-5; Carlisle, 1-0-2; Daubenfeld, 7-4-18; Gregg, 5-2-12; Purcell, 2-2-6; Chaffee, 1-2-4; Wilkinson, 2-3-7; Totals — 20-14-54.

JIM GILMARTIN

Youngest Skater At The Nationals

Juli McKinstry, the 14-year-old freshman at Terra Linda High School who has done big things in junior figure skating, today embarks on her National Senior career.

At 14, she'll be the youngest competitor at the U.S. National Championships today through Sunday at Buffalo, N.Y. Up against our nation's finest skaters, she'll be under extreme pressure, but that's nothing new because in 1970 Juli came through to win the National Ladies Championship, which is not to be confused with the Senior Ladies, her new category.

Miss McKinstry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McKinstry of 619 Cedarberry Lane, San Rafael, is one of the most dedicated athletes in Marin County — or anywhere else, for that matter.

I've written before about her gruelling training schedule, but I'll bring you up to date about her progress in the past seven months. Last June she passed the test for "Seniors" and since then has been trying to perfect the varied and complicated figures, plus develop a unique and difficult program necessary for free skating.

To accomplish this she has been training at the Olympic Blythe Arena at Squaw Valley with the famed Grogans. Barbara Grogan has a Gold Medal from the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley and James D. Grogan was on our World Skating Team for years as well as our Olympic Teams.

With such a perfect training environment plus excellent tutors, Juli should continue climbing the ladder to figure skating success.

Juli's mother says: "We really have our eyes on the mountains. Juli's 10-year-old brother, Roy, is a skier and races on the Squaw Valley team. He had a wonderful summer skiing in Chili and is looking forward to Argentina next summer."

Golly, those McKinstrys really get around.

"However," adds Mrs. McKinstry, "our hearts are here and we're staying right here in Marin County with Juli at Terra Linda High and Roy a student at Lucas Valley School. Also, my husband is an engineer with Matson Navigation Company and this is where the ships are."

Although Juli will skate under the banner of "Village of Olympic Valley," we'll still claim her as a local girl. This is where she got her start.

San Marin Wallops San Rafael

Held in check until the third quarter, the San Marin Mustangs broke away from San Rafael in grand style last night for a 79-57 Marin County Athletic League basketball victory at San Marin High School in Novato.

The Mustangs, behind a 22-point performance by 6-foot-8 center Dana LaFerriere, evened their league record at 3-3, while handing the winless Bulldogs their sixth loss.

San Rafael, with the brother combination of Wayne and Bill Lechner leading the way, played well enough to lead at the end of the first quarter, 16-15, but San Marin rallied to take a five-point lead at halftime. Still, the Mustangs were way under their average scoring pace; they made up for it by outscoring the visitors in the second half, 51-24.

LaFerriere paced the club in the first half, with 18 points, and Brad O'Riley sparked the second half performance with 15, his toal for the game. One other Mustang, Hoza Wright, hit double figures with 10.

Wayne Lechner led San Rafael with 17 points, followed by brother Bill with 13. Duke Bessee contributed 11 to the losing cause.

More Awards For Plunkett

At the annual Palo Club banquet Tuesday night, UPI West Coast sports editor Joe Sargis gave the Stanford signal-caller UPI's Player of the Year award.

Dozens of sports celebrities attended the banquet.

Streaking Novato '5' Stuns Terra Linda

The surging Novato High School Hornets won their third straight Marin County Athletic League basketball game last night, upsetting the Terra Linda Trojans, 61-47 in Terra Linda.

The Hornets, who lost their first three league games but now stand even at 3-3, relied on a balanced attack paced by Marty Moroski, and some terrible foul shooting by Terra Linda to nail the Trojans with their second loss in six games. The home club had won two crucial games in a row, and was apparently down for this one.

Moroski, a junior forward who last Friday starred in Novato's win over Marin Catholic, led the Hornets with 13 points and again overshadowed teammate Joe DeMaestri, the league's leading scorer, who finished with 10.

The Trojans got a 19-point performance from forward Joe Casteel, but they were never really in the game. Novato jumped off to a 13-6 lead in the first quarter, and led by 16 at halftime. The game was lost on the charity line, where Terra Linda missed on 24 of 43 free throws.

Novato	13	18	13	17	— 61

Slumping Warriors In Detroit

DETROIT (UPI) —The San Francisco Warriors are riding a three-game loss skein moving into tough Detroit tonight.

They trailed at Baltimore only 99-98 with 1:20 to go Tuesday night but then collapsed for the 103-98 loss.

Earl Monroe and Jack Marin combined for 47 points and Gus Johnson hauled down 22 rebounds for the Bullets.

The Warriors got 23 points out of Nate Thurmond, 20 out of Fritz Williams and 17 out of Jeff Mullins, but the bench failed to pick up the slack when the starters took a rest.

A setback tonight would leave the Warriors at .500, but still with a solid lead over third-place Seattle in the Western Division.

Renault Drivers Survive Blizzard In Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI)—Sweden's Ove Andersson and Britain's David Stone, driving a French Alpine Renault, survived a night of blizzard in the Alps to lead the Monte Carlo Auto Rally at the end of its second stage today.

Conditions during their 26-hour drive to Chambery, France, and back, proved so treacherous that only about 45 of the 177 crews who started out Tuesday managed to struggle back.

The 32-year-old Andersson headed the trio of Alpines with a 32 second advantage after the nine speed tests. Filling the next two places were the all-French crews of Jean-Claude Andruet, Guy Bial and Jean-Luc Therier-Marcel Callewaert.

Sweden's Bjorn Waldegaard, winner for the past two years, remained in fourth place with his Porsche 914-6—one minute seven seconds off the pace.

But unofficial reports said the Swedish farmer again had been penalized more than one minute for being late at a control point.

Both cars and drivers showed signs of their ordeal amid the ice and snow of the Alps, as they limped into the sunny quayside at Monte Carlo.

Missing lights, shattered windshields and badly dented bodywork told the tale of 26 hours of non-stop driving in the appalling conditions.

Sandro Munari of Italy held on to fifth place in a Works Lancia with the Nissan Datsun of Finn Rauno Aaltonen in sixth spot.

Alpine, with six of its entries still in the top 12, now appeared almost certain to win. Datsun received a setback when its first car, driven by South African Ewold and Minota-Ann Van Bergen, was forced to retire after the fifth speed test during the night.

West Germany's Hannelore Werner dramatically took over the lead in the ladies prize in the early morning hours. French girl Marie-Claude Beaumont, in an Open Commodore, lost 20 minutes changing a wheel during the eighth speed test.

Miss Werner's BMW was now some seven minutes ahead as the two reached here.

HUSKY PUPPIE WINS AT FIRST SHOW

Mayhill Browneyed Misty takes a stance with owner, Dr. Gar. C. May, San Rafael, as she went from a first in Puppie Class to second place in the working group, in her first show. This 6 months old Siberian Husky bitch represented Mayhill Kennels at the Golden Valley Kennel Club, Turlock, on January 17. Over 700 dogs were entered in the show.

From this showing, she will join four other entries from Mayhill Kennels in the Golden Gate Kennel Club show at the Cow Palace, January 31. Included in the listing will be her illustrious sire, Muskaka Sandyhills Red Flash, who has garnered 11 championship points in 55 days; including 2 majors. He went best of breed as an open entry over 7 specials at the San Matio Kennel Club Show, Nov., 1970. Flash is also entered in the Westminister National, Madison Square Garden, New York City, in February.

Bomb Scare Halts Tam-Redwood Basketball Game

FIGHT FOR POSSESSION — Clifford Hall of Tam went over Redwood's Tim Hennessey as they fought for a rebound in the second quarter, but neither came down with the ball. Scott Trobbe of Redwood (33), who led all scorers with 11 points, stood by apprehensively. Redwood led, 30-27 when the game was called in the third quarter.

Gym Emptied After Call; To Finish Game Tuesday

By DAVID EINSTEIN

A capacity crowd of some 650 fans threatened to blow the place up, figuratively speaking, as Tam met Redwood in a crucial Marin County Athletic League basketball game. But one anonymous phone caller threatened to really blow it up, and at 8:07 p.m., Mill Valley Police ordered the building evacuated.

In hurried council, coaches Bernie Schneider of Tamalpais and Dick Hart of Redwood agreed to postpone the game until next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the Tam gym. It will pick up where it left off, with 4:06 left in the third quarter and Redwood leading, 30-27.

According to Mill Valley Police Sgt. Robert Dyche, who issued the order to empty the gym and adjoining locker room, the caller claimed a bomb had been set to go off in 15 minutes. There was no choice but to clear the building, Dyche said, and conditions were so chaotic outside, what with several hundred disappointed fans milling around looking for a way in, that it would have been impossible to resume the game after waiting out the threat.

Even though there turned out to be no bomb, it's possible that had the league leading Giants from Larkspur continued to defeat the Indians, the fans inside might have torn the gym down anyway. Most of them had been sitting there since 6 o'clock, when the capacity of 600 was reached and the doors were shut, by edict of the fire marshall.

About 50 determined fans gained entrance after that, either through special connections with people inside, or by storming the side doors; the crowd swelled in numbers until standing-room-only became hanging-room-only, as some younger fans dangled from the basket installations on the side walls.

The game itself had reached fever pitch during the early moments of the third quarter, as Tam, down by eight at halftime, scored seven in the space of a minute to close to within one at 27-26. It was anyone's game when the halt came, and players and fans from both sides reacted to the evacuation order with anger and frustration.

First place in the league was at stake; Redwood was 5-0 going into the game, Tam was 4-1.

All the trouble, from the hopeless situation of the giant crowd and the cramped old gym to the bomb scare itself might have been avoided had the game been changed to a more worthy site, namely College of Marin. But when asked for the use of its gym by the Tam adminstration, the Marin athletic department said no, according to Schneider, even though no activity was scheduled there for last night.

Up until the time the game was called, Scott Trobbe of Redwood led all scorers with 11 points, followed by teammate Tim Hennessey and Tam's John Earl Huff with eight apiece. Tam's Will Garner and Redwood's Steve McGee, opposing centers who are among the league leaders in scoring, were held to just three and two points respectively.

Drake In Big Upset

The Drake High School Pirates played their "best game" of the season last night, and, behind Mark Daubenfeld's 18 points, upset Marin Catholic, 54-44 at Drake in San Anselmo.

The victory was only the second of the year for the Pirates, who, with only one returning letterman, have lost four games. For the Wildcats of Kentfield, the loss was the second in a row, and now they too are 2-4.

Daubenfeld, a junior who played his freshman year at Marin Catholic, was, according to Pirate coach Bob Fitzhenry, "The Game's outstanding player," as he hit a career high scoring figure, and most for any Drake player in one game this year.

Fitzhenry said afterwards, "We played our best game. We made the fewest mistakes of any game this year." Besides Daubenfeld, he cited the work of guard Dave Wilkinson, another junior, who came in at the start of the third quarter, and pulled the Pirates together as they outscored the Wildcats in the second half, 36-24.

High point man for Marin was Bill Donellan, the league's third leading scorer, with 13 points, and Tim Stone was second with 10.

Jim Gregg had 12 points to back up Daubenfeld, and he along with Jim Forni, the only letterman, dominated the board for the Pirates.

JIM GILMARTIN

Youngest Skater At The Nationals

Juli McKinstry, the 14-year-old freshman at Terra Linda High School who has done big things in junior figure skating, today embarks on her National Senior career.

At 14, she'll be the youngest competitor at the U.S. National Championships today through Sunday at Buffalo, N.Y. Up against our nation's finest skaters, she'll be under extreme pressure, but that's nothing new because in 1970 Juli came through to win the National Ladies Championship, which is not to be confused with the Senior Ladies, her new category.

Miss McKinstry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McKinstry of 619 Cedarberry Lane, San Rafael, is one of the most dedicated athletes in Marin County — or anywhere else, for that matter.

I've written before about her gruelling training schedule, but I'll bring you up to date about her progress in the past seven months. Last June she passed the test for "Seniors" and since then has been trying to perfect the varied and complicated figures, plus develop a unique and difficult program necessary for free skating.

To accomplish this she has been training at the Olympic Blythe Arena at Squaw Valley with the famed Grogans. Barbara Grogan has a Gold Medal from the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley and James D. Grogan was on our World Skating Team for years as well as our Olympic Teams.

With such a perfect training environment plus excellent tutors, Juli should continue climbing the ladder to figure skating success.

Juli's mother says: "We really have our eyes on the mountains. Juli's 10-year-old brother, Roy, is a skier and races on the Squaw Valley team. He had a wonderful summer skiing in Chili and is looking forward to Argentina next summer."

Golly, those McKinstrys really get around.

"However," adds Mrs. McKinstry, "our hearts are here and we're staying right here in Marin County with Juli at Terra Linda High and Roy a student at Lucas Valley School. Also, my husband is an engineer with Matson Navigation Company and this is where the ships are."

Although Juli will skate under the banner of "Village of Olympic Valley," we'll still claim her as a local girl. This is where she got her start.

San Marin Wallops San Rafael

Held in check until the third quarter, the San Marin Mustangs broke away from San Rafael in grand style last night for a 79-57 Marin County Athletic League basketball victory at San Marin High School in Novato.

The Mustangs, behind a 22-point performance by 6-foot-8 center Dana LaFerriere, evened their league record at 3-3, while handing the winless Bulldogs their sixth loss.

San Rafael, with the brother combination of Wayne and Bill Lechner leading the way, played well enough to lead at the end of the first quarter, 16-15, but San Marin rallied to take a five-point lead at halftime. Still, the Mustangs were way under their average scoring pace; they made up for it by outscoring the visitors in the second half, 51-24.

LaFerriere paced the club in the first half, with 18 points, and Brad O'Riley sparked the second half performance with 15, his toal for the game. One other Mustang, Hoza Wright, hit double figures with 10.

Wayne Lechner led San Rafael with 17 points, followed by brother Bill with 13. Duke Bessee contributed 11 to the losing cause.

More Awards For Plunkett

At the annual Palo Club banquet Tuesday night, UPI West Coast sports editor Joe Sargis gave the Stanford signal-caller UPI's Player of the Year award.

Dozens of sports celebrities attended the banquet.

Streaking Novato '5' Stuns Terra Linda

The surging Novato High School Hornets won their third straight Marin County Athletic League basketball game last night, upsetting the Terra Linda Trojans, 61-47 in Terra Linda.

The Hornets, who lost their first three league games but now stand even at 3-3, relied on a balanced attack paced by Marty Moroski, and some terrible foul shooting by Terra Linda to nail the Trojans with their second loss in six games. The home club had won two crucial games in a row, and was apparently down for this one.

Moroski, a junior forward who last Friday starred in Novato's win over Marin Catholic, led the Hornets with 13 points and again overshadowed teammate Joe DeMaestri, the league's leading scorer, who finished with 10.

The Trojans got a 19-point performance from forward Joe Casteel, but they were never really in the game. Novato jumped off to a 13-6 lead in the first quarter, and led by 16 at halftime. The game was lost on the charity line, where Terra Linda missed on 24 of 43 free throws.

Renault Drivers Survive Blizzard In Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI)—Sweden's Ove Andersson and Britain's David Stone, driving a French Alpine Renault, survived a night of blizzard in the Alps to lead the Monte Carlo Auto Rally at the end of its second stage today.

Conditions during their 26-hour drive to Chambery, France, and back, proved so treacherous that only about 45 of the 177 crews who started out Tuesday managed to struggle back.

The 32-year-old Andersson headed the trio of Alpines with a 32 second advantage after the nine speed tests. Filling the next two places were the all-French crews of Jean-Claude Andruet, Guy Bial and Jean-Luc Therier-Marcel Callewaert.

Sweden's Bjorn Waldegaard, winner for the past two years, remained in fourth place with his Porsche 914-6—one minute seven seconds off the pace.

But unofficial reports said the Swedish farmer again had been penalized more than one minute for being late at a control point.

Both cars and drivers showed signs of their ordeal amid the ice and snow of the Alps, as they limped into the sunny quayside at Monte Carlo.

Missing lights, shattered windshields and badly dented bodywork told the tale of 26 hours of non-stop driving in the appalling conditions.

Sandro Munari of Italy held on to fifth place in a Works Lancia with the Nissan Datsun of Finn Rauno Aaltonen in sixth spot.

Alpine, with six of its entries still in the top 12, now appeared almost certain to win. Datsun received a setback when its first car, driven by South African Ewold and Minota-Ann Van Bergen, was forced to retire after the fifth speed test during the night.

West Germany's Hannelore Werner dramatically took over the lead in the ladies prize in the early morning hours. French girl Marie-Claude Beaumont, in an Open Commodore, lost 20 minutes changing a wheel during the eighth speed test.

Miss Werner's BMW was now some seven minutes ahead as the two reached here.

Slumping Warriors In Detroit

DETROIT (UPI) —The San Francisco Warriors are riding a three-game loss skein moving into tough Detroit tonight.

They trailed at Baltimore only 99-98 with 1:20 to go Tuesday night but then collapsed for the 103-98 loss.

Earl Monroe and Jack Marin combined for 47 points and Gus Johnson hauled down 22 rebounds for the Bullets.

The Warriors got 23 points out of Nate Thurmond, 20 out of Fritz Williams and 17 out of Jeff Mullins, but the bench failed to pick up the slack when the starters took a rest.

A setback tonight would leave the Warriors at .500, but still with a solid lead over third-place Seattle in the Western Division.

HUSKY PUPPIE WINS AT FIRST SHOW

Mayhill Browneyed Misty takes a stance with owner, Dr. Gar. C. May, San Rafael, as she went from a first in Puppie Class to second place in the working group, in her first show. This 6 months old Siberian Husky bitch represented Mayhill Kennels at the Golden Valley Kennel Club, Turlock, on January 17. Over 700 dogs were entered in the show.

From this showing, she will join four other entries from Mayhill Kennels in the Golden Gate Kennel Club show at the Cow Palace, January 31. Included in the listing will be her illustrious sire, Muskaka Sandyhills Red Flash, who has garnered 11 championship points in 55 days; including 2 majors. He went best of breed as an open entry over 7 specials at the San Matio Kennel Club Show, Nov., 1970. Flash is also entered in the Westminister National, Madison Square Garden, New York City, in February.

An Introduction For Dick Williams

OAKLAND (UPI) —Charles O. Finley resents assertions that he is running the Oakland A's club from his farm in LaPorte, Ind.

"It's not true," he told a news conference Tuesday. But then added that "if I did, I must have done a helluva job. We finished second the past two years."

Finley was in good humor at the conference, called to introduce new Oakland A's pilot Dick Williams.

He said some have worried because attendance for the A's and California Golden Seals, also owned by Finley, has not been good.

But the multi-millionaire insurance man said "just this morning I swung the biggest group insurance deal of my life. I sold a health, life and dismemberment group policy to all my former managers. So, I figure that will take up any financial slack."

Finley has fired 10 managers in nine years, counting Hank Bauer twice since he was fired twice.

Finley promised that Williams, who led Boston to its pennant in 1967, would have "100 per cent authority on the field, to sink or swim with it."

Williams finally took over from his talkative boss and commented that "he can't see any reason why the A's can't win the Western Division this year."

Concerning outfielder Reggie Jackson—a star in 1969 and a flop in 1970—Williams said that he'd seen him play in Puerto Rico this winter and "his attitude is so good it's almost scarey."

He said third baseman Sal Bando will keep his job as team captain.

Bando, also on hand, said "our problem last year wasn't so much that we were a young team; we were immature. We need a heavy hand. I know Dick has one."

Williams also indicated that the A's might face some tough discipline this season.

"What I want most," said Williams, "is togetherness on this club. Even if they hate me, I want togetherness out there—the players."

Brundage Asks IOC To Ban Some Skiers

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI)—The president of the International Olympic Committee brought pressure on IOC members today to support his position that 10 Alpine skiers should be banned from the 1972 Winter Olympics for professionalism.

Avery Brundage asked the committee members to answer four questions under an Olympic rule which permits the president to conduct a poll when an urgent answer to a problem is required.

Brundage's four questions were:

—Can the Alpine skiers who participated in a commercial ski camp at Mammoth Mountain, Calif., last year be admitted to the Olympics?

—Can the Alpine skiers whose pictures and names are extensively used to advertise commercial articles be admitted to the Olympics?

—Can a skier be admitted to the Olympics, who publicly boasts that he earns $50,000 to $60,000 annually from the sport and wears a uniform bearing the name of his employer at races?

—Can you agree with the proposal of the International Ski Federation that Alpine ski racers should be compensated for the loss of five and a half months of income annually?

Barber Now 2nd In PGA Money

NEW YORK (UPI)—Miller Barber, winner of the $25,000 first prize in the Phoenix Open, springs into second place among professional golf's leading money winners, just $623 off the earnings pace set by Tom Shaw, it was announced Monday by the Professional Golf Association Tournament Players Division.

Shaw has won $29,752 so far in the young tournament season. Barber has earned $29,129. Bob Lunn is third with $26,218.

Howell Is Back In Seals' Lineup

OAKLAND (UPI) —Gray-haired Harry Howell returns to the California Golden Seals lineup tonight when Minnesota skates into the Oakland Arena.

The veteran defenseman has been out of action with a back problem.

Another casualty, Bill Hicke, is also scheduled to play despite a broken nose. He'll wear a combination helmet and face guard.

Howell's return gives the Seals six defensemen for the first time in two months. Earlier, Bert Marshall didn't see any action until two weeks ago and now Carol Vadnais is out of action with a broken thumb

N.Y. Probe Continues On Bribery

Buffalo, N.Y. (UPI) —Three top Erie County officials are scheduled to appear Friday before a federal grand jury investigating alleged bribery, extortion and conspiracy charges in connection with the county's proposed $50 million domed stadium project.

County Attorney Robert E. Casey, Jr., and Democratic legislators Frank C. Ludera and Frederick F. Pordum confirmed they would testify voluntarily before the federal panel.

Ludera and Pordum have admitted certain "overtures" had been made to them in attempts to influence their voting on the project. They did not disclose who made the attempts.

Both legislators said last Thursday they had informed the county attorney of the alleged bribe attempts and all three have since offered to make the information available to both the federal and county grand juries.

The county grand jury will resume Monday as it probes alleged bribery, larceny, conspiracy and official misconduct charges.

J. Lloyd Walker, the stadium's project engineer, is scheduled to appear before the panel to continue testimony he began Monday, the first day of the panel's investigation.

Knicks Handle Bucks

By U.P. International

Lew Alcindor still can't beat a healthy Willis Reed.

Earlier this month Milwaukee defeated New York for the only time this season while the Knicks team captain was suffering from one of his numerous ailments. Reed made up for that painful engagement Tuesday night when he led New York to a 107-98 victory over the Bucks with a 35-point scoring spree.

What's more, Reed held Alcindor, who tallied 29 points, scoreless in the last 6 :22 of the game, just when Milwaukee needed Big Lew's scoring punch. Oscar Robertson picked up the slack with six points in a 10-point Buck outburst that whittled a fourth quarter one-point Knick lead to one at 95-94.

But Reed's final field goal, two key baskets by Dick Barnett and five points by Bill Bradley in the last 52 seconds gave New York its third victory over the Bucks this season.

It was Reed's ability to hold Alcindor to a standoff that enabled the Knicks to beat Milwaukee in last season's playoffs.

Robertson refused to see any significance in the fact that three of Milwaukee's nine losses this season, lowest in the National Basketball Association, have been at the hands of the Knicks.

"We didn't get into our patterns very well and when you do that against the Knicks you're in trouble," Robertson commented. "Reed was a lot more steady tonight, but the result shouldn't have any bearing on our future meetings."

Tommy Davis Returns To A's

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Oakland Athletics hace re-acquired free agent outfielder Tommy Davis and signed him to a 1971 contract.

The two-time batting champ hit .290 for the A's last season before being sold to the Chicago Cubs during their pennant drive. The Cubs recently released him and he'll be used primarily as a pinch-hitter for Oakland.

The A's Tuesday also announced the signing of durable righthander Chuck Dobson, who was 16-15 last season, and minor leaguers Don Boyd, Dwain Anderson and Ron Clark.

A New Car For Howley; Haywood Can Keep Playing

SPORTS SHORTS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Linebacker Chuck Howley of the Dallas Cowboys was awarded an automobile by Sport Magazine Tuesday for being the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl game on Jan. 17.

Howley's Dallas Cowboys were beaten 16-13 by the Baltimore Colts, but Howley played brilliantly on defense and intercepted two passes.

Howley became the first member of the losing team to receive the award that was won by Len Dawson of Kansas City last year.

Basketball

The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday denied a motion by the National Basketball Association for a stay of a lower court injunction permitting the 21-year-old Haywood to stay with Seattle.

A Los Angeles judge last week issued the injunction and set a March 2 trial date for the case of Haywood, the 6-8 Olympic and Detroit University star who jumped to Seattle from Denver of the rival American Basketball Association.

VILLANOVA, Pa. (UPI)—Howard Porter, basketball star at Villanova University, has been given the green light to keep playing for the 17th ranked Wildcats, who sport a 15-4 record.

The 6-foot-7 forward was reported to have signed an agreement to play in the American Basketball Association, but this was denied by Porter.

Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Jets and the Kansas City Chiefs, two former Super Bowl champions, will meet in an exhibition game the night of Aug. 30 in Kansas City, it was announced Wednesday by Jets' coach and general manager Weeb Ewbank.

The Jets will also play preseason games against the Detroit Lions in Tampa, Fla., on Aug. 7 and the Pittsburgh Steelers in Cleveland on Sept. 4.

General

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UPI)—Harold "Bo" Hagan, former head football coach and athletic director at Rice University, is returning to the University of South Carolina where he was a star quarterback in the post-World War II era.

Hagan will be an administrative assistant to Athletic Director Paul Dietzel and will assume his new duties as soon as he winds up his affairs in Houston.

Skiing

ADELBODEN, Switzerland (UPI)—Helene Sonderegger of Switzerland defeated Tamara Marcinuk of Fitchburg, Mass., Tuesday by more than three seconds to win the women's giant slalom in the seventh World Winter Games for the Deaf.

An Introduction For Dick Williams

"It's not true," he told a news conference Tuesday. But then added that "if I did, I must have done a helluva job. We finished second the past two years."

Finley was in good humor at the conference, called to introduce new Oakland A's pilot Dick Williams.

He said some have worried because attendance for the A's and California Golden Seals, also owned by Finley, has not been good.

But the multi-millionaire insurance man said "just this morning I swung the biggest group insurance deal of my life. I sold a health, life and dismemberment group policy to all my former managers. So, I figure that will take up any financial slack."

Finley has fired 10 managers in nine years, counting Hank Bauer twice since he was fired twice.

Finley promised that Williams, who led Boston to its pennant in 1967, would have "100 per cent authority on the field, to sink or swim with it."

Williams finally took over from his talkative boss and commented that "he can't see any reason why the A's can't win the Western Division this year."

Concerning outfielder Reggie Jackson—a star in 1969 and a flop in 1970—Williams said that he'd seen him play in Puerto Rico this winter and "his attitude is so good it's almost scarey."

He said third baseman Sal Bando will keep his job as team captain.

Bando, also on hand, said "our problem last year wasn't so much that we were a young team; we were immature. We need a heavy hand. I know Dick has one."

Williams also indicated that the A's might face some tough discipline this season.

"What I want most," said Williams, "is togetherness on this club. Even if they hate me, I want togetherness out there—the players."

Brundage Asks IOC To Ban Some Skiers

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI)—The president of the International Olympic Committee brought pressure on IOC members today to support his position that 10 Alpine skiers should be banned from the 1972 Winter Olympics for professionalism.

Avery Brundage asked the committee members to answer four questions under an Olympic rule which permits the president to conduct a poll when an urgent answer to a problem is required.

Brundage's four questions were:

—Can the Alpine skiers who participated in a commercial ski camp at Mammoth Mountain, Calif., last year be admitted to the Olympics?

—Can the Alpine skiers whose pictures and names are extensively used to advertise commercial articles be admitted to the Olympics?

—Can a skier be admitted to the Olympics, who publicly boasts that he earns $50,000 to $60,000 annually from the sport and wears a uniform bearing the name of his employer at races?

—Can you agree with the proposal of the International Ski Federation that Alpine ski racers should be compensated for the loss of five and a half months of income annually?

Howell Is Back In Seals' Lineup

OAKLAND (UPI) —Gray-haired Harry Howell returns to the California Golden Seals lineup tonight when Minnesota skates into the Oakland Arena.

The veteran defenseman has been out of action with a back problem.

Another casualty, Bill Hicke, is also scheduled to play despite a broken nose. He'll wear a combination helmet and face guard.

Howell's return gives the Seals six defensemen for the first time in two months. Earlier, Bert Marshall didn't see any action until two weeks ago and now Carol Vadnais is out of action with a broken thumb

Barber Now 2nd In PGA Money

NEW YORK (UPI)—Miller Barber, winner of the $25,000 first prize in the Phoenix Open, springs into second place among professional golf's leading money winners, just $623 off the earnings pace set by Tom Shaw, it was announced Monday by the Professional Golf Association Tournament Players Division.

Shaw has won $29,752 so far in the young tournament season. Barber has earned $29,129. Bob Lunn is third with $26,218.

AND WILL CURLEY, the former Drake High School star, is now captain of the University of California at Davis varsity basketball team. After Drake, Curley went to College of Marin, thence to Santa Clara, finally transferring to Cal Davis.

KEN HARRIS of the San Rafael Little League reports that both of its divisions, American and National, will begin for the first time in its history a Senior Division for 13-15 year-olds. San Rafael's Little League started in 1951 and is the oldest in the county.

N.Y. Probe Continues On Bribery

Buffalo, N.Y. (UPI) —Three top Erie County officials are scheduled to appear Friday before a federal grand jury investigating alleged bribery, extortion and conspiracy charges in connection with the county's proposed $50 million domed stadium project.

County Attorney Robert E. Casey, Jr., and Democratic legislators Frank C. Ludera and Frederick F. Pordum confirmed they would testify voluntarily before the federal panel.

Ludera and Pordum have admitted certain "overtures" had been made to them in attempts to influence their voting on the project. They did not disclose who made the attempts.

Both legislators said last Thursday they had informed the county attorney of the alleged bribe attempts and all three have since offered to make the information available to both the federal and county grand juries.

The county grand jury will resume Monday as it probes alleged bribery, larceny, conspiracy and official misconduct charges.

J. Lloyd Walker, the stadium's project engineer, is scheduled to appear before the panel to continue testimony he began Monday, the first day of the panel's investigation.

Knicks Handle Bucks

By U.P. International

Lew Alcindor still can't beat a healthy Willis Reed.

Earlier this month Milwaukee defeated New York for the only time this season while the Knicks team captain was suffering from one of his numerous ailments. Reed made up for that painful engagement Tuesday night when he led New York to a 107-98 victory over the Bucks with a 35-point scoring spree.

What's more, Reed held Alcindor, who tallied 29 points, scoreless in the last 6 :22 of the game, just when Milwaukee needed Big Lew's scoring punch. Oscar Robertson picked up the slack with six points in a 10-point Buck outburst that whittled a fourth quarter one-point Knick lead to one at 95-94.

But Reed's final field goal, two key baskets by Dick Barnett and five points by Bill Bradley in the last 52 seconds gave New York its third victory over the Bucks this season.

It was Reed's ability to hold Alcindor to a standoff that enabled the Knicks to beat Milwaukee in last season's playoffs.

Robertson refused to see any significance in the fact that three of Milwaukee's nine losses this season, lowest in the National Basketball Association, have been at the hands of the Knicks.

"We didn't get into our patterns very well and when you do that against the Knicks; you're in trouble," Robertson commented. "Reed was a lot more steady tonight, but the result shouldn't have any bearing on our future meetings."

Tommy Davis Returns To A's

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Oakland Athletics hace re-acquired free agent outfielder Tommy Davis and signed him to a 1971 contract.

The two-time batting champ hit .290 for the A's last season before being sold to the Chicago Cubs during their pennant drive. The Cubs recently released him and he'll be used primarily as a pinch-hitter for Oakland.

The A's Tuesday also announced the signing of durable righthander Chuck Dobson, who was 16-15 last season, and minor leaguers Don Boyd, Dwain Anderson and Ron Clark.

A New Car For Howley; Haywood Can Keep Playing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Linebacker Chuck Howley of the Dallas Cowboys was awarded an automobile by Sport Magazine Tuesday for being the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl game on Jan. 17.

Howley's Dallas Cowboys were beaten 16-13 by the Baltimore Colts, but Howley played brilliantly on defense and intercepted two passes.

Howley became the first member of the losing team to receive the award that was won by Len Dawson of Kansas City last year.

Basketball

The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday denied a motion by the National Basketball Association for a stay of a lower court injunction permitting the 21-year-old Haywood to stay with Seattle.

A Los Angeles judge last week issued the injunction and set a March 2 trial date for the case of Haywood, the 6-8 Olympic and Detroit University star who jumped to Seattle from Denver of the rival American Basketball Association.

VILLANOVA, Pa. (UPI)—Howard Porter, basketball star at Villanova University, has been given the green light to keep playing for the 17th ranked Wildcats, who sport a 15-4 record.

The 6-foot-7 forward was reported to have signed an agreement to play in the American Basketball Association, but this was denied by Porter.

Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Jets and the Kansas City Chiefs, two former Super Bowl champions, will meet in an exhibition game the night of Aug. 30 in Kansas City, it was announced Wednesday by Jets' coach and general manager Weeb Ewbank.

The Jets will also play preseason games against the Detroit Lions in Tampa, Fla., on Aug. 7 and the Pittsburgh Steelers in Cleveland on Sept. 4.

General

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UPI)—Harold "Bo" Hagan, former head football coach and athletic director at Rice University, is returning to the University of South Carolina where he was a star quarterback in the post-World War II era.

Hagan will be an administrative assistant to Athletic Director Paul Dietzel and will assume his new duties as soon as he winds up his affairs in Houston.

Skiing

ADELBODEN, Switzerland (UPI)—Helene Sonderegger of Switzerland defeated Tamara Marcinuk of Fitchburg, Mass., Tuesday by more than three seconds to win the women's giant slalom in the seventh World Winter Games for the Deaf.

Psycho-Cybernetics And The S.F. Giants

Psycho-cybernetics is a tongue twister with which the Giants wrestled last spring. "What's it all about?" asked Willie Mays who missed the first clubhouse meeting at which the baseball club was introduced to psycho-cybernetics.

"Concentration," explained Jim Davenport to the captain of the Giants. "That's it in one word. The doctor wants us to concentrate, think positively."

"MAN," REPLIED Mays, "what does he think I've been doing for 20 years?"

"Maybe," said Davenport, "if you'd been concentrating right you'd have 800 instead of 600 homers by now."

Mays, who had arrived 24 hours late for opening of 1970 spring training because urgent business had kept him in San Francisco, said: "I'm going to be at that next session just to see what the doctor — what's his-name — tells me."

DR. FRANCIS JACKS, San Francisco specialist in internal medicine, would have told Mays precisely what he had told all other members of the Giants but Horace Stoneham cancelled the course in positive thinking after the initial session.

Stoneham wasn't dissatisfied with the results of Dr. Jacks' program in mental training. Indeed, the owner of the ball club ordered the program for the entire team because of Dr. Jacks' success during the winter with several Giants who had volunteered for positive thinking lessons.

BUT STONEHAM was disappointed at the negative reaction of the team's veterans to any formal course in positive thinking. It sounded silly to them and, in fact, the first clubhouse meeting last spring did resemble an early morning seance.

A sleepy-eyed squad began filing into the clubhouse at 8 a.m. Dr. Jacks explained what the program was all about. Then he urged the players to relax, to lower the lids of their eyes, stretch out their legs and even to wiggle their toes to speed the relaxing process.

The players were further urged to concentrate on their good hitting days and how they were swinging and striding. In other words, as Dr. Jacks explained, they might by themselves discover the reasons why they enjoyed success. Banish negative thoughts of slumps.

THERE WERE snickers from skeptics when Dr. Jacks began asking individual members of the team what they were thinking about.

"Hitting," said Davenport when the question was put to the former Gold Glove third baseman.

"And how are you doing?" asked the doctor.

"Not so good," said Davenport who later in the season retired as an active player to become manager of the Phoenix Giants.

Bernie Williams, a talented rookie outfielder who was a year away last spring but may make the big team this year, drew a big laugh when he said he was mentally hitting the ball good but pulling everything foul.

Rested Marin Tars Host Santa Rosa

By DAVID EINSTEIN

After a week of rest and recuperation, the College of Marin Tars take their home court tonight for a Camino Norte Conference basketball game against Santa Rosa Junior College.

The Kentfield club needed a rest following a disastrous loss to Contra Costa in the last game before the semester break. The great San Pablo catastrophe, 91-62, cost the Tars a share of first place in the CNC, even though it was only their second loss of the season.

Overall, Marin's record is 18-2, still the best of any junior college in California, and good enough for a seventh place state ranking. Contra Costa and West Valley, with whom they are tied for second place, are ranked fifth and 14th; all three have 4-1 league records. At the top of the league is De Anza of Cupertino, undefeated in five games and ranked 17th.

With four teams in the top 20, the CNC is now considered the toughest league in the state, tougher even than the always powerful Southern California Conference. How Marin will fare in such company the rest of the way will be somewhat determined Friday and next Wednesday, in games against De Anza and West Valley that wrap up the first league round robin. Needless to say, whoever made out Marin's schedule was a sadist.

Maybe Marin coach John Panagakis should lay in a supply of aspirin. Because if his troops play no better in those games than they did against Contra Costa, they'll need a funeral, not a rest.

But the coach isn't overly worried. He believes, as do most of the Tar fans who saw the Contra Costa game, that "We just didn't play that night. It just wasn't our night." As a matter of fact, he is optimistic, saying, "It's early in the year, and one loss doesn't end our season."

For now, the Tars are concentrating on Santa Rosa, which, though winless in league play, is an arch rival. "Anything goes in this game," says Panagakis. "They've got nothing to lose."

Marin's fortunes, as always, rest largely on the shoulders of guard Joe Smith and center Roosevelt Green. Neither had a particularly good night against Contra Costa — they only got 26 points between them. But Smith's average through 20 games is 19.4, and Green is 17.7, and they stand to improve those statistics tonight.

The game, which begins at 8 o'clock, will be broadcast by KTIM FM (101.9), with Bob Dinsmore handling the play-by-play.

FOOTBALL DRAFT BEGINS TOMORROW

Time Is Running Out For Undecided Patriots

NEW YORK (UPI)—Time is running out on the Boston Patriots.

The Patriots, who finished with the worst record in the National Football League last season and thus earned the No. 1 choice in the college draft, aren't sure what to do with it.

The draft opens Thursday at 10 a.m. EST at New York's Belmont Plaza Hotel and the Boston front office must decide whether to exercise the choice and take Stanford's Jim Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy winning quarterback, or trade the rights for established veterans.

"We haven't made any decision yet," said a Patriots' spokesman Tuesday. "We're still thinking it over. We may still trade the choice. If that happens, it could be anytime up to Thursday morning."

Representatives from close to 20 pro teams have been on the Patriots' doorstep ever since the season ended. At least eight teams are in dire need of a quarterback and Plunkett, who set NCAA career and single season passing records, seems to fit the bill perfectly.

The Baltimore Colts, the World Champions who have two first round choices, are one of the leading candidates for Boston's choice. The Colts supposedly have offered a wide receiver and a linebacker, two of the Patriots' critical needs, plus one of their first round picks.

Baltimore earned an extra pick on the first round when Miami was forced to hand its over for signing Colts' Coach Don Shula last year. The Colts are the only team with two first round selections.

San Francisco, where Californian Plunkett's rooting interests lie, is another club seeking the Stanford star as an heir to John Brodie.

New Orleans has second choice in the draft and presumably will take Mississippi's Archie Manning. The Saints traded away Bill Kilmer, last year's quarterback, to Washington Saturday and probably will hand the first-string quarterback slot to whichever signal caller they choose on the first round.

Other selections in the first round in order are: Houston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, the New York Jets, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Denver, Washington, Chicago, Green Bay, San Diego, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, St. Louis, the New York Giants, Oakland, Los Angeles, Detroit, Baltimore (from Miami), San Francisco, Minnesota, Dallas and the Colts' own choice.

A time limit of 15 minutes per choice is in effect for the first two rounds and a five-minute deadline is set on the remaining 15 rounds. A total of 442 players will be drafted in the two-day session.

Psycho-Cybernetics And The S.F. Giants

Psycho-cybernetics is a tongue twister with which the Giants wrestled last spring. "What's it all about?" asked Willie Mays who missed the first clubhouse meeting at which the baseball club was introduced to psycho-cybernetics.

"Concentration," explained Jim Davenport to the captain of the Giants. "That's it in one word. The doctor wants us to concentrate, think positively."

"MAN," REPLIED Mays, "what does he think I've been doing for 20 years?"

"Maybe," said Davenport, "if you'd been concentrating right you'd have 800 instead of 600 homers by now."

Mays, who had arrived 24 hours late for opening of 1970 spring training because urgent business had kept him in San Francisco, said: "I'm going to be at that next session just to see what the doctor — what's his-name — tells me."

DR. FRANCIS JACKS, San Francisco specialist in internal medicine, would have told Mays precisely what he had told all other members of the Giants but Horace Stoneham cancelled the course in positive thinking after the initial session.

Stoneham wasn't dissatisfied with the results of Dr. Jacks' program in mental training. Indeed, the owner of the ball club ordered the program for the entire team because of Dr. Jacks' success during the winter with several Giants who had volunteered for positive thinking lessons.

BUT STONEHAM was disappointed at the negative reaction of the team's veterans to any formal course in positive thinking. It sounded silly to them and, in fact, the first clubhouse meeting last spring did resemble an early morning seance.

A sleepy-eyed squad began filing into the clubhouse at 8 a.m. Dr. Jacks explained what the program was all about. Then he urged the players to relax, to lower the lids of their eyes, stretch out their legs and even to wiggle their toes to speed the relaxing process.

The players were further urged to concentrate on their good hitting days and how they were swinging and striding. In other words, as Dr. Jacks explained, they might by themselves discover the reasons why they enjoyed success. Banish negative thoughts of slumps.

THERE WERE snickers from skeptics when Dr. Jacks began asking individual members of the team what they were thinking about.

"Hitting," said Davenport when the question was put to the former Gold Glove third baseman.

"And how are you doing?" asked the doctor.

"Not so good," said Davenport who later in the season retired as an active player to become manager of the Phoenix Giants.

Bernie Williams, a talented rookie outfielder who was a year away last spring but may make the big team this year, drew a big laugh when he said he was mentally hitting the ball good but pulling everything foul.

Rested Marin Tars Host Santa Rosa

By DAVID EINSTEIN

After a week of rest and recuperation, the College of Marin Tars take their home court tonight for a Camino Norte Conference basketball game against Santa Rosa Junior College.

The Kentfield club needed a rest following a disastrous loss to Contra Costa in the last game before the semester break. The great San Pablo catastrophe, 91-62, cost the Tars a share of first place in the CNC, even though it was only their second loss of the season.

Overall, Marin's record is 18-2, still the best of any junior college in California, and good enough for a seventh place state ranking. Contra Costa and West Valley, with whom they are tied for second place, are ranked fifth and 14th; all three have 4-1 league records. At the top of the league is De Anza of Cupertino, undefeated in five games and ranked 17th.

With four teams in the top 20, the CNC is now considered the toughest league in the state, tougher even than the always powerful Southern California Conference. How Marin will fare in such company the rest of the way will be somewhat determined Friday and next Wednesday, in games against De Anza and West Valley that wrap up the first league round robin. Needless to say, whoever made out Marin's schedule was a sadist.

Maybe Marin coach John Panagakis should lay in a supply of aspirin. Because if his troops play no better in those games than they did against Contra Costa, they'll need a funeral, not a rest.

But the coach isn't overly worried. He believes, as do most of the Tar fans who saw the Contra Costa game, that "We just didn't play that night. It just wasn't our night." As a matter of fact, he is optimistic, saying, "It's early in the year, and one loss doesn't end our season."

For now, the Tars are concentrating on Santa Rosa, which, though winless in league play, is an arch rival. "Anything goes in this game," says Panagakis. "They've got nothing to lose."

Marin's fortunes, as always, rest largely on the shoulders of guard Joe Smith and center Roosevelt Green. Neither had a particularly good night against Contra Costa — they only got 26 points between them. But Smith's average through 20 games is 19.4, and Green is 17.7, and they stand to improve those statistics tonight.

The game, which begins at 8 o'clock, will be broadcast by KTIM FM (101.9), with Bob Dinsmore handling the play-by-play.

FOOTBALL DRAFT BEGINS TOMORROW

Time Is Running Out For Undecided Patriots

NEW YORK (UPI)—Time is running out on the Boston Patriots.

The Patriots, who finished with the worst record in the National Football League last season and thus earned the No. 1 choice in the college draft, aren't sure what to do with it.

The draft opens Thursday at 10 a.m. EST at New York's Belmont Plaza Hotel and the Boston front office must decide whether to exercise the choice and take Stanford's Jim Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy winning quarterback, or trade the rights for established veterans.

"We haven't made any decision yet," said a Patriots' spokesman Tuesday. "We're still thinking it over. We may still trade the choice. If that happens, it could be anytime up to Thursday morning."

Representatives from close to 20 pro teams have been on the Patriots' doorstep ever since the season ended. At least eight teams are in dire need of a quarterback and Plunkett, who set NCAA career and single season passing records, seems to fit the bill perfectly.

The Baltimore Colts, the World Champions who have two first round choices, are one of the leading candidates for Boston's choice. The Colts supposedly have offered a wide receiver and a linebacker, two of the Patriots' critical needs, plus one of their first round picks.

Baltimore earned an extra pick on the first round when Miami was forced to hand its over for signing Colts' Coach Don Shula last year. The Colts are the only team with two first round selections.

San Francisco, where Californian Plunkett's rooting interests lie, is another club seeking the Stanford star as an heir to John Brodie.

New Orleans has second choice in the draft and presumably will take Mississippi's Archie Manning. The Saints traded away Bill Kilmer, last year's quarterback, to Washington Saturday and probably will hand the first-string quarterback slot to whichever signal caller they choose on the first round.

Other selections in the first round in order are:

Houston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, the New York Jets, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Denver, Washington, Chicago, Green Bay, San Diego, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, St. Louis, the New York Giants, Oakland, Los Angeles, Detroit, Baltimore (from Miami), San Francisco, Minnesota, Dallas and the Colts' own choice.

A time limit of 15 minutes per choice is in effect for the first two rounds and a five-minute deadline is set on the remaining 15 rounds. A total of 442 players will be drafted in the two-day session.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Beware Of Pushing Resourceful Foe — He Might Make Overbid

The normal object of a sacrifice bid is to lose less at a deliberate overbid than the opponents could make at a contract of their own. If the opponents are stubborn they may bid past your sacrifice and wind up with a minus score instead of a plus. But beware of pushing a resourceful opponent too far; he may manage to bring his overbid home.

SLAM GAMBLE

When today's hand was played some years ago in a national tournament, the late Mike Michaels refused to let East play the hand at six spades. The penalty was bound to be insufficient, and Michaels preferred to gamble that he could make a grand slam.

East should have gone on to seven spades. He would have gone down six, for a penalty of 1,100 points. This would have been less than allowing South to make a vulnerable small slam, let alone a grand slam. But North was willing to gamble that he had pushed Michaels overboard.

SURE LOSER

Declarer ruffed the opening spade lead and looked at the dummy with some doubt. Apparently there was a sure diamond loser.

Michaels cashed the ace of clubs, led a trump to the king, ruffed a club in dummy, returned to his hand with a trump and cashed the king of clubs to discard a diamond. If the queen of clubs fell, he could discard dummy's other diamond.

When there was no such luck, Michaels ruffed his last club in dummy, ruffed a second spade, and led his next-to-last trump to discard dummy's last low diamond.

FOUR CARDS

This left South with one trump and three diamonds. Dummy had two spades and the two top diamonds. East couldn't come down safely to four cards.

If East saved three diamonds and only one spade, South would lead a diamond to dummy, ruff a spade, and return to dummy with a diamond to cash the last spade. If East saved two spades and only two diamonds, declarer would cash both of the top diamonds and then ruff a spade to cash the last diamond in his hand.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Beware Of Pushing Resourceful Foe — He Might Make Overbid

The normal object of a sacrifice bid is to lose less at a deliberate overbid than the opponents could make at a contract of their own. If the opponents are stubborn they may bid past your sacrifice and wind up with a minus score instead of a plus. But beware of pushing a resourceful opponent too far; he may manage to bring his overbid home.

SLAM GAMBLE

When today's hand was played some years ago in a national tournament, the late Mike Michaels refused to let East play the hand at six spades. The penalty was bound to be insufficient, and Michaels preferred to gamble that he could make a grand slam.

East should have gone on to seven spades. He would have gone down six, for a penalty of 1,100 points. This would have been less than allowing South to make a vulnerable small slam, let alone a grand slam. But North was willing to gamble that he had pushed Michaels overboard.

SURE LOSER

Declarer ruffed the opening spade lead and looked at the dummy with some doubt. Apparently there was a sure diamond loser.

Michaels cashed the ace of clubs, led a trump to the king, ruffed a club in dummy, returned to his hand with a trump and cashed the king of clubs to discard a diamond. If the queen of clubs fell, he could discard dummy's other diamond.

When there was no such luck, Michaels ruffed his last club in dummy, ruffed a second spade, and led his next-to-last trump to discard dummy's last low diamond.

FOUR CARDS

This left South with one trump and three diamonds. Dummy had two spades and the two top diamonds. East couldn't come down safely to four cards.

If East saved three diamonds and only one spade, South would lead a diamond to dummy, ruff a spade, and return to dummy with a diamond to cash the last spade. If East saved two spades and only two diamonds, declarer would cash both of the top diamonds and then ruff a spade to cash the last diamond in his hand.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Airline Troubles May Slack Off

By ROGER E. SPEAR

q. I am interested in your opinion of the airline industry and in particular Pacific Southwest Airlines. — D.C.

A. If the economy can stage at least a moderate recovery in 1971, most carriers should experience significant revenue improvement. Whether this can be carried down to net is another story. Current estimates place the 1970 deficit for the 12 major carriers at about $120 million compared with a profit in 1969 of $147 million.

If the downtrend of the last three years continues unabated, this deficit would exceed $200 million in 1971. Further additions of the 747 aircraft to fleets may result in a 10 per cent capacity gain for 1971, and if passenger traffic regains some of its former lustre, this gain can be converted into a sharp profit upswing. And December figures indicate that traffic may be picking up.

The industry has already instituted several economy measures. At last count 2500 workers had been dropped from the carriers' payrolls, scheduled flights had been reduced by 5 per cent and a 30 per cent reduction in spending for aircraft and facilities has been budgeted for 1971. Other sources of aid include mergers and possible assistance from an administration anxious to avert an airborne Penn Central with elections in the offing.

The proposed easing in depreciation rulings would also prove beneficial. Pacific Southwest is in a somewhat unique position, operating solely in California and thereby avoiding CAB regulation. Thus fares have been scaled to optimum levels, emphasis placed on frequently scheduled flights and the reservation system simplified.

Revenues for the nine months ended September, advanced 30 per cent year-to-year, while net income gained 44 per cent to $1.11 a share. A labor cost squeeze was offset by reduced fuel and insurance costs, enabling margins to widen for the period.

1971 results should benefit from higher receipts in both car and aircraft leasing activities and by authorization to round off fares. Purchases in speculative accounts could prove worthwhile.

Kodak Plans Hike In Capital Outlay

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Eastman Kodak Co. said it plans $364 million in capital expenditures this year, an increase of about 17 per cent from 1970's spending.

The program will provide facilities for product improvement and increase capacity in heavy demand areas, according to Chairman Louis K. Eilers. Of the total, $281 million is slated for the United States and Canada and $83 million for associate companies of the international photographic division.

Phone Rates Higher For Interstate

NEW YORK (UPI) — The telephone company began charging higher rates on certain types of interstate phone calls Tuesday, marking the first general increase since 1953.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said the rate hikes, which went through on a temporary basis pending full approval by the Federal Communications Commission, were expected to increase its interstate revenues by about 3 per cent.

The rates went up on calls requiring operator assistance, such as collect calls, person-to-person calls and credit card calls. Smaller increases also were applied to shorter-haul station calls dialed by customers during busy weekday daytime hours.

The FCC has scheduled hearings for March on AT&T's 6 per cent rate boost on interstate calls. The telephone company is keeping track of the extra money collected through the interim boost and will refund it if the FCC says no.

Rates for person-to-person calls went up 20 to 30 cents for the first three minutes. Station to station calls placed with an operator's assistance, including credit card and collect calls went up five to 30 cents, depending upon distance.

Trade Balance Hits $2.7 Billion In '70

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U. S. exports exceeded imports by $2.7 billion last year, more than double the $1.3 billion favorable trade balance recorded in 1969, the Commerce Department reported.

The department said exports for the year totaled $42.7 billion, an increase of 14 per cent over the 1969 total. Imports last year totaled $40 billion, an increase of about 11 per cent over the year.

Indonesian Oil

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Natomas Co. said it has discovered oil off the southeast Sumatra, Indonesia coast. The company said a subsidiary, Independent Indonesian American Petroleum Co., said a well tested oil of about 5,500 barrels daily from four separate intervals.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

Self-Employment Tax Applies To Income Of $400 Or More

Everyone who has self-employment income of $400 or more is required to file a Social Security Self-Employment tax return. That is Schedule C-3 of the Federal Income Tax Return, Form 1040.

Your social security self-employment tax is credited to your social security account and will be taken into account in computing the amount of social security you will receive on retirement.

Your self-employment tax is .069 of your self-employment income up to $7,800 for 1970 — a maximum of $538.20.

Self-employment income is the net profit of your business or your farm income.

You may have more than one business or farm. Then you combine your self-employment income or loss from all businesses.

You may be a partner in a business. Then you must include your share of the partnership income or loss in computing your net earnings for self-employment.

Wages (but not drawings) your receive from the partnership must be included, plus your share of the earnings or minus your share of the losses. All individuals engaged in a trade, business or the pursuit of a profession in any capacity, other than employees, are subject to the self-employment tax, except public officials elected or appointed.

Duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed ministers of churches, members of religious orders (who have not taken a vow of poverty), and Christian Science practitioners are now subject to self-employment tax, but may, under certain conditions, request exemption by filing form 4361. If you file form 4361, write "Exempt-Form 4361" on the back of form 1040.

If you previously filed an effective waiver certificate, form 2031, to pay self-employment tax, you may not now file for an exemption. See Publication 484, Social Security for Clergymen.

Ministers and members of religious orders must include in their earnings from self-employment (but not for income tax purposes) the rental value of a parsonage or allowance for the rental value of the parsonage and the value of meals and lodging furnished them for the convenience of their employers.

If your wages subject to social security tax were in excess of $7,800, you are not subject to the self-employment tax on any self-employment income you may have.

Ecology Agency Urges Warnings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House office has served notice on all federal agencies that they must come clean with the public before they do anything that might damage the environment.

Advance notice of any such action, to give the public time to react, would be required under revised "guidelines" projected by the Council on Environmental Quality headed by Russell E. Train.

Under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1970, federal agencies must prepare "environmental impact statements" on anything they plan to do that might "significantly" affect the human environment directly or indirectly, now or later.

Beth Steel Reports 42.5% Profit Drop

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bethlehem Steel Corp., which recently touched off a row with the government over steel price boosts, slashed its quarterly dividend by one third today and reported a 42.5 per cent drop in 1970 profits despite higher sales.

Beth Steel directors cut the quarterly dividend to 30 cents from 45 cents per share, beginning with a payout March 10 to holders of record Feb. 9. The nation's second largest steel producer had been paying 45 cents quarterly since the second quarter of 1969 when the steel industry was on its way to a record year in production and shipments.

Market Is Lower Near Final Bell

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market turned lower today after nine consecutive advances. Trading was heavy.

With less than an hour to go, the Dow Jones Industrial Average of 30 selected blue chips was off more than 6½ points at 860.08. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was off 1.03 at 94.56.

Of the 1,657 issues crossing the tape, 1,081 pointed lower, while 330 declined.

A four-hour volume of 14,760,000 shares compared with 15,820,000 shares traded at a comparable period yesterday.

Many analysts said most of the market's pressure stemmed from pent up profit taking following a lengthy advance. Others felt the setback also reflected depressing corporate earnings news from the steel industry, and a preliminary report of a rise in wholesale prices in January which dampened the administration's claim that it had turned the corner in its fight against inflation and rising prices.

The government also reported that its index of leading economic indicators, regarded as a barometer of future movement in the economy, advanced in December for the second consecutive month.

A government spokesman said last month's rise reflected the end of the General Motors strike and the continuation of the basic uptrend underway in the indicators since the low point last May.

Harold C. Passer, assistant commerce secretary for economic policy, said the index "strongly suggests that the economy will continue to expand in the months ahead."

Among the day's most active issues were Trans-World Airlines, Madison Square Gardens, Pennzoil, Eastern Air Lines and Addressograph-Multigraph.

Airline Troubles May Slack Off

By ROGER E. SPEAR

q. I am interested in your opinion of the airline industry and in particular Pacific Southwest Airlines. — D.C.

A. If the economy can stage at least a moderate recovery in 1971, most carriers should experience significant revenue improvement. Whether this can be carried down to net is another story. Current estimates place the 1970 deficit for the 12 major carriers at about $120 million compared with a profit in 1969 of $147 million.

If the downtrend of the last three years continues unabated, this deficit would exceed $200 million in 1971. Further additions of the 747 aircraft to fleets may result in a 10 per cent capacity gain for 1971, and if passenger traffic regains some of its former lustre, this gain can be converted into a sharp profit upswing. And December figures indicate that traffic may be picking up.

The industry has already instituted several economy measures. At last count 2500 workers had been dropped from the carriers' payrolls, scheduled flights had been reduced by 5 per cent and a 30 per cent reduction in spending for aircraft and facilities has been budgeted for 1971. Other sources of aid include mergers and possible assistance from an administration anxious to avert an airborne Penn Central with elections in the offing.

The proposed easing in depreciation rulings would also prove beneficial. Pacific Southwest is in a somewhat unique position, operating solely in California and thereby avoiding CAB regulation. Thus fares have been scaled to optimum levels, emphasis placed on frequently scheduled flights and the reservation system simplified.

Revenues for the nine months ended September, advanced 30 per cent year-to-year, while net income gained 44 per cent to $1.11 a share. A labor cost squeeze was offset by reduced fuel and insurance costs, enabling margins to widen for the period.

1971 results should benefit from higher receipts in both car and aircraft leasing activities and by authorization to round off fares. Purchases in speculative accounts could prove worthwhile.

Phone Rates Higher For Interstate

NEW YORK (UPI) — The telephone company began charging higher rates on certain types of interstate phone calls Tuesday, marking the first general increase since 1953.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said the rate hikes, which went through on a temporary basis pending full approval by the Federal Communications Commission, were expected to increase its interstate revenues by about 3 per cent.

The rates went up on calls requiring operator assistance, such as collect calls, person-to-person calls and credit card calls. Smaller increases also were applied to shorter-haul station calls dialed by customers during busy weekday daytime hours.

The FCC has scheduled hearings for March on AT&T's 6 per cent rate boost on interstate calls. The telephone company is keeping track of the extra money collected through the interim boost and will refund it if the FCC says no.

Rates for person-to-person calls went up 20 to 30 cents for the first three minutes. Station to station calls placed with an operator's assistance, including credit card and collect calls went up five to 30 cents, depending upon distance.

Trade Balance Hits $2.7 Billion In '70

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U. S. exports exceeded imports by $2.7 billion last year, more than double the $1.3 billion favorable trade balance recorded in 1969, the Commerce Department reported.

The department said exports for the year totaled $42.7 billion, an increase of 14 per cent over the 1969 total. Imports last year totaled $40 billion, an increase of about 11 per cent over the year.

Kodak Plans Hike In Capital Outlay

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Eastman Kodak Co. said it plans $364 million in capital expenditures this year, an increase of about 17 per cent from 1970's spending.

The program will provide facilities for product improvement and increase capacity in heavy demand areas, according to Chairman Louis K. Eilers. Of the total, $281 million is slated for the United States and Canada and $83 million for associate companies of the international photographic division.

Indonesian Oil

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Natomas Co. said it has discovered oil off the southeast Sumatra, Indonesia coast. The company said a subsidiary, Independent Indonesian American Petroleum Co., said a well tested oil of about 5,500 barrels daily from four separate intervals.

Self-Employment Tax Applies To Income Of $400 Or More

Everyone who has self-employment income of $400 or more is required to file a Social Security Self-Employment tax return. That is Schedule C-3 of the Federal Income Tax Return, Form 1040.

Your social security self-employment tax is credited to your social security account and will be taken into account in computing the amount of social security you will receive on retirement.

Your self-employment tax is .069 of your self-employment income up to $7,800 for 1970 — a maximum of $538.20.

Self-employment income is the net profit of your business or your farm income.

You may have more than one business or farm. Then you combine your self-employment income or loss from all businesses.

You may be a partner in a business. Then you must include your share of the partnership income or loss in computing your net earnings for self-employment.

Wages (but not drawings) your receive from the partnership must be included, plus your share of the earnings or minus your share of the losses. All individuals engaged in a trade, business or the pursuit of a profession in any capacity, other than employees, are subject to the self-employment tax, except public officials elected or appointed.

Duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed ministers of churches, members of religious orders (who have not taken a vow of poverty), and Christian Science practitioners are now subject to self-employment tax, but may, under certain conditions, request exemption by filing form 4361. If you file form 4361, write "Exempt-Form 4361" on the back of form 1040.

If you previously filed an effective waiver certificate, form 2031, to pay self-employment tax, you may not now file for an exemption. See Publication 484, Social Security for Clergymen.

Ministers and members of religious orders must include in their earnings from self-employment (but not for income tax purposes) the rental value of a parsonage or allowance for the rental value of the parsonage and the value of meals and lodging furnished them for the convenience of their employers.

If your wages subject to social security tax were in excess of $7,800, you are not subject to the self-employment tax on any self-employment income you may have.

Ecology Agency Urges Warnings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House office has served notice on all federal agencies that they must come clean with the public before they do anything that might damage the environment.

Advance notice of any such action, to give the public time to react, would be required under revised "guidelines" projected by the Council on Environmental Quality headed by Russell E. Train.

Under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1970, federal agencies must prepare "environmental impact statements" on anything they plan to do that might "significantly" affect the human environment directly or indirectly, now or later.

Beth Steel Reports 42.5% Profit Drop

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bethlehem Steel Corp., which recently touched off a row with the government over steel price boosts, slashed its quarterly dividend by one third today and reported a 42.5 per cent drop in 1970 profits despite higher sales.

Beth Steel directors cut the quarterly dividend to 30 cents from 45 cents per share, beginning with a payout March 10 to holders of record Feb. 9. The nation's second largest steel producer had been paying 45 cents quarterly since the second quarter of 1969 when the steel industry was on its way to a record year in production and shipments.

Market Is Lower Near Final Bell

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market turned lower today after nine consecutive advances. Trading was heavy.

With less than an hour to go, the Dow Jones Industrial Average of 30 selected blue chips was off more than 6½ points at 860.08. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was off 1.03 at 94.56.

Of the 1,657 issues crossing the tape, 1,081 pointed lower, while 330 declined.

A four-hour volume of 14,760,000 shares compared with 15,820,000 shares traded at a comparable period yesterday.

Many analysts said most of the market's pressure stemmed from pent up profit taking following a lengthy advance. Others felt the setback also reflected depressing corporate earnings news from the steel industry, and a preliminary report of a rise in wholesale prices in January which dampened the administration's claim that it had turned the corner in its fight against inflation and rising prices.

The government also reported that its index of leading economic indicators, regarded as a barometer of future movement in the economy, advanced in December for the second consecutive month.

A government spokesman said last month's rise reflected the end of the General Motors strike and the continuation of the basic uptrend underway in the indicators since the low point last May.

Harold C. Passer, assistant commerce secretary for economic policy, said the index "strongly suggests that the economy will continue to expand in the months ahead."

Among the day's most active issues were Trans-World Airlines, Madison Square Gardens, Pennzoil, Eastern Air Lines and Addressograph-Multigraph.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Steel production rose by 2.4 per cent last week to 2,596,000 tons from 2,534,000 tons the week before, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported.

Production in the week ended Jan. 23 was equal to 106.4 on the institute's new index (average weekly production in 1967 equals 100, or 2,439,701 tons) compared with 103.9 for the previous week.

Just What Is Meant By U.S. 'Withdrawal'?

When he was campaigning for the presidency in 1968, Richard M. Nixon said he had a plan for ending the Vietnam war. But he said he could not reveal it until after the election.

Shortly after taking office in January, 1969 — two years ago — Mr. Nixon announced that his plan "envisages the complete withdrawal of all American combat forces."

In June, 1969, he expressed hope that "all U. S. ground combat forces" could be withdrawn by the end of 1970.

In November, 1969, the President said: "We have adopted a plan which we have worked out in cooperation with the South Vietnamese for the complete withdrawal of all U.S. ground combat forces and their replacement by South Vietnamese forces on an orderly scheduled timetable."

In November, 1970, he said: "I again reaffirm this government's acceptance of eventual, total withdrawal of American troops." But, he added: "In turn, we must see the permanent withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops and be given reasonable assurances they will not return."

EARLY THIS MONTH, Defense Secy. Melvin R. Laird said at a press conference in Bangkok, Thailand, that most U. S. troops "with combat responsibility" will be withdrawn by May 1. And he mentioned a goal of mid-summer for ending "U.S. combat responsibilities."

Laird's remarks called forth the usual Washington "clarification." Jerry W. Freidheim, a Pentagon spokesman, said the 385,000 American soldiers still in Vietnam would be reduced by about 100,000 by May 1. But he said more than 100,000 of the 285,000 then remaining will be "combat troops."

All this tends to be confusing. But a likely sounding explanation was given a few months ago by Walter Lippmann, writing in Newsweek.

"OUR STRATEGY is not to buy concessions from Hanoi with our military withdrawal, but to buy patience and endurance from the American people for an indefinitely long American occupation in South Vietnam," wrote Lippmann.

"The theory is that a long occupation, using some 200,000 support troops and the artillery and the Air Force, can be made acceptable to the American people."

The emphasis on "ground combat troops" and "troops with combat responsibility" seems to bear out Lippmann's analysis.

Withdrawal of such troops, however, in no sense means U. S. disinvolvement from the mess in Southeast Asia. We got in there originally with a handful of "advisers."

MUCH IS MADE of the presence of a small number of Russian aviators and missilemen in the United Arab Republic. Much is made of the possible presence of a few Russian military men in Cuba.

Can we expect to promote the cause of peace if we keep a much larger number of fighting men indefinitely in Southeast Asia?

The "complete withdrawal" President Nixon has "reaffirmed" is hinged on ending of the war. But that is a matter between the North and South Vietnamese governments.

Isn't it about time we left it up to them to settle it?

Joyless Nature Handicaps Board

Re: Jan. 23 article on the recall petition of Mr. Gordon C. Wright

There is little to be questioned in the action of the two women, Mrs. Ann Goff and Mrs. Carolyn Hunter, who have filed for the recall of Gordon C. Wright of the Reed District school board. Mr. Wright is a man whose cold and joyless nature has permeated the school atmosphere too long. His is a hostile showmanship that curbs even the most enlightenen enthusiasm of those attending the board meetings.

The sad climate of negativism that in the beginning of Mr. Wright's term wore the guise of a serious "getting down to business" of wise spending of district monies and a reevaluation of educational philosphies was, in reality, a reversal of all the healthy progress this district had made under the previous board. Unfortunately, we must hold ourselves responsible for remaining silent until the long overdue but brave action of Mrs. Goff and Mrs. Hunter.

Let us hope that now that the silent majority has spoken we learn our lesson well and not allow ourselves to be lulled to sleep by men such as Mr. Wright who reign with secrecy and mistrust and whose weapon is the intimidation of those who must associate with him. Let us also hope that once the negative act of recall is done with, we positively act to elect persons to our school board who do not need to use their office to enhance themselves.

Blame Must Rest On Social Worker

Regarding your welfare story of Jan. 6 on the "Litteral family" and their wholly disgraceful treatment of their rental residence. As Mrs. Vel DeLeon wrote on Jan. 13, a very large share of the blame must fall on the incompetance of the welfare department, and particularly the shameful "welfare at any price" philosophy of people like social worker Mary Culver. If social workers refuse to use their jurisdiction to prevent such situations and indeed insist on subsidizing such situations, then these workers must be replaced. They should realize their action, or lack of action, eventually guarantees that private housing will be made unavailable to all welfare families.

Regardless of their asinine desires to cater to welfare recipients' every whim, these workers must realize that property owners, too, have rights.

Furthermore, as the Supreme Court has recently ruled, welfare monies are in the nature of trust funds, for which the social worker must assume a fiduciary responsibility. The taxpayer is entitled to know that his money is being properly expended. . .

School Trustee Deserves Support

The attempt to unseat Gordon Wright, chairman of the Reed Union School District board of trustees, reported in the Independent-Journal last week, is utterly incomprehensible.

Mr. Wright is a man of exceptional ability, dedicated to the concept that children of this district should have the finest possible education. He consistently seeks objective evidence to ensure this.

It is obvious that he also has courage and stamina in the face of rather persistent abuse. May we suggest that his detractors join with him in an objective examination of district problems, rather than introducing more dissention on the basis of inadequate information.

Mr. Wright deserves the support and cooperation of his fellow citizens — and their thanks.

Saving Of Birds Gets Top Priority

This article is addressed to the people of Marin County and the Bay Area who offered their free services to clean the beaches and save the birds who were helpless victims of the oil slick. I have been working at the Novato Humane Society, and we have set up a wonderful operation to save every bird we possibly can.

Each individual life, to us, is previous, and we are spending a tremendous amount of time caring for each and every bird. We have a bird hospital and a small staff of very patient and loving people. Our death rate is now about 80 per cent, about 12 per cent lower than the expected 92 per cent.

On Sunday, two representatives of the Fish and Game Department and the Fleishacker zoo came to Novato asking for our birds. We abruptly refused, and sent a highly respectful representative to the zoo to check out the situation. There at the zoo, the hundreds of birds they have are dying at a very tremendous rate, much greater than ours. The scientists there do not care at all if the birds die, they just experiment with them. They have no special care for sick birds, so virtually all their sick birds are going to die, if they haven't already. Now they want to have every bird that has been rescued, but they aren't going to get ours. They know, as well as we do, that if they were to transport our birds to the zoo, most of them would die during transportation. When confronted with this fact, one of the representatives stated directly that they do not care. This is insane, cruel, and positively against the whole idea of saving any birds. Besides, it is highly probable that any birds that survive there will be sold to other zoos, instead of turned back to wildlife!

We want to save every bird we have from sickness and death, and we are going to turn them back to nature when they are well again. We hope that the people who read this will understand our situation, and help our cause. We still need many towels and warm flannel clothes for our hospital, and we are very thankful for the previous donations of clothing, fish for the birds, food for the workers, and everything else, including volunteers. Let us all hope for the best, and save every little life we can, while they're still there.

THE DRUMMONDS

Can Nixon And Congress Learn From Mistakes Of The Past?

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — Now that President Nixon is asking Congress to join him in enacting a worthy and ambitious domestic program to improve the State of the Union, the question is: What next?

Will Nixon work in cooperative spirit with this newly elected Democratic Congress or will he lapse back into barking at it and quarreling?

Will the President do far more than he did during the past two years to mobilize public support for the challenging, needed new measures he outlined in his State of the Union message? If not, he will likely lose most of them.

Finally, will the dominant Democrats in the Senate have the wisdom to realize that they can be grievously hurt themselves politically by devoting most of their time to attacking the President instead of attacking the problems?

ON THE SURFACE the outlook is not encouraging.

The elements which turned the Senate into inefficient stalemate last year are still present.

Nixon has not proved himself an effective advocate of his domestic programs and it remains to be seen whether he becomes one.

Many of the most influential Democratic senators see themselves as potential presidential nominees and each will be often looking to further his own pollitical interest, and not that of the party as a whole. This does not augur very well for a Democratic Congress co-operating with a Republican President to get things done — although the country is crying out for government to govern.

BUT THERE ARE some new factors which could bring about a productive legislative session.

Nixon learns from adversity. He wouldn't be President if he didn't. He had sharp setbacks from Congress in his first two years, and he had some adversities in the November election. In his recent conversation with four TV reporters, he was asked how he felt he had changed in office.

"The changes," he replied, "are more in an understanding of the job . . . I think I know better how to do the job."

The tone of his "State of the Union" message last week shows that Nixon aims to bring a new spirit of conciliation in his dealings with the Democratic Congress. If he maintains this spirit it will be politically hurtful to them to spurn it.

Mr. Nixon's message shows that he is decisively reordering priorities in ways many Democrats have been urging. He is untying the purse-strings on the budget in order to deal more boldly with a long list of social needs from welfare reforms to health care to rescuing the states and cities from imminent bankruptcy through revenue sharing, plus a radical restructuring of the executive branch.

IS IT INTELLIGENT for the Democrats to deny to Nixon the things which they said he should be doing? The party's 1968 presidential nominee, now back in his old seat in the Congress, Hubert Humphrey, is saying the right things at the right time. He's telling his colleagues that the most important and politically advantageous thing they can do is "to show the country that the Democrats can govern."

Right. And they can best do that by either helping to enact the urgent Nixon programs or improve them.

Humphrey knows from first-hand observation how a negative congressional record can wreck a party. He was there in 1948 when Senate Majority Leader Robert Taft announced that the Republican Congress would not approve any domestic legislation President Truman was asking because he (Taft) preferred to wait "until Dewey was elected." That "do-nothing" Republican Congress helped to elect Harry Truman.

What this country needs is a "do-something" Congress working co-operatively with a do-something President to get done what shouldn't wait.

Conservation License Plates — Great Financial Fiasco

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — When, as and if the state wants money to combat air and other pollution, it's going to have to dig deep in the taxpayers' pockets.

Because the California Environmental Protection Program Fund not only is broke, but in the red.

Reason, there aren't enough tax-paying patriots buying special "prestige" automobile license plates to meet the obligations of the fund.

The state legislature tried a noble experiment, and voted a law providing for issuance of special license plates, with any combination of letters and numbers within reason.

The special plates cost the state $5 to make. The sales cost was $25 per plate. The theory was that public-spirited citizens, who at one time used political favoritism to get the license numbers they wanted, would flock to the motor vehicle department in droves to pay for the special plates.

It was, perhaps, the biggest bad judgment the legislature has come up with in many a long day. So certain were the solons that the special plates couldn't miss that they appropriated nearly two million dollars from the special fund set up by the bill.

So far, the Department of Motor Vehicles reports the gross sales have amounted to $350,000. Figuring the cost of production, and the clerical costs of handling, not to mention the special files necessary to look up the special numbers in case they have to be checked, the total take comes closer to being a loss rather than a profit for the environmental fund.

One of the biggest complaints is the repeat $25 fee every year for renewal. Many persons say they would enjoy having a special plate to inflate their ego and as a conversation piece, and wouldn't mind paying the extra $25. But when it comes to an extra $25 every year, it just isn't worth the money.

It was suggested in some quarters that the special license plate be made a project of the Sierra Club, the super-duper conservation organization, so the members could contribute to improvement of the ecology.

But probably Sierra Club members are on the same plane with other citizens, attempting to meet the steadily increasing tax bills of the federal government, the state, the counties, the cities, and the special districts, and mayhap are thinking of saving a buck rather than contribute it to the state.

Any way you look at it, the plan won't make much, if any money.

When the legislature conceived the idealistic method of raising money, it did not call in the hard-headed businessmen who have had experience in sales work. In fact, there are few hard-headed businessmen left in the legislature, now that it's turned into a professional body.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

The Consummate Senator: Russell Of Georgia

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — The United States Senate is what it is today in considerable part because of Richard B. Russell, yet it will never be the same without him.

He was publicly flat wrong on the most fundamental politcal issue of his time, yet he was respected by those who opposed him, and even by some of those whose lives were made miserable by the tradition he upheld.

Thousands of well-reasoned words were spoken at the Capitol this week against the rules of congressional seniority, but this one man's career as chairman of the Armed Services Committee was the best single exhibit of what is sensible about the system. Politicians as unalike as Harry Truman and Richard Nixon said out loud in the past that if Russell had been from anywhere but the Deep South he surely would have become President.

THERE WAS a time, when Russell was not long in the Senate and furious at northern civil rights advocates, that he suggested a federally financed shift of 1.5 million black families to the North and the same number of whites into the South, thus helping "equalize our racial problem."

But that was not typical of him. He was not a demagogue. He was an aristocratic, honorable southern gentleman, in all the decent connotations of the phrase.

He defeated a memorable demagogue, the gallus-snapping Gene Talmadge, to come to the Senate. In recent years, he left Georgia's share of fiery senatorial oratory to Gene's son, Herman. In the long-delayed action against civil rights legislation, he concentrated instead on constitutional and especially parliamentary tactics.

Although Russell organized the issuance of the defiant Southern Manifesto after the Supreme Court desegregation decision of 1954, that was show business, and he would not have denied it. And a decade later, when Lyndon Johnson mounted a total effort to put through John Kennedy's civil rights proposals, Russell let the new President know that he would not block it if in the end there would be none of the typical Johnsonian compromising to get the bill passed — if instead he and his southern colleagues were allowed to fight bravely and go down with flags flying. They did.

ALL THAT is the most familiar Russell, standing in the well of the Senate, his head tilted back to look down his hawklike nose through his bifocals, producing like a rabbit from a hat some long-buried parliamentary technicality to further delay the inevitable. What is less widely known is the breadth and depth of his intellect, particularly in political and military affairs.

Those with him at the NATO parliamentarians' conference in 1956 remember his handling of a resolution to condemn Russian intervention in Hungary. Calmly, he delivered a brilliant 15-minute analysis of internal politics in each allied country and concluded the resolution should be handled by Belgium. It passed.

He was just as informed about American state politics. Younger senators constantly came to him for advice — among them northern liberals who would never want their constituents to know — and when he counseled them he often began by saying, "Now, if I represented your state, I'd . . ." He knew their business as well as they did.

Other people said Lyndon Johnson was the consummate man of the Senate; Mr. Johnson would say Dick Russell was.

His positive achievements include guiding rural electrification and universal military training into law, keeping the Dixiecrats at home in the Democratic Party in 1952 by running as their candidate within the party and defusing the passionate controversy over Gen. Douglas MacArthur's dismissal by him impeccable conduct of the joint congressional inquiry.

Mr. Wright is a man whose cold and joyless nature has permeated the school atmosphere too long. His is a hostile showmanship that curbs even the most enlightenen enthusiasm of those attending the board meetings.

The sad climate of negativism that in the beginning of Mr. Wright's term wore the guise of a serious "getting down to business" of wise spending of district monies and a reevaluation of educational philosphies was, in reality, a reversal of all the healthy progress this district had made under the previous board. Unfortunately, we must hold ourselves responsible for remaining silent until the long overdue but brave action of Mrs. Goff and Mrs. Hunter.

Let us hope that now that the silent majority has spoken we learn our lesson well and not allow ourselves to be lulled to sleep by men such as Mr. Wright who reign with secrecy and mistrust and whose weapon is the intimidation of those who must associate with him. Let us also hope that once the negative act of recall is done with, we positively act to elect persons to our school board who do not need to use their office to enhance themselves.

Blame Must Rest On Social Worker

Regarding your welfare story of Jan. 6 on the "Litteral family" and their wholly disgraceful treatment of their rental residence. As Mrs. Vel DeLeon wrote on Jan. 13, a very large share of the blame must fall on the incompetance of the welfare department, and particularly the shameful "welfare at any price" philosophy of people like social worker Mary Culver. If social workers refuse to use their jurisdiction to prevent such situations and indeed insist on subsidizing such situations, then these workers must be replaced. They should realize their action, or lack of action, eventually guarantees that private housing will be made unavailable to all welfare families.

Regardless of their asinine desires to cater to welfare recipients' every whim, these workers must realize that property owners, too, have rights.

Furthermore, as the Supreme Court has recently ruled, welfare monies are in the nature of trust funds, for which the social worker must assume a fiduciary responsibility. The taxpayer is entitled to know that his money is being properly expended. . .

School Trustee Deserves Support

The attempt to unseat Gordon Wright, chairman of the Reed Union School District board of trustees, reported in the Independent-Journal last week, is utterly incomprehensible.

Mr. Wright is a man of exceptional ability, dedicated to the concept that children of this district should have the finest possible education. He consistently seeks objective evidence to ensure this.

It is obvious that he also has courage and stamina in the face of rather persistent abuse. May we suggest that his detractors join with him in an objective examination of district problems, rather than introducing more dissention on the basis of inadequate information.

Mr. Wright deserves the support and cooperation of his fellow citizens — and their thanks.

Saving Of Birds Gets Top Priority

This article is addressed to the people of Marin County and the Bay Area who offered their free services to clean the beaches and save the birds who were helpless victims of the oil slick. I have been working at the Novato Humane Society, and we have set up a wonderful operation to save every bird we possibly can.

Each individual life, to us, is previous, and we are spending a tremendous amount of time caring for each and every bird. We have a bird hospital and a small staff of very patient and loving people. Our death rate is now about 80 per cent, about 12 per cent lower than the expected 92 per cent.

On Sunday, two representatives of the Fish and Game Department and the Fleishacker zoo came to Novato asking for our birds. We abruptly refused, and sent a highly respectful representative to the zoo to check out the situation. There at the zoo, the hundreds of birds they have are dying at a very tremendous rate, much greater than ours. The scientists there do not care at all if the birds die, they just experiment with them. They have no special care for sick birds, so virtually all their sick birds are going to die, if they haven't already. Now they want to have every bird that has been rescued, but they aren't going to get ours. They know, as well as we do, that if they were to transport our birds to the zoo, most of them would die during transportation. When confronted with this fact, one of the representatives stated directly that they do not care. This is insane, cruel, and positively against the whole idea of saving any birds. Besides, it is highly probable that any birds that survive there will be sold to other zoos, instead of turned back to wildlife!

We want to save every bird we have from sickness and death, and we are going to turn them back to nature when they are well again. We hope that the people who read this will understand our situation, and help our cause. We still need many towels and warm flannel clothes for our hospital, and we are very thankful for the previous donations of clothing, fish for the birds, food for the workers, and everything else, including volunteers. Let us all hope for the best, and save every little life we can, while they're still there.

THE DRUMMONDS

Can Nixon And Congress Learn From Mistakes Of The Past?

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — Now that President Nixon is asking Congress to join him in enacting a worthy and ambitious domestic program to improve the State of the Union, the question is: What next?

Will Nixon work in cooperative spirit with this newly elected Democratic Congress or will he lapse back into barking at it and quarreling?

Will the President do far more than he did during the past two years to mobilize public support for the challenging, needed new measures he outlined in his State of the Union message? If not, he will likely lose most of them.

Finally, will the dominant Democrats in the Senate have the wisdom to realize that they can be grievously hurt themselves politically by devoting most of their time to attacking the President instead of attacking the problems?

ON THE SURFACE the outlook is not encouraging.

The elements which turned the Senate into inefficient stalemate last year are still present.

Nixon has not proved himself an effective advocate of his domestic programs and it remains to be seen whether he becomes one.

Many of the most influential Democratic senators see themselves as potential presidential nominees and each will be often looking to further his own pollitical interest, and not that of the party as a whole. This does not augur very well for a Democratic Congress co-operating with a Republican President to get things done — although the country is crying out for government to govern.

BUT THERE ARE some new factors which could bring about a productive legislative session.

Nixon learns from adversity. He wouldn't be President if he didn't. He had sharp setbacks from Congress in his first two years, and he had some adversities in the November election. In his recent conversation with four TV reporters, he was asked how he felt he had changed in office.

"The changes," he replied, "are more in an understanding of the job . . . I think I know better how to do the job."

The tone of his "State of the Union'' message last week shows that Nixon aims to bring a new spirit of conciliation in his dealings with the Democratic Congress. If he maintains this spirit it will be politically hurtful to them to spurn it.

Mr. Nixon's message shows that he is decisively reordering priorities in ways many Democrats have been urging. He is untying the purse-strings on the budget in order to deal more boldly with a long list of social needs from welfare reforms to health care to rescuing the states and cities from imminent bankruptcy through revenue sharing, plus a radical restructuring of the executive branch.

IS IT INTELLIGENT for the Democrats to deny to Nixon the things which they said he should be doing? The party's 1968 presidential nominee, now back in his old seat in the Congress, Hubert Humphrey, is saying the right things at the right time. He's telling his colleagues that the most important and politically advantageous thing they can do is "to show the country that the Democrats can govern."

Right. And they can best do that by either helping to enact the urgent Nixon programs or improve them.

Humphrey knows from first-hand observation how a negative congressional record can wreck a party. He was there in 1948 when Senate Majority Leader Robert Taft announced that the Republican Congress would not approve any domestic legislation President Truman was asking because he (Taft) preferred to wait "until Dewey was elected." That "do-nothing" Republican Congress helped to elect Harry Truman.

What this country needs is a "do-something" Congress working co-operatively with a do-something President to get done what shouldn't wait.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

The Consummate Senator: Russell Of Georgia

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — The United States Senate is what it is today in considerable part because of Richard B. Russell, yet it will never be the same without him.

He was publicly flat wrong on the most fundamental politcal issue of his time, yet he was respected by those who opposed him, and even by some of those whose lives were made miserable by the tradition he upheld.

Thousands of well-reasoned words were spoken at the Capitol this week against the rules of congressional seniority, but this one man's career as chairman of the Armed Services Committee was the best single exhibit of what is sensible about the system. Politicians as unalike as Harry Truman and Richard Nixon said out loud in the past that if Russell had been from anywhere but the Deep South he surely would have become President.

THERE WAS a time, when Russell was not long in the Senate and furious at northern civil rights advocates, that he suggested a federally financed shift of 1.5 million black families to the North and the same number of whites into the South, thus helping "equalize our racial problem."

But that was not typical of him. He was not a demagogue. He was an aristocratic, honorable southern gentleman, in all the decent connotations of the phrase.

He defeated a memorable demagogue, the gallus-snapping Gene Talmadge, to come to the Senate. In recent years, he left Georgia's share of fiery senatorial oratory to Gene's son, Herman. In the long-delayed action against civil rights legislation, he concentrated instead on constitutional and especially parliamentary tactics.

Although Russell organized the issuance of the defiant Southern Manifesto after the Supreme Court desegregation decision of 1954, that was show business, and he would not have denied it. And a decade later, when Lyndon Johnson mounted a total effort to put through John Kennedy's civil rights proposals, Russell let the new President know that he would not block it if in the end there would be none of the typical Johnsonian compromising to get the bill passed — if instead he and his southern colleagues were allowed to fight bravely and go down with flags flying. They did.

ALL THAT is the most familiar Russell, standing in the well of the Senate, his head tilted back to look down his hawklike nose through his bifocals, producing like a rabbit from a hat some long-buried parliamentary technicality to further delay the inevitable. What is less widely known is the breadth and depth of his intellect, particularly in political and military affairs.

Those with him at the NATO parliamentarians' conference in 1956 remember his handling of a resolution to condemn Russian intervention in Hungary. Calmly, he delivered a brilliant 15-minute analysis of internal politics in each allied country and concluded the resolution should be handled by Belgium. It passed.

He was just as informed about American state politics. Younger senators constantly came to him for advice — among them northern liberals who would never want their constituents to know — and when he counseled them he often began by saying, "Now, if I represented your state, I'd . . ." He knew their business as well as they did.

Other people said Lyndon Johnson was the consummate man of the Senate; Mr. Johnson would say Dick Russell was.

His positive achievements include guiding rural electrification and universal military training into law, keeping the Dixiecrats at home in the Democratic Party in 1952 by running as their candidate within the party and defusing the passionate controversy over Gen. Douglas MacArthur's dismissal by him impeccable conduct of the joint congressional inquiry.

Voucher Plan Providing Explosive School Issue

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

The voucher plan has shaped up already as California's most explosive education issue for 1971.

The California Teachers Association is against it. The California Congress of Parents and Teachers is against it. Most school trustees and superintendents so far heard from are against it. State Supt. Wilson C. Riles is worried about it.

However, Gov. Ronald Reagan, who has espoused the plan, and Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan, D-South San Francisco, who is carrying the ball for it in this year's legislature, are by no means alone.

RYAN'S AB 29, which would authorize demonstration scholarship (voucher) programs in one or more districts, has been expanded and reintroduced as AB 150. And this time he has as co-authors Assemblymen Leon Ralph, D-Los Angeles; William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights; Kenneth Cory, D-Anaheim, and Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico.

AB 150 seeks to eliminate one of the objections raised by the plan's opponents: that it would promote segregation because private schools accepting the vouchers might discriminate against minority race children. The new bill provides that "no school shall be eligible to negotiate demonstration scholarships" (that is, to cash the vouchers) "unless it is racially, ethnically, and socioeconomically integrated."

The new bill also would limit test of the plan to a seven-year period in one school district or group of districts with no fewer than 25,000 nor more than 200,000 enrollment, and provide for funding from the federal government.

WHAT IS THIS voucher plan that is causing the uproar?

It is very simple.

Under the voucher plan, parents of each school child would be given a voucher redeemable for that child's cost of education at either a public school or a private or parochial school. The parents would then endorse the voucher to the school where he entered his child, and that school would cash it with the state or the school district.

The results, however, might be far-reaching and far from simple.

Traditionally, the state bears a responsibility to provide schools. If the voucher plan were adopted statewide, it would instead bear a responsibility to provide each individual child an education.

It is conceivable — although extremely unlikely — that with such a plan the state in time would not need to provide schools at all.

THE MOST TELLING argument against the voucher plan is that it would be impossible for a school district to budget funds with such a plan in effect.

School budgeting already is full of guesswork. It would be almost all guesswork if the school board had no idea how many children would be in its schools the next fall. It could easily find itself with many more teachers than needed — and without money to pay them, since state support is based on attendance.

Proponents' answer to this is that the district would be obligated by the plan to provide schools so good that parents would send their children to the public schools by choice. This, they claim, would result in upgrading education in both the public and private schools.

Governor Reagan, in his "State of the State" message, urged that the voucher plan be given a limited trial to find out which side is right. State Superintendent Riles, although deeply distrustful of the plan, said after a conference with the governor that he would go along with that.

INCIDENTALLY, although the CTA has come out foursquare against the voucher plan, its state council (the top body in its organization) has not flatly opposed performance contracting in the schools. Elmer Wells, who runs CTA's Education News Service, for that reason took exception to the statement in a recent column that CTA opposes performance contracting. However, CTA leaders have on several occasions condemned what they see as serious dangers in such contracting, and CTA succssfully opposed a performance contracting bill (AB 272 by then-Assemblyman Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood) in last year's legislature.

Five Days Jail For Pot Charge

Thomas Keene Warner III, 27, of San Rafael, has been sentenced to five days in jail by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court.

Warner, who had earlier pleaded innocent, pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of possessing marijuana. He was arrested Aug. 14 in San Rafael when an off-duty policeman noticed what appeared to be marijuana plants at a house next-door to where the policeman was visiting.

High Court Upholds Antibussing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Supreme Court has ruled that school districts may assign pupils to specific schools for integration purposes but may not force them to go there on a school bus.

That is the essence, the Supreme Court said yesterday, of the state's new "anti-bussing" law, which prohibits districts from bussing students outside their own school neighborhood without parental consent.

The court upheld the two-month-old anti-bussing law, which provides that no school district "shall require any student or pupils to be transported for any purpose or for any reason without the written permission of the parent or guardian."

But in a unanimous opinion, the high court held that all the law prohibits is the practice of forcing students to use district transportation in getting to the assigned school.

An interpretation that the law gives parents rights to refuse pupil assignments, the opinion said, "would beget a parental right to discriminate, and do so in a context of racial strife that would enable many to exploit that right to inflict racial prejudice.

"It would empower these private persons to inject the venom of racial discrimination into the veins of government. Such a statute would be unconstitutional on its face."

The case arose out of controversy concerning the proposed Park South Complex in San Francisco. The court decision upheld the legality of the school board's program under the new statute.

The majority opinion, written by Justice Mathew O. Tobriner, was concurred in by Justices Raymond E. Peters, Stanley Mosk and Raynond L. Sullivan. Justices Louis H. Burke, Chief Justice Donald R. Wright and Justice Marshall F. McComb wrote a brief separate concurring opinion.

"We know that racial animosity chiefly develops in the child who is reared in an environment that fosters it," the majority opinion said.

"We would keep our schools free from its contamination; indeed, our Supreme Court has said that our constitutional obligation compels the immediate cleansing of every schoolroom where the law countenances its presence.

"How, then, can we uphold as constitutional a statute that categorically bars a principwl and sometimes exclusive antidote to the spread and growth of this ugly toxin . . .?"

The court conceded that in some cases pupil assignment by school boards might not be "constitutionally compelled."

"In some situations, however, it is the only practical and efficient method of achieving school integration," and any law which prohibits it "necessarily legislates the preservation of racial imbalance.

"It therefore violates constitutional imperatives."

Another $42 Million For Liner Conversion

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state has approved nearly $42 million in tidelands oil revenues for Long Beach to convert the former luxury liner Queen Mary into a tourist attraction, the legislature was told yesterday.

At the same time, the city through last June had actually spent $21.5 million in tidelands funds on the project, reported Auditor General William H. Merrifield.

In a report to the legislature, he did not discuss the propriety of the expenditures but merely compared actual expenditures with authorizations for the project approved by the state Lands Commission.

In 1967, the city estimated that the cost of acquiring the liner and its conversion into a tourist attraction and maritime museum would be less than $8.7 million. Total investment of both private and public funds has since been set at roughly $60 million.

A staff report of the Lands Commission last month raised "legal questions" about the city's expenditure of tidelands revenues for reconditioning the ship. City Manager John Mansell immediately asserted that "all the money has been spent and will be spent in accordance with the state law."

Merrifield, in a report made public by Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, chairman of the legislature's Audit Committee, listed the biggest expenditure at $17.3 million for ship conversion.

This contrasted with $23.7 million authorized by the commission. Another $4.1 million was spent on site preparation, contrasting with the $8.4 million authorized by the commission.

Up to last July 1, the commission had authorized $32.1 million and $21.5 million in tidelands funds had actually been spent, the report showed.

But the commission last October made a "conditional nonobjection" to another $9.7 million for extra conversion and site development costs, bringing the total authorized expenditures to date to $41,978,550.

Merrifield also said the $21.5 million in expenditures did not include the city's Queen Mary Department administrative costs of $2.5 million or other city departments' costs of $328,515.

$200 Fine For Forgery Charge

Carolyn Rae Martinson of Mill Valley was fined $200 Monday by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court for forging a prescription in order to obtain narcotics.

She had earlier pleaded innocent to the charge, but changed her plea to guilty yesterday.

Judge McGuire, who declared the crime a misdeameanor, also placed her on probation for one year.

Eight Big Firms Have Drug Woes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— More than eight out of 10 large companies have a problem of drug abuse among employes, a survey by the California State Chamber of Commerce disclosed Tuesday.

The study showed that the reported incidents of drugs in the factory or office increased 33 per cent in 1970 over the previous year.

"The large California company that doesn't have a drug problem is the exception rather than the rule," the chamber concluded.

The chamber sent questionnaires to the medical officers of 25 firms employing about 600,000 persons. The industries ranged from automotive manufacturing, to chemicals, missiles, public utilities and oil.

All but three of the firms said that drug abuse had been detected among employees. Nineteen said they had incidents during the first six months of last year.

Most of the companies said they gave an employee caught using drugs a chance to straighten himself out, but about 20 per cent of the firms said immediate disvissal was routine in drug cases.

The chamber's survey indicated that 83 per cent of the incidents involved employees under age 35. Men were involved 67 per cent of the time.

Attorney General Rips Speculation Development

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Local governments should have the power to reject a land development that "is not in the public interest and is not economically feasible," the state attorney general's office told a legislative committee yesterday.

"Developers should not be permitted to cut up land into raw lots for speculation," Assistant Attorney General Herbert E. Wenig told the assembly subcommittee which has been investigating subdivisions sold as lots for future development as vacation or retirement homes, or for speculation.

"A subdivision for this purpose should not be considered a proper use," Wenig said.

He told the committee that often developers in rural counties "can just subdivide the raw land" meeting minimal legal requirements "and sell lots to the public on the speculation that the land will increase in value."

"Like 'Humpty Dumpty' it may not be possible to put this type of subdivision together again for home construction," he said, because of the difficulty in getting cooperative action by buyers for putting in needed improvements. "Thus, the land lies subdivided, raw and barren."

Real estate agent Jerry Tucker of Redding told the committee that sales methods used by developers are "almost scary" and "almost compare" with high pressure tactics of car salesmen. He recommended buyers have the right to withdraw from their contracts six months after the sale is made.

Another $42 Million For Liner Conversion

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state has approved nearly $42 million in tidelands oil revenues for Long Beach to convert the former luxury liner Queen Mary into a tourist attraction, the legislature was told yesterday.

At the same time, the city through last June had actually spent $21.5 million in tidelands funds on the project, reported Auditor General William H. Merrifield.

In a report to the legislature, he did not discuss the propriety of the expenditures but merely compared actual expenditures with authorizations for the project approved by the state Lands Commission.

In 1967, the city estimated that the cost of acquiring the liner and its conversion into a tourist attraction and maritime museum would be less than $8.7 million. Total investment of both private and public funds has since been set at roughly $60 million.

A staff report of the Lands Commission last month raised "legal questions" about the city's expenditure of tidelands revenues for reconditioning the ship. City Manager John Mansell immediately asserted that "all the money has been spent and will be spent in accordance with the state law."

Merrifield, in a report made public by Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, chairman of the legislature's Audit Committee, listed the biggest expenditure at $17.3 million for ship conversion.

This contrasted with $23.7 million authorized by the commission. Another $4.1 million was spent on site preparation, contrasting with the $8.4 million authorized by the commission.

Up to last July 1, the commission had authorized $32.1 million and $21.5 million in tidelands funds had actually been spent, the report showed.

But the commission last October made a "conditional nonobjection" to another $9.7 million for extra conversion and site development costs, bringing the total authorized expenditures to date to $41,978,550.

Merrifield also said the $21.5 million in expenditures did not include the city's Queen Mary Department administrative costs of $2.5 million or other city departments' costs of $328,515.

$200 Fine For Forgery Charge

Carolyn Rae Martinson of Mill Valley was fined $200 Monday by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court for forging a prescription in order to obtain narcotics.

She had earlier pleaded innocent to the charge, but changed her plea to guilty yesterday.

Judge McGuire, who declared the crime a misdeameanor, also placed her on probation for one year.

Eight Big Firms Have Drug Woes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— More than eight out of 10 large companies have a problem of drug abuse among employes, a survey by the California State Chamber of Commerce disclosed Tuesday.

The study showed that the reported incidents of drugs in the factory or office increased 33 per cent in 1970 over the previous year.

"The large California company that doesn't have a drug problem is the exception rather than the rule," the chamber concluded.

The chamber sent questionnaires to the medical officers of 25 firms employing about 600,000 persons. The industries ranged from automotive manufacturing, to chemicals, missiles, public utilities and oil.

All but three of the firms said that drug abuse had been detected among employees. Nineteen said they had incidents during the first six months of last year.

Most of the companies said they gave an employee caught using drugs a chance to straighten himself out, but about 20 per cent of the firms said immediate disvissal was routine in drug cases.

The chamber's survey indicated that 83 per cent of the incidents involved employees under age 35. Men were involved 67 per cent of the time.

Attorney General Rips Speculation Development

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Local governments should have the power to reject a land development that "is not in the public interest and is not economically feasible," the state attorney general's office told a legislative committee yesterday.

"Developers should not be permitted to cut up land into raw lots for speculation," Assistant Attorney General Herbert E. Wenig told the assembly subcommittee which has been investigating subdivisions sold as lots for future development as vacation or retirement homes, or for speculation.

"A subdivision for this purpose should not be considered a proper use," Wenig said.

He told the committee that often developers in rural counties "can just subdivide the raw land" meeting minimal legal requirements "and sell lots to the public on the speculation that the land will increase in value."

"Like 'Humpty Dumpty' it may not be possible to put this type of subdivision together again for home construction," he said, because of the difficulty in getting cooperative action by buyers for putting in needed improvements. "Thus, the land lies subdivided, raw and barren."

Real estate agent Jerry Tucker of Redding told the committee that sales methods used by developers are "almost scary" and "almost compare" with high pressure tactics of car salesmen. He recommended buyers have the right to withdraw from their contracts six months after the sale is made.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Afflicting Man For Centuries, Gout Now Increasing Frequency

Gouty arthritis has plagued man for centuries, but only recently has it increased in frequency. If any form of arthritis had to increase, we are happy it was gout. Unlike most joint afflictions, it is easier to diagnose and responds well to treatment.

Two main forms of gout are recognized. The familial or primary type, which has always been with us, is an hereditary defect in the metabolism of certain proteins. The outcome is an excessive amount of uric acid in the blood and tissues, including the joints.

SECONDARY or iatrogenic gout follows the use of certain drugs, such as the thiazide diuretics. The latter products are used frequently in the treatment of hypertension, obesity and dropsy. These chemicals increase the amount of uric acid in the blood, but this is not too serious, because the usual gout remedies are effective.

Many people think of gout as a disease that develops suddenly with pain and swelling of the big toe. This is not surprising, because many old prints, paintings and cartoons depict the victim with one foot bandaged and hobbling about on crutches. It is true that the initial attack most often involves the big toe, but the ankle, instep and heel may also be painful. We know now that the knee, shoulders, elbow, wrist (and especially the middle joints of the fingers) may become swollen, red, warm and exquisitely tender. Occasionally backache is gout related.

COLCHICINE (an old drug) brings quick relief, but we do not know why. In fact, it is so dependable that if it does not work, the diagnosis of gout is questioned. Phenylbutazone, indomethacin and the adrenocorticotropic hormones also are effective.

Gout has a tendency to recur but probenecid or allopurinol do an excellent job of keeping the uric acid level reduced. Colchicine also may be added to either of these drugs for control of the symptoms.

SWEETS GAG HER

Mrs. W. writes: Most elderly friends of mine have a sweet tooth, but I don't. Years ago I loved candy and desserts but now sweets make me gag. Can you explain this turnabout?

REPLY

Likes and dislikes change with the passing years. Stop eating sweets if they affect you in this way. You can do without them. Examination is advised, however, if you begin to gag on other foods.

HALITOSIS DURING SLEEP

P. E. writes: What causes bad breath during sleep?

REPLY

How do you know — did your best friend tell you? Decaying food particles between the teeth or in the crypts of the tongue may play a role. Other causes include drainage from infected teeth and dental caries. In addition, gas absorbed from the intestinal tract is eliminated via the lungs.

COLORFUL SON

Mrs. P. A. writes: My son's skin turns green when he eats spinach, and orange when he eats carrots. Is he allergic to these vegetables?

REPLY

No. If what you say is true, your boy has a rare disorder of some kind and should be taken to a competent child specialist.

Today's Health Hint — If you feel a sneeze coming on, cover the mouth with a tissue or the hand.

No Anti-Commune Move In Palo Alto

PALO ALTO (UPI)—The City of Palo Alto is not cracking down on communes despite a federal court ruling, city attorney Peter Stone declared on Tuesday.

In question is federal court approval of a 20-year-old ordinance which prohibits more than four unrelated persons from living in the same house in many city residential areas.

Commune residents had challenged the law in U.S. Disstrict Court, contending that by giving preference to the traditional family over voluntary ones it violated their constitutional rights.

Judge Albert C. Wollenberg found the law constitutional and said that communes do not have the "biological links which characterize most families."

"Emotional ties between members may exist, but this is true of members of many other groups."

The judge also said that "communal living groups are voluntary, with fluctuating memberships who have no legal obligations of support or cohabitation."

Such groups, he said, are indistinguishable legally from religious communities and residence clubs.

Stone noted that communes are "perfectly OK" in parts of the city zoned for multiple dwellings and added: "We're not trying to exclude communal living from Palo Alto."

The ordinance, he continued, was to provide neighborhoods with "a low volume of noise and traffic and municipal service requirements."

"There's certainly no member of the city staff out looking for over-occupancy," he declared.

"Our present policy is to go in only when we receive a complaint," said Arthur Nagel, the city's chief building inspector.

New Approach Proposed To Labor Negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A businessman proposed today a new approach to labor negotiations in which an impartial arbitrator would listen to both sides and then select "the most reasonable and most responsible proposal in its entirety."

He said his plan would force both labor and management to submit reasonable proposals instead of labor making excessive demands with the idea of toning them down and management making a stingy offer with the idea of an 11th hour compromise.

The idea was advanced in testimony prepared for a hearing of the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee by Joseph B. Danzansky, president of Giant Food Inc., which operates 93 supermarkets in Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C.

He said the idea first was proposed by two former labo secretaries —George P. Shultz of the Nixon administration and W. Willard Wirtz of the Kennedy-Johnson administrations.

Danzanksy said his idea was better than the "sham of traditional arbitration in which the arbitrator takes a "down-the-middle" approach between labor's demands and management's offer.

Under his plan, after the arbitrator had selected the "most reasonable" proposal, both sides would have an opportunity to reconsider and resubmit their proposals.

"Our present version of collective bargaining was born in pain and strife in the early decades of this century," Danzansky said. "It served its purposes well in those days when ancient and ingrained attitudes of management had to be drastically changed."

But now, he said, labor holds the upper hand and management is willing to accept excessive settlement and merely hike prices. His plan, he said, would make certain the public interest played a role in negotiations.

Mill Valleyan Hurt In Hub Accident

Big Storm Strikes In East

By United Press International

Cold winds, snow and rain glazed the highways of New England today, stranding cars "in piles" on expressways. Across the nation, at least four persons were killed when scores of vehicles piled up in dense fog near Bakersfield, Calif.

Arctic air clasped the Northeast today. Near-blizzard conditions prevailed from western New York to Maine. The cold air stretched south, covering most of the eastern part of the nation.

A blizzard warning was up in western New York. Locally heavy snow squalls driven by gusty winds were expected. Travelers warnings were in effect for parts of New York, New Hampshire, Maine and Ohio.

Arctic air pushed as far south as central Florida. Freezing temperatures extended from the Carolinas to northern Texas. Georgia was warned of a hard freeze for tonight.

Winds gusting to 50 m.p.h., snow squalls and low temperatures slowed commuter traffic in New York City today. Drivers inched forward on icy roads while commuter trains were delayed because of frozen switches and mechanical difficulties.

Upstate and western New York bore the brunt of the storm. Heavy snow and winds up to 65 m.p.h. shut down most major highways and closed schools and businesses. Rochester was virtually snowbound and Xerox Corp. told its 13,000 employees to stay home.

At least two storm-related traffic deaths were reported—one of them a 16-year-old boy in a car-school bus crash—in the state.

While New England ski resorts sent out telegrams announcing new snow after two days of "January thaw," drivers were stranded as cold winds and snow swept through the northern parts of the region and sleet and freezing rain glazed highways in the southern parts.

"You could skate on it," a Boston area motorist said after driving on one of the highways. "I'll bet it was an inch thick. Cars were stranded in piles on expressways ramps. You would spin with a feather touch on the brakes."

Part of Interstate 93 was washed out by Tuesday's heavy rain. Cars hurrying through hit a two-foot depression that blew out their tires. Motorists slogged through a field looking for jarred-off hubcaps.

Connecticut's weather was described as "squally" by police at Westport, where winds hit 58 m.p.h. and highways were icy. Ski resort owners in New Hampshire and Vermont said new snow and tonight's zero temperatures would improve skiing.

As the storm moved east, Indianapolis, Ind.. had its coldest reading of the winter this morning, 2 below zero. South Bend, in Northern Indiana, dug out from a six-inch snowfall on Tuesday, and schools in the area were closed for the second day today.

Michigan was still snow-clogged. The state's overnight low was 15 below zero at Sault Ste. Marie. High winds drifted snow up to 15 feet deep at Cheboygan.

In California, 60 to 70 vehicles piled up in dense fog on U. S. 99 north of Bakersfield. At least four persons were killed and many injured.

In Washington state, a warm snap mixed with heavy rain melted record snow packs, causing the worst flooding the low-lying western counties had since 1937. In the Cascade Mountains, the warm weather touched off new slides, bringing east-west traffic to a near standstill.

As the northeastern storm moved toward Canada, it brushed Chicago, dropping the temperature to 2 below zero. But icy winds caused the "chill factor" to drop as low as 55 below zero.

Quickie Divorce Threat In Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexico's "Quickie divorce" soon may come to an end.

The Federal Chamber of Deputies Tuesday passed a bill establishing a six-month residency requirement for foreigners wishing a divorce. Judges who defy the new law will be fined or jailed.

Senate approval is expected within a month. The new law will go into effect two weeks after publication in the official government gazette. It will supersede existing statutes in Mexico's 29 states and two territories.

Puzzle To Fleeing Atlantis Residents

ATHENS, The Melbourne Herald — Toronto Telegram News Service — Evidence of a once-thriving city abandoned in haste years ago has turned up in excavations on an island that some archeologists hold to be the place of origin for the legend of the Lost Continent of Atlantis.

But the biggest mystery of all in the island discovery is this: What happened to the 20,000-to-30,000 inhabitants of the city when they apparently fled from their homes to escape the grasp of a volcano and earthquake?

The question was posed recently by Prof. Spyridon Marinatos, Greek Inspector-General of Antiquities, who was reporting on the fourth year of excavations under his direction on the volcanic island of Santorini (Thera).

Santorini, in the Aegean Sea north of the island of Crete, is frequently described by the comparatively few tourists who visit it as picturesque in the spriit of a scene from Dante's Inferno, with black lava rock and white pumice, short of water and with little cultivation.

But once it was a much larger and more fertile island, able to support an important Minoan city and commercial centre.

Twice, about 25,000 years ago and around 1,500 B.C., the island was destroyed by the eruption of the still-smouldering volcano, earthquakes and subsidence. The second catastrophe buried the city now being excavated.

According to Professor Marinatos, the current excavations have so far uncovered no skeletons.

"We believe that the earthquake occurred before the explosion of the volcano, and that the inhabitants had time to remove their valuables from their homes," he said.

So far, he said, nothing had been found of silver and gold, and nothing carved. Painted jars and pottery, and such household furnishings as a wooden bed, with the remains of a mattress upon it and a beautifully decorated Minoan chamber pot beneath it, "were of no interest to them, though they are treasures for us."

Most valuable of all, he said, were the frescoes. One, depicting monkeys climbing the rocks of Santorini, indicated that "at that time, it seems, monkeys lived in the areas along the eastern Mediterranean, as they still survive today at its western extremity, on the rocks of Gibraltar."

Another, found intact and covering about 45 square feet of wall, represented the arrival of spring and the regeneration of nature, and showed the vivid and rich colors of the landscape before the explosion of the volcano.

Professor Marinatos said it was planned to stage a first exhibition of the finds from Santorini in Athens next year.

"One has the feeling here," he said, "that one is living amidst a happy and civilized society, which was suddenly swept away by a Biblical catastrophe while thriving and palpitating with life."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Afflicting Man For Centuries, Gout Now Increasing Frequency

Gouty arthritis has plagued man for centuries, but only recently has it increased in frequency. If any form of arthritis had to increase, we are happy it was gout. Unlike most joint afflictions, it is easier to diagnose and responds well to treatment.

Two main forms of gout are recognized. The familial or primary type, which has always been with us, is an hereditary defect in the metabolism of certain proteins. The outcome is an excessive amount of uric acid in the blood and tissues, including the joints.

SECONDARY or iatrogenic gout follows the use of certain drugs, such as the thiazide diuretics. The latter products are used frequently in the treatment of hypertension, obesity and dropsy. These chemicals increase the amount of uric acid in the blood, but this is not too serious, because the usual gout remedies are effective.

Many people think of gout as a disease that develops suddenly with pain and swelling of the big toe. This is not surprising, because many old prints, paintings and cartoons depict the victim with one foot bandaged and hobbling about on crutches. It is true that the initial attack most often involves the big toe, but the ankle, instep and heel may also be painful. We know now that the knee, shoulders, elbow, wrist (and especially the middle joints of the fingers) may become swollen, red, warm and exquisitely tender. Occasionally backache is gout related.

COLCHICINE (an old drug) brings quick relief, but we do not know why. In fact, it is so dependable that if it does not work, the diagnosis of gout is questioned. Phenylbutazone, indomethacin and the adrenocorticotropic hormones also are effective.

Gout has a tendency to recur but probenecid or allopurinol do an excellent job of keeping the uric acid level reduced. Colchicine also may be added to either of these drugs for control of the symptoms.

SWEETS GAG HER

Mrs. W. writes: Most elderly friends of mine have a sweet tooth, but I don't. Years ago I loved candy and desserts but now sweets make me gag. Can you explain this turnabout?

REPLY

Likes and dislikes change with the passing years. Stop eating sweets if they affect you in this way. You can do without them. Examination is advised, however, if you begin to gag on other foods.

HALITOSIS DURING SLEEP

P. E. writes: What causes bad breath during sleep?

REPLY

How do you know — did your best friend tell you? Decaying food particles between the teeth or in the crypts of the tongue may play a role. Other causes include drainage from infected teeth and dental caries. In addition, gas absorbed from the intestinal tract is eliminated via the lungs.

COLORFUL SON

Mrs. P. A. writes: My son's skin turns green when he eats spinach, and orange when he eats carrots. Is he allergic to these vegetables?

REPLY

No. If what you say is true, your boy has a rare disorder of some kind and should be taken to a competent child specialist.

Today's Health Hint — If you feel a sneeze coming on, cover the mouth with a tissue or the hand.

No Anti-Commune Move In Palo Alto

PALO ALTO (UPI)—The City of Palo Alto is not cracking down on communes despite a federal court ruling, city attorney Peter Stone declared on Tuesday.

In question is federal court approval of a 20-year-old ordinance which prohibits more than four unrelated persons from living in the same house in many city residential areas.

Commune residents had challenged the law in U.S. Disstrict Court, contending that by giving preference to the traditional family over voluntary ones it violated their constitutional rights.

Judge Albert C. Wollenberg found the law constitutional and said that communes do not have the "biological links which characterize most families."

"Emotional ties between members may exist, but this is true of members of many other groups."

The judge also said that "communal living groups are voluntary, with fluctuating memberships who have no legal obligations of support or cohabitation."

Such groups, he said, are indistinguishable legally from religious communities and residence clubs.

Stone noted that communes are "perfectly OK" in parts of the city zoned for multiple dwellings and added: "We're not trying to exclude communal living from Palo Alto."

The ordinance, he continued, was to provide neighborhoods with "a low volume of noise and traffic and municipal service requirements."

"There's certainly no member of the city staff out looking for over-occupancy," he declared.

"Our present policy is to go in only when we receive a complaint," said Arthur Nagel, the city's chief building inspector.

New Approach Proposed To Labor Negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A businessman proposed today a new approach to labor negotiations in which an impartial arbitrator would listen to both sides and then select "the most reasonable and most responsible proposal in its entirety."

He said his plan would force both labor and management to submit reasonable proposals instead of labor making excessive demands with the idea of toning them down and management making a stingy offer with the idea of an 11th hour compromise.

The idea was advanced in testimony prepared for a hearing of the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee by Joseph B. Danzansky, president of Giant Food Inc., which operates 93 supermarkets in Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C.

He said the idea first was proposed by two former labo secretaries —George P. Shultz of the Nixon administration and W. Willard Wirtz of the Kennedy-Johnson administrations.

Danzanksy said his idea was better than the "sham of traditional arbitration in which the arbitrator takes a "down-the-middle" approach between labor's demands and management's offer.

Under his plan, after the arbitrator had selected the "most reasonable" proposal, both sides would have an opportunity to reconsider and resubmit their proposals.

"Our present version of collective bargaining was born in pain and strife in the early decades of this century," Danzansky said. "It served its purposes well in those days when ancient and ingrained attitudes of management had to be drastically changed."

But now, he said, labor holds the upper hand and management is willing to accept excessive settlement and merely hike prices. His plan, he said, would make certain the public interest played a role in negotiations.

Mill Valleyan Hurt In Hub Accident

Big Storm Strikes In East

By United Press International

Cold winds, snow and rain glazed the highways of New England today, stranding cars "in piles" on expressways. Across the nation, at least four persons were killed when scores of vehicles piled up in dense fog near Bakersfield, Calif.

Arctic air clasped the Northeast today. Near-blizzard conditions prevailed from western New York to Maine. The cold air stretched south, covering most of the eastern part of the nation.

A blizzard warning was up in western New York. Locally heavy snow squalls driven by gusty winds were expected. Travelers warnings were in effect for parts of New York, New Hampshire, Maine and Ohio.

Arctic air pushed as far south as central Florida. Freezing temperatures extended from the Carolinas to northern Texas. Georgia was warned of a hard freeze for tonight.

Winds gusting to 50 m.p.h., snow squalls and low temperatures slowed commuter traffic in New York City today. Drivers inched forward on icy roads while commuter trains were delayed because of frozen switches and mechanical difficulties.

Upstate and western New York bore the brunt of the storm. Heavy snow and winds up to 65 m.p.h. shut down most major highways and closed schools and businesses. Rochester was virtually snowbound and Xerox Corp. told its 13,000 employees to stay home.

At least two storm-related traffic deaths were reported—one of them a 16-year-old boy in a car-school bus crash—in the state.

While New England ski resorts sent out telegrams announcing new snow after two days of "January thaw," drivers were stranded as cold winds and snow swept through the northern parts of the region and sleet and freezing rain glazed highways in the southern parts.

"You could skate on it," a Boston area motorist said after driving on one of the highways. "I'll bet it was an inch thick. Cars were stranded in piles on expressways ramps. You would spin with a feather touch on the brakes."

Part of Interstate 93 was washed out by Tuesday's heavy rain. Cars hurrying through hit a two-foot depression that blew out their tires. Motorists slogged through a field looking for jarred-off hubcaps.

Connecticut's weather was described as "squally" by police at Westport, where winds hit 58 m.p.h. and highways were icy. Ski resort owners in New Hampshire and Vermont said new snow and tonight's zero temperatures would improve skiing.

As the storm moved east, Indianapolis, Ind.. had its coldest reading of the winter this morning, 2 below zero. South Bend, in Northern Indiana, dug out from a six-inch snowfall on Tuesday, and schools in the area were closed for the second day today.

Michigan was still snow-clogged. The state's overnight low was 15 below zero at Sault Ste. Marie. High winds drifted snow up to 15 feet deep at Cheboygan.

In California, 60 to 70 vehicles piled up in dense fog on U. S. 99 north of Bakersfield. At least four persons were killed and many injured.

In Washington state, a warm snap mixed with heavy rain melted record snow packs, causing the worst flooding the low-lying western counties had since 1937. In the Cascade Mountains, the warm weather touched off new slides, bringing east-west traffic to a near standstill.

As the northeastern storm moved toward Canada, it brushed Chicago, dropping the temperature to 2 below zero. But icy winds caused the "chill factor" to drop as low as 55 below zero.

Quickie Divorce Threat In Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexico's "Quickie divorce" soon may come to an end.

The Federal Chamber of Deputies Tuesday passed a bill establishing a six-month residency requirement for foreigners wishing a divorce. Judges who defy the new law will be fined or jailed.

Senate approval is expected within a month. The new law will go into effect two weeks after publication in the official government gazette. It will supersede existing statutes in Mexico's 29 states and two territories.

Jeanne Wilson Fund Set Up For Center

Friends of Jeanne Marie Wilson of San Rafael, who died of pneumonia on Jan. 1, are contributing funds in her memory to the newly organized Marin Suicide Prevention Center.

Mrs. Wilson had planned to become an active member of the suicide prevention center at the time of her death. Her husband, Vernon Wilson, asked that contributions for the center be sent to the Marin Association for Mental Health at 1368 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, with a notation that it is for the suicide prevention program.

No Charge Filed In New Smith Case

No charge was filed in Marin Municipal Court against Richard Darryl Smith, 25, of Kentfield, who was arrested by Ross Police Sunday on suspicion of possessing dangerous drugs and passing counterfeit notes.

Smith is still awaiting trial in Marin Superior Court on Charges of possessing and selling marijuana, stemming from his arrest last March during a large scale marijuana roundup in Marin.

Puzzle To Fleeing Atlantis Residents

ATHENS, The Melbourne Herald — Toronto Telegram News Service — Evidence of a once-thriving city abandoned in haste years ago has turned up in excavations on an island that some archeologists hold to be the place of origin for the legend of the Lost Continent of Atlantis.

But the biggest mystery of all in the island discovery is this: What happened to the 20,000-to-30,000 inhabitants of the city when they apparently fled from their homes to escape the grasp of a volcano and earthquake?

The question was posed recently by Prof. Spyridon Marinatos, Greek Inspector-General of Antiquities, who was reporting on the fourth year of excavations under his direction on the volcanic island of Santorini (Thera).

Santorini, in the Aegean Sea north of the island of Crete, is frequently described by the comparatively few tourists who visit it as picturesque in the spriit of a scene from Dante's Inferno, with black lava rock and white pumice, short of water and with little cultivation.

But once it was a much larger and more fertile island, able to support an important Minoan city and commercial centre.

Twice, about 25,000 years ago and around 1,500 B.C., the island was destroyed by the eruption of the still-smouldering volcano, earthquakes and subsidence. The second catastrophe buried the city now being excavated.

According to Professor Marinatos, the current excavations have so far uncovered no skeletons.

"We believe that the earthquake occurred before the explosion of the volcano, and that the inhabitants had time to remove their valuables from their homes," he said.

So far, he said, nothing had been found of silver and gold, and nothing carved. Painted jars and pottery, and such household furnishings as a wooden bed, with the remains of a mattress upon it and a beautifully decorated Minoan chamber pot beneath it, "were of no interest to them, though they are treasures for us."

Most valuable of all, he said, were the frescoes. One, depicting monkeys climbing the rocks of Santorini, indicated that "at that time, it seems, monkeys lived in the areas along the eastern Mediterranean, as they still survive today at its western extremity, on the rocks of Gibraltar."

Another, found intact and covering about 45 square feet of wall, represented the arrival of spring and the regeneration of nature, and showed the vivid and rich colors of the landscape before the explosion of the volcano.

Professor Marinatos said it was planned to stage a first exhibition of the finds from Santorini in Athens next year.

"One has the feeling here," he said, "that one is living amidst a happy and civilized society, which was suddenly swept away by a Biblical catastrophe while thriving and palpitating with life."

Air Board Revamping In Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation was introduced in the Assembly yesterday reducing the 14-member Air Resources Board to five specialists with "expertise" in air pollution.

Assemblyman Peter Schabarum, L-Convina, the author, said he wasn't critical of the existing board but "we are now faced with challenging problems in air pollution that must be faced head-on."

He said the "best method of attack" seems to be appointing members with a "broad background of expertise" in controlling smog and other air pollution problems.

The bill calls for the appointment of an attorney specializing in air pollution and conservation law; an engineer in motor vehicle smog control; an engineer in nonvehicular pollution control; an atmospheric chemist; and a public member.

They would be paid $12,000 annually and meet at least once a month. In addition, the board would be given the power to subpoena witnesses. Currently, members are paid expenses only and meet once a month or semimonthly.

A jury trial was set for the week of March 15.

Stein was arrested Dec. 12 while sitting on a San Rafael fence smoking a handrolled cigarette. Police said a search of his coat and car revealed a container of white powder and one with three pills in it.

A Lift On Two Cities On Streets

Novato and Mill Valley have won the support of the Marin County Urban Thoroughfare Priority Selection Committee in bids to acquire matching county funds for street improvements.

The committee, which met Monday at Larkspur, agreed to recommend the county supervisors allocate $120,000 to Mill Valley and $60,000 to Novato.

Formed in 1965, the committee is made up of representatives from each of Marin's 11 cities and three from the county. Its purpose is to recommend allocation of county gas tax revenues for improvement of the county's road network without regard to jurisdictional boundries.

The $120,000 proposed for Mill Valley will split the cost for the widening of Camino Alto to four lanes from East Blithedale to Miller avenues. It also includes extension of a bridge between Miller and Sycamore avenues.

Novato proposes improvement of the intersection at Novato Boulevard and Diablo Avenue. The $60,000, if approved by the supervisors, will be matched with a like amount of city funds for widening of the intersection, traffic chanalization and installation of traffic signals.

The committee's recommendations must be forwarded before March and will be considered during county budget sessions.

Probation Given In Burglary Case

James J. Kuhns, 39, of Fairfax has been placed on two years probation in Marin Superior Court for the second degree burglary of a Fairfax home June 9.

Judge E. Warren McGuire on Monday also ordered Kuhns to pay $15 restitution on the recommendation of the district attorney's office. McGuire declared the crime a misdemeanor.

Being Where Pot's Used: Two Fined

John Salpas, 25, and Irving E. Weinstein, 23, both of Massachusetts, were sentenced yesterday in Marin Municipal Court after pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of being in a place where marijuana was smoked.

Salpas, who had earlier pleaded innocent to possessing pot, was charged with the misdemeanor in an amended complaint filed by the district attorney's office yesterday. He was fined $75 and placed on probation for one year.

Weinstein was fined $35 and placed on probation for a year.

A charge of being in a place where marijuana was used — against a third defendant, Lorna Drevitson, 21, of Massachusetts — was dropped in the amended complaint.

The three were arrested Dec. 4 in a van at the Marin Motor Movies in San Rafael after other persons told police they smelled marijuana coming from the van.

Sentenced To State Prison

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — A 26-year-old Alameda County man, convicted of nine felonies in a 1966 crime spree which included a Marin auto chase, was sentended Monday to an indeterminate stay in state prison by Alameda Superior Court Judge George W. Phillips.

James Reece was found guilty on Dec. 23 after a jury deliberated three hours.

During an escape from Highland Hospital in Oakland, he was recaptured after pursuing the car of San Francisco entertainer Yvonne D'Angier of Fairfax into Marin County. The pursuit in a stolen car, ended in a two-car crackup in Fairfax Creek.

Charges against Reece also included two counts of kidnapping, three robberies and two burglaries, according to the clerk of the court.

Air Board Revamping In Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation was introduced in the Assembly yesterday reducing the 14-member Air Resources Board to five specialists with "expertise" in air pollution.

Assemblyman Peter Schabarum, L-Convina, the author, said he wasn't critical of the existing board but "we are now faced with challenging problems in air pollution that must be faced head-on."

He said the "best method of attack" seems to be appointing members with a "broad background of expertise" in controlling smog and other air pollution problems.

The bill calls for the appointment of an attorney specializing in air pollution and conservation law; an engineer in motor vehicle smog control; an engineer in nonvehicular pollution control; an atmospheric chemist; and a public member.

They would be paid $12,000 annually and meet at least once a month. In addition, the board would be given the power to subpoena witnesses. Currently, members are paid expenses only and meet once a month or semimonthly.

Jury Trial Set In Drug Case

Kevin Richard Stein, 23, of San Rafael, has pleaded innocent inMarin Superior Court to charges of possession of marijuana and dangerous drugs.

A jury trial was set for the week of March 15.

Stein was arrested Dec. 12 while sitting on a San Rafael fence smoking a hand-rolled cigarette. Police said a search of his coat and car revealed a container of white powder and one with three pills in it.

A Lift On Two Cities On Streets

Novato and Mill Valley have won the support of the Marin County Urban Thoroughfare Priority Selection Committee in bids to acquire matching county funds for street improvements.

The committee, which met Monday at Larkspur, agreed to recommend the county supervisors allocate $120,000 to Mill Valley and $60,000 to Novato.

Formed in 1965, the committee is made up of representatives from each of Marin's 11 cities and three from the county. Its purpose is to recommend allocation of county gas tax revenues for improvement of the county's road network without regard to jurisdictional boundries.

The $120,000 proposed for Mill Valley will split the cost for the widening of Camino Alto to four lanes from East Blithedale to Miller avenues. It also includes extension of a bridge between Miller and Sycamore avenues.

Novato proposes improvement of the intersection at Novato Boulevard and Diablo Avenue. The $60,000, if approved by the supervisors, will be matched with a like amount of city funds for widening of the intersection, traffic channalization and installation of traffic signals.

The committee's recommendations must be forwarded before March and will be considered during county budget sessions.

Probation Given In Burglary Case

James J. Kuhns, 39, of Fairfax has been placed on two years probation in Marin Superior Court for the second degree burglary of a Fairfax home June 9.

Judge E. Warren McGuire on Monday also ordered Kuhns to pay $15 restitution on the recommendation of the district attorney's office. McGuire declared the crime a misdemeanor.

Being Where Pot's Used: Two Fined

John Salpas, 25, and Irving E. Weinstein, 23, both of Massachusetts, were sentenced yesterday in Marin Municipal Court after pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of being in a place where marijuana was smoked.

Salpas, who had earlier pleaded innocent to possessing pot, was charged with the misdemeanor in an amended complaint filed by the district attorney's office yesterday. He was fined $75 and placed on probation for one year.

Weinstein was fined $35 and placed on probation for a year.

A charge of being in a place where marijuana was used — against a third defendant, Lorna Drevitson, 21, of Massachusetts — was dropped in the amended complaint.

The three were arrested Dec. 4 in a van at the Marin Motor Movies in San Rafael after other persons told police they smelled marijuana coming from the van.

Sentenced To State Prison

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — A 26-year-old Alameda County man, convicted of nine felonies in a 1966 crime spree which included a Marin auto chase, was sentended Monday to an indeterminate stay in state prison by Alameda Superior Court Judge George W. Phillips.

James Reece was found guilty on Dec. 23 after a jury deliberated three hours.

During an escape from Highland Hospital in Oakland, he was recaptured after pursuing the car of San Francisco entertainer Yvonne D'Angier of Fairfax into Marin County. The pursuit in a stolen car, ended in a two-car crackup in Fairfax Creek.

Charges against Reece also included two counts of kidnapping, three robberies and two burglaries, according to the clerk of the court.

Staying Alive In Lebanon Is A Very Tricky Business

Lebanon's figures for 1970 showed why.

According to judicial sources, there were 232 premeditated murders, 100 persons killed by stray bullets fired at weddings or funerals, 60 persons slain in clashes with Israel, and 300 traffic fatalities. Further unknown numbers died in clashes between Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese rightists and troops.

It is clear that in a nation where crimes of passion are treated with Gallic sympathy, where the hanging penalty is never enforced and where every family has at least one gun, the chances of a steep death rate are being amply fulfilled.

The trouble is that some of the killers have difficulty in knowing exactly whom they want to eliminate. Things got so bad in Lebanon's famed Roman city of Baalbeck last year, for instance, that citizens hung out a banner warning travelers to "Carry a placard on your chest and back stating your name so you don't get killed by mistake."

Nationally, the crimes ranged from the shocking to the bizarre to the plain ridiculous.

Back in January, four men went hunting for sparrows. The bag? Five birds and three hunters. The lone survivor said there was a dispute about who shot the fifth bird and the sportsmen turned their rifles on each other.

More calculated was the case of the businessman whose senior partner announced the was closing their steelworks. According to police, the businessman, fearing for his livelihood, knocked his partner out, tied him up, went home to pray, then returned and dumped him in the blazing furnace.

The dangerous age in Lebanon seems to be 20 to 30 for it was this span that provided the vast majority of victims. Most of the killers came from this age bracket, too, though there were notable exceptions.

A young maid poisoned the baby of the woman for whom she worked by diluting the milk in its feeding bottle with liquid weed spray. She said the infant's mother had been cruel to her.

And a boy of 13, angered by an elderly woman, produced a gun and shot her dead.

In traditional Arab fashion, volleys are fired into the air with equal enthusiasm at weddings and funerals. But no event in recent years matched the fusillades that marked the death of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt.

In three days of virtually nonstop firing, 18 persons were killed and 114 wounded. The telephone department got 900 requests to repair ruptured cables, and the electricity office reported 350 cases of shot-up power lines.

One incident during the year started reports Lebanese and Palestinians were fighting again. As gunfire crackled across Beirut at dawn, residents rushed to their balconies expecting to see fighting in the streets. What they saw was a number of men blasting wildly at a flock of storks gliding gracefully over the city. Dozens of birds plummeted to earth and for a few hours were carried proudly through the streets until, inedible and useless, they were discarded without ceremony.

And a point of responsibility was raised by the young thief who grabbed a woman's purse in a Beirut street. The woman's younger sister, a girl of 22, gave chase and dropped dead of a heart attack.

Piccard Fears Earth Suffocating

ROME (UPI)—All life on earth may suffocate if man keeps dumping poisonous waste into the oceans, Swiss scientist and underwater explorer Jacques Piccard said recently.

Piccard, in Rome for a conference of experts on the possible construction of undersea laboratories and "cities," said the problem was an urgent one.

"We are living more and more with the sea and we are depending completely on the sea, not only for food but also for breathing," Piccard said in an interview with the press service of the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

"About two-thirds of the atmosphere's oxygen comes from the sea, produced directly by phytoplankton (microscopic plant organisms) or algae. There are no precise values for this process, but one can say that between 50 and 70 per cent of all oxygen is produced directly from the sea, churned into the air by wind and waves and carried over into the land. If by pollution we destroy these algae, it is a real possiblility that all life on earth could suffocate."

Piccard said it was "very important, not only in the long term but also in the very short term, to ensure that we do not throw anything into the sea which could endanger these phytoplanktons."

He said man is dumping into the oceans 200,000 tons of lead, one million tons of oil and 5,000 tons of mercury a year, plus large quantities of detergents and herbicides.

Piccard, 48, who has made more than 60 deep sea dives in the Mediterranean, Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, was one of a working party of seven experts on underwater research meeting last week at FAO headquarters in Rome. The purpose the conference was to draft a manual on the use of submersibles—manned undersea craft and underwater stations where marine scientists can live and work as divers.

William High, a U. S. Fisheries biologist who last year lived for two weeks at a depth of 50 feet in an underwater house in the Virgin Islands, said he was able to swim to depths of up to 100 feet, carry out his research on fish behavior and return "home" for lunch without having to decompress.

"It was an indescribable experience," he said. "I would wake up in the morning—probably having watched television the night before—and see fish at the windows look in at me."

High said he saw little future in underwater hotels, but felt habitats such as the one he lived in would go deeper and allow scuba divers to work at 400 feet.

John M. Anderson, director of the biological station of the Canadian Fisheries Research Board at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, said submersibles would give scientsts their first chance to take a direct look at fish life.

"Fishing has been like trying to harvest potatoes from a balloon with a long rope and some gear at the bottom and a cloud between you and the potatoes," Anderson said.

He said submersibles will take down "what I like to remind people is the most complicated research mechanism in the universe—that is a pair of eyes attached to a brain.

"There is nothing to compare to this enormous, computer-like apparatus. Send that down with television and all the otther complicated aids and you really come back with all kinds of information that could not have been got any other way."

Apollo 14 Command Ship Built For Emergencies

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The Apollo 14 command ship carries more oxygen, power and water than past Apollos to get its crewmen back to Earth in almost every conceivable type of emergency.

The Apollo 13 astronauts had to rely on the oxygen and power in their still-attached lunar landing craft to sustain them for the trip back home after a command ship oxygen tank exploded. If the accident had occurred after they had abandoned the lunar module at the moon, they would have been doomed.

To eliminate such a possibilty in the future, engineers installed a third oxygen tank in Apollo 14's command ship, isolated it from the other two tanks, added an extra battery and put aboard five more gallons of water.

Inadequate oxygen tank heater switches that led to the Apollo 13 explosion have been eliminated, tank wiring has been encased in metal conduits and fans have been removed from the tanks to make them virtually fireproof.

"I would say that, as a result, Apollo 14 has a safer spacecraft, said command module pilot Stuart A. Roosa at a recent news conference.

Mission director Chester M. Lee said the extra oxygen and battery would enable Roosa. Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell to get back home without their lunar module in almost the worst possible case —An Apollo 13 type failure when the command ship is being flown solo behind the moon in lunar orbit.

Lee said a return from such an accident would be "very austere", but the three crewmen would get back safely.

There are still two types of emergencies, however, for which there would be no way out—the failure of the command ship's main engine while the astronauts are locked in lunar orbit, or the failure of the landing craft's takeoff engine on the moon.

"There's still a finite possibility that we can always have a problem that we haven't seen before, or even one that we have seen before, but it's a pretty small probability," said Mitchell.

Indian Move To Redefine Native

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Federated Indians of California have decided to petition Congress to revise the definition of who is a native California Indian.

The organization Sunday adopted a resolution calling on the government to restrict the definition to Indians whose ancestors were in the state before 1850.

The measure stipulates that only Indians of tribes pre-dating the 1850 cutoff would be eligible for $29.1 million in federal reparation payments made for the taking of Indian land.

Gerald Davis, president of the federation, said when the 1968 reparation law was written, California Indians were unaware that non-native Indians could qualify for the money as well.

The Future Of Nuclear Energy

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI)—U. S. Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif. said here there is "no alternative" to nuclear energy in the long run.

Holifield, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee On Nuclear Energy, addressed the Toledo Area Chamber of Commerce Monday night.

"Environmental zealots and headline seekers of various persuasions who have argued against the advancement of any kind of electrical generating facilities in order to block the construction and operation of nuclear power plants," said Holifield.

"For long range needs there is no alternative to nuclear energy," said Holifield.

Woman Winemaker: Life Is Berries

By CLARENCE ZAITZ

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—When Mary Reinke arrives at work each morning at 6:45 —seven days a week mostly —she is there to do battle with "the whims of nature."

Mrs. Reinke runs Oregon's only commercial winery and, as she sees it, "we have to rely on the whims of nature to make wine. The winemaker only guides it."

She was not born to winemaking and feels that, even after seven years, she is still learning.

Mrs. Reinke went to work for the Honeywood Winery as an office secretary in 1943 and recalls that "I knew everything about the workings in the office, but what I knew about winemaking you could put in a thimble."

She assumed control of the small company in 1963 when it was about to go out of business. The stockholders asked her to run things temporarily. But when a buyer could not be found she acquired enough stock to assume permanent control.

Today the winery, which produces 200,000 gallons of berry wines a year, is run by only eight employes —half of them women.

"Each one of us is capable of doing each job," Mrs. Reinke explained. "Not one of us is afraid to go out and grab a mop."

She has a neat, small office at the front of the plant, but does not spend much time there. She's in the winery "at least once an hour" and often will pinch hit for an ill workman.

"Last week my gal who makes the wine jelly broke her leg —can you imagine? Right during our busiest season! So now I have to run the jelly line, too. Sometimes I'll even pinch hit on the bottling line. I can do every job in the plant except the heavy manual work."

As she was being interviewed her ears perked up suddenly as she heard a strange sound. She quickly analyzed it as sounding "like a pump is going out," and hurried off. Later she explained other noises as being "the men dumping barrels of frozen loganberries."

In the olden days the winery would work full tilt during the berry production season, then slack off in the winter. Now thousands of barrels of fruit are frozen in cold storage to provide material for winter winemaking.

Mrs. Reinke's husband, Donald, is a battalion fire chief and has little to do with the winery except for contributing ideas. He likes to spend some of his spare time in the small laboratory developing new concoctions.

A recent addition to the roster of berry wines is a berry and grape wine containing six different essences which has been named "turkenblut" and is being touted as a skiers' drink.

Watching things at the winery is a seven-days-a-week job, according to Mrs. Reinke. "Every minute of the day something new can develop. It's not like a hardware store where you can go home at night and nothing is going to change. Wine can do erratic things while you're in bed sleeping."

The ever-present concern is that bacteria will get into a 10,000 gallon vat of wine and turn it to vinegar. "And there is no market for vinegar," she said.

The dynamic 49-year-old winemaker is a familiar figure around the Oregon Legislature, where she has twice successfully lobbied for special legislation. Once it was to allow retail sales at her plant, and another time it was to allow a wine-tasting room.

Honeywood is now financially sound, Mrs. Reinke proudly declared, "and is growing 20-25 per cent a year." She worries about getting too large, however, because "then it wouldn't be any fun."

Her wines are marketed in 12 states —"But we don't spend any money on advertising," she said. "We put all our money into the product."

Canada's Northern Command Is Vital

OTTAWA (UPI)—A jumbo jetliner on a transpolar flight comes down in the barren Arctic, stranding 300 thinly clad passengers in subzero darkness and howling cold gales . . .

It hasn't happened, but more than 3,500 jet passengers every day pass through the Canadian Arctic skies on the increasingly popular over-the-pole routes — more people than live in the forbidding land beneath them — so the possibility of accident must be provided for.

Should something happen, the rescue job would become the responsibility of the youngest general and the newest outfit in the Canadian army, Brig. Gen. Ramsey Withers and his 60-man Northern Command.

The youngest general appointed in Canadian peacetime history, the 40-year-old Withers and his men face a big job in their demanding territory north of the 60th parallel.

It includes policing the growing number of Arctic oil wells against pollution, planning to clean up a big spill if one occurs, and aiding the inhabitants against the forest fires, floods and other hardships of the Arctic.

Most important, to the Canadian government, Withers and his men will be showing the Maple Leaf flag and aiding by their presence Canada's claims to jurisdiction over the Arctic archipelago.

The genial general, a vigorous outdoorsman who began his career as an electrical engineer, obviously is delighted at his new job but he admits to at least one "nightmare" —that something should bring down one of the giant jets flying over the arctic.

There was at least one incident last spring that reminded Withers and other concerned authorities that the possibility is always with them.

A DC8 strayed off course last May in the high Arctic and was directed by northern defense radar installations on the Dew Line into the airport at Norman Wells, Northwest Territories, where it took on more fuel to continue its journey. The plane was carrying 250 passengers from Prestwick, Scotland, to Tokyo.

The International Civil Aviation Organization predicts the weekly average of polar flights over northern Canada will rise from 240 this year to 300 in 1974 and 400 in 1978.

The increasing number of overflights and the growing use of jumbo planes, carrying 300-plus passengers, are increasing both the possibility of accident and the difficulty of a rescue operation if one came down, Withers said.

Presently, the Canadian armed forces have stationed Hercules transport planes in Ottawa and Edmonton to bring out stranded passengers after a crash or forced landing.

But if the downing occurred in an inaccessible area, rescue would depend on helicopters and rugged short takeoff and landing (STOL) planes.

Withers said his rescue plans involve three stages: "One, find the plane. Two, provide life support —temporary shelter, supplies, tents, medical men and materials. Three, get them out.

"My nightmare is 300 people in miniskirts and summer clothes stranded somewhere up there. They would need some kind of help within minutes, and airlifting 300 people would take 10 sorties in a Buffalo (STOL) aircraft."

Withers said one of his highest priorities was to prepare adequate plans for dealing with oil pollution incidents and arrange for regular surveillance to help prevent spillages and spot them quickly when they do occur.

"With people now searching for oil all over the Arctic, an incident is bound to occur sometime. Our job is to make it as unlikely as possible — through regular patrols and monitoring —and to make sure we can move in an effective cleanup operation immediately if one does occur."

He said he would be consulting with local authorities, oil companies and pollution experts this year to work out complete contingency plans and surveillance arrangements for the exploration area.

From his headquarters in Yellowknife, the capital of the Northwest Territories, and from a small auxiliary post in the Yukon capital of Whitehorse, Withers hopes to be able to make the best possible use of Canada's relatively small defense forces to meet the needs of the far north.

"My responsibility is to coordinate. If a unit is going to train in the north, for example, I will provide them with information and make arrangements with local authorities. For all forces, our command will act as an information bank on the north. We will advise about food, fuel, clothing, availability of medical services —all the information that is needed for a military operation."

In general, Withers said he had four priorities for his command:

"The maintenance of Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic —this means we must have surveillance and a presence.

"Operationally ready forces that can operate in the north, that will be able to live in it.

"Search and rescue —this is a big job and getting bigger.

House Speaker's Bluff Called

A brief conversation with assemblywoman Mary Frazzini, a Reno Republican, convinced Jacobsen he didn't want to make good on his threat to eject any of the Assembly's five women members who wore a pantsuit.

"He did," she added.

Jacobsen, who had no ban against miniskirts, had said pantsuits and maxis were not in keeping with the decorum of the assembly.

Fate Of Jobless Space Worker

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gordon Blackburn came to Southern California in the late 1940s and got into the airplane building business as an assembly line worker for Lockheed.

With a background of engineering at Kansas State University and service in the Air Force, Blackburn advanced steadily in the industry, moving from one firm to another and finally going to work in 1963 for North American Rockwell.

Blackburn was assigned to North American's part in the space program—construction of the second stage of the Saturn rockets. He has worked as an instrumentation expert on the building of all 15 of the huge launchers which put man on the moon.

Last October he was laid off. As a result of the cutback in the nation's space program, there was simply no work for him.

Blackburn became one of 155,000 workers in the aerospace industry in the state of California who have lost their jobs in the past two years. The work force has dropped drom 615,000 to 460,000.

Blackburn, a pleasant, articulate man in his late 40s who comes originally from Lynnville, Ky. was asked in an interview at his home in the sprawling San Fernando Valley whether he was bitter at being discharged after so many years of service.

"No, I'm not bitter at all," he said. "I'm not concerned about getting another job. It may not be in the space or even the aeronautical field but I have qualifications that are needed and I am accustomed to moving from one job to another.

"Working on the space program was the greatest thrill of my lifetime. It was an opportunity to be part of one of the greatest moments of history.

"What I do feel is sorrow. In the space program this country built the greatest technological teams this nation has ever known or probably ever will know and now they are being broken apart and I'm afraid they will never be brought together again."

Blackburn says the American public does not realize that in reaching the moon the nation created a corps of scientists, engineers, technicians, mechanics and just plain thinkers with a dedication that transcended the interests of businesses or individuals.

Any thought of a severe cutback in the space program over the long run would be sheer idiocy in Blackburn's opinion.

"It would be as if Columbus came back after finding the new world and orders immediately went out that no ships were to go more than 200 miles from Europe's shores," he said.

But his main point is that the technological team created in the space program is qualified to tackle other major problems.

"Pollution is a perfect example," he said. "It is a typical systems engineering job right up their alley. They could turn around to that problem and find solutions just as they conquered space. It would be expensive but there is no cheap way."

When Blackburn was laid off in October, he still had a month's paid vacation coming. At the end of that time, he put in for unemployment compensation.

In the past few years, Blackburn's annual salary was in the $18,000-22,000 range. He owns his own house although the mortgage is not fully paid off. He has spent his time since his layoff installing a second bathroom in the home.

He met his wife, Sheila, an exceptionally pretty dark-haired woman, whe he was stationed in California while he was in the service. They have no children.

Mrs. Blackburn is extremely proud of her husband.

"His work on the space program was really a labor of love," she says. "You wouldn't believe the hours he put in. If we had a couple of hours together a week, it was a treat."

While Blackburn says he is not discouraged, he admits that a number of his friends are.

One of his colleagues with a doctorate in engineering is tending bar. Another has started farming in northern Florida. Many of them say they are getting out of engineering and would advise young people not to get into it.

"That's absolutely wrong," he says. "This country needs more engineers, not less. The trouble with some of the younger fellows is that they have never been without a job before and they're scared and upset.

"There's nothing to be ashamed of about being out of work. Actually it's a good thing to change jobs, to branch into an entirely different field now and then.

"No, I'm not bitter. But I am sorry about the breaking up of these great teams."

Schedule Of Apollo 14's Journey

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Apollo 14 astronauts Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell are scheduled to blast off at 3:23 p.m. EST Sunday, Jan. 31, on the nation's fourth moon landing mission. Shepard and Mitchell are due to land in the moon's rolling FRA Mauro area at 4:17 a.m. EST Feb. 5 while Roosa remains in lunar orbit. The three astronauts are set to return to a Pacific ocean splashdown at 4:01 p.m. EST Feb. 9.

Highlights of the nine-day mission include (all times EST and subject to change): Sunday, Jan. 31 3:23 p.m. — Launch from Cape Kennedy, with Apollo 14 reaching a 118-mile-high Earth orbit 12 minutes later.

5:54 p.m.—Top stage of Saturn rocket refires and drives Apollo 14 toward the moon.

6:24 p.m. —Apollo command ship separates from Saturn, turns around and docks with its lunar module landing craft. Live telecast of this operation begins at 6:28 p.m. and lasts 25 minutes. 7:19 p.m. —Apollo 14 command ship-lunar module combination separates from Saturn third-stage rocket.

3 a.m. — First course correction, if needed.

7:23 a.m. —Astronauts begin 10-hour sleep period.

5:23 p.m. —crew wakes up.

9:59 p.m. —Apollo 14's main engine fires, switching the astronauts from a "free return" course to one that will not bring them safely back to Earth without additional engine firings. This course is required to reach the lunar landing site.

TUESDAY, FEB. 2

8:23 a.m. — Astronauts begin 10-hour rest period.

6:23 p.m. —Astronauts end rest period.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

4:01 a.m. —Third course correction, if required.

5:08 a.m. —Telecast begins, to show Mitchell entering lunar module at 5:28 a.m., followed five minutes later by Shepard to check it out. Telecast lasts 45 minutes.

7:23 a.m. —Shepard and Mitchell return to command module.

6:23 a.m.—Rest period ends.

9:01 p.m. —Fourth course correction if required.

THURSDAY, FEB. 4

1:48 a.m. —Apollo 14 swings behind moon and is out of radio contact with earth. 2:00 a.m. — Six-minute 7-second braking blast from the command ship's main engine places the astronauts in orbit ranging from 196 to 66 miles above the moon.

2:20 a.m. —Apollo 14 resumes radio contact with Earth.

2:31 a.m. — Top stage of Apollo 14's Saturn rocket smashes into the moon, 258 miles west of astronaut landing site. Apollo 14 will be passing above the eastern side of the moon at the time.

4:08 a.m. —Apollo 14 begins second lunar orbit.

6:15 a.m. —A 21 1-2-second firng from the command ship's main engine drops Apollo 14 into an orbit ranging from 67 to 11 miles above the lunar surface. This occurs at the start of the fourth orbit.

8:10 a.m. —Apollo 14 begins fourth orbit around the moon.

8:58 a.m. —Astronauts photograph proposed Apollo 16 landing site near Crater Descartes.

10:23 a.m. —Astronauts begin 8.5-hour rest period, in fifth orbit. 6:53 p.m. —Astronauts end rest period midway through ninth orbit. 8:23 p.m. —Telecast showing FRA Mauro landing site, lasts 14 minutes and then Shepard and Mitchell activate lunar module.

FRIDAY, FEB. 5

1:10 a.m. —Four-second firing from command ship's main engine raises its orbit to 73 by 65 miles above the lunar surface. The spacecraft is completing its 12th lunar orbit at the time. 4:05 a.m. — Shepard and Mitchell fire lunar module descent engine to start their moon landing sequence.

4:17 a.m. —Apollo 14 lands on the moon's FRA Mauro terrain.

8:53 a.m. —Lunar module hatch opened with Shepard climbing down to surface followed by Mitchell at 9:23 a.m. The moonwalk will be televised in color for about four hours. The astronauts will set up an automated science station, collect rock samples, erect an American flag and thump the surface with an explosive device to create vibrations that will be used to study the subsurface structure. 1:08 p.m. —Shepard and Mitchell end first moonwalk, unless it is extended for 45 more minutes.

1:32 p.m. Command ship changes its orbital angle in preparation for lunar module rendezvous.

3:58 p.m. —Shepard and Mitchell begin 10-hour rest period in the lunar module. Roosa started 9.5-hour rest period three minutes earlier in the orbiting command ship.

SATURDAY, FEB. 6

1:15 a.m. —Roosa awakes.

1:48 a.m. —Shepard and Mitchell wake up on the lunar surface.

5:06 a.m. —Roosa, making his 27th swing around the moon, photographs the Apollo 16 landing site Descartes a second time.

5:38 a.m. —Shepard and Mitchell begin second moonwalk, hiking a total of about 8,900 feet to a crater-topped hill and back. They will examine interesting geological features along the way and collect rock samples that may date back to the birth of the solar system. Their color television camera will be turned on at 4:59 a.m. and operate for 7 hours 43 minutes, showing the astronauts beginning their traverse and returning to their spacecraft.

9:51 a.m. —The second surface excursion ends, unless extended for 45 more minutes. Official plan to extend the walk if the astronauts are in good shape and have enough oxygen and water.

11:33 a.m. —The men on the moon eat, after throwing out excess equipment and cleaning up their cabin.

1:47 p.m. —Apollo 14 blasts off from the moon, reaching lunar orbit seven minutes later.

3:33 p.m. —Lunar module docks with the command ship in lunar orbit. This operation and preceding rendezvous maneuvers will be televised to Earth. The command ship will be making its 32nd orbit at the time.

5:47 p.m. —Lunar module is jettisoned, sent to crash on moon 30 miles west of the landing site at 7:44 p.m.

8:38 p.m. —Apollo 14 fires main engine two minutes 27 seconds to blast out of lunar orbit and head back to Earth.

11:23 p.m. —The three astronauts begin 10-hour sleep period.

Astronauts' Buddy System

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—The two Apollo 14 moon walkers will be able to share vital cooling water if necessary to triple their hiking range on the lunar surface to a mile and a half or more.

Using the buddy system technique long practiced by scuba divers, Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell will carry a 6 1-2-foot hose that will be able to transfer coolant from one spacesuit to another.

This would be used if one backpack fails while the astronauts are on their second surface excursion. Each astronaut carries an emergency oxygen supply and previously that oxygen would have to be used to cool the astronaut as well as supply his breathing needs if the main backpack fails.

Mission director Chester M. Lee said the buddy system, carried for the first time on Apollo 14, will double the time the astronauts would have to get back to hte safety of their lunar module in event of a backpack failure. The limit in such an emergency before was half an hour and half of that time would be used in repressurizing the lander.

Shepard and Mitchell will hike to the rim of a scientifically interesting crater on their second surface excursion. The crater is about 4,000 feet from the landing site and the buddy system will give them the walking range to reach it.

Ancient Surgery Evidence Found

MOSCOW (UPI) —It was a brilliant job, according to Soviet scientists. The surgeon amputated the young woman's left foot and used the bone of a ram to fashion an artificial one to go in its place.

It happened 2,300 years ago.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Sunday archeologists and physicians found evidence of the surgery in a skeleton discovered in a burial mound in Kazakhstan.

"An X-ray examination showed that the operation was successful," Tass said. "The patient lived for several years afterward, as shown by the bending of the end of the shinbone from the constant pressure of the artificial foot."

Nixon's Plan On Cancer Attacked

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral polio vaccine, believes President Nixon's proposed $100 million plan to fight cancer will not produce any miracles.

"You can't buy solutions to problems with money," Sabin said at a news conference Saturday.

Sabin, who gave up cancer research a year ago to head the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel, said, "Money alone is raw material. Unless you get good people to use it, it will not achieve its goal."

Used Car Buyer Protection Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill enabling a used car buyer to determine if the dealer turned back the mileage indicator on the vehicle was submitted Monday by Assemblyman Ken MacDonald, D-Ojai.

The measure would require the Department of Motor Vehicles to be notified of the mileage recorded on the odometer of a vehicle every time it is sold or leased. The buyer then could check with the DMV to determine the previous mileage reading.

It is already illegal to turn back odometers.

Schedule Of Apollo 14's Journey

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Apollo 14 astronauts Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell are scheduled to blast off at 3:23 p.m. EST Sunday, Jan. 31, on the nation's fourth moon landing mission. Shepard and Mitchell are due to land in the moon's rolling FRA Mauro area at 4:17 a.m. EST Feb. 5 while Roosa remains in lunar orbit. The three astronauts are set to return to a Pacific ocean splashdown at 4:01 p.m. EST Feb. 9.

Highlights of the nine-day mission include (all times EST and subject to change): Sunday, Jan. 31 3:23 p.m. — Launch from Cape Kennedy, with Apollo 14 reaching a 118-mile-high Earth orbit 12 minutes later.

5:54 p.m.—Top stage of Saturn rocket refires and drives Apollo 14 toward the moon.

6:24 p.m. —Apollo command ship separates from Saturn, turns around and docks with its lunar module landing craft. Live telecast of this operation begins at 6:28 p.m. and lasts 25 minutes. 7:19 p.m. —Apollo 14 command ship-lunar module combination separates from Saturn third-stage rocket.

3 a.m. — First course correction, if needed.

7:23 a.m. —Astronauts begin 10-hour sleep period.

5:23 p.m. —crew wakes up.

9:59 p.m. —Apollo 14's main engine fires, switching the astronauts from a "free return" course to one that will not bring them safely back to Earth without additional engine firings. This course is required to reach the lunar landing site.

TUESDAY, FEB. 2

8:23 a.m. — Astronauts begin 10-hour rest period.

6:23 p.m. —Astronauts end rest period.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

4:01 a.m. —Third course correction, if required.

5:08 a.m. —Telecast begins, to show Mitchell entering lunar module at 5:28 a.m., followed five minutes later by Shepard to check it out. Telecast lasts 45 minutes.

7:23 a.m. —Shepard and Mitchell return to command module.

6:23 a.m.—Rest period ends.

9:01 p.m. —Fourth course correction if required.

THURSDAY, FEB. 4

1:48 a.m. —Apollo 14 swings behind moon and is out of radio contact with earth. 2:00 a.m. — Six-minute 7-second braking blast from the command ship's main engine places the astronauts in orbit ranging from 196 to 66 miles above the moon.

2:20 a.m. —Apollo 14 resumes radio contact with Earth.

2:31 a.m. — Top stage of Apollo 14's Saturn rocket smashes into the moon, 258 miles west of astronaut landing site. Apollo 14 will be passing above the eastern side of the moon at the time.

4:08 a.m. —Apollo 14 begins second lunar orbit.

6:15 a.m. —A 21 1-2-second firng from the command ship's main engine drops Apollo 14 into an orbit ranging from 67 to 11 miles above the lunar surface. This occurs at the start of the fourth orbit.

8:10 a.m. —Apollo 14 begins fourth orbit around the moon.

8:58 a.m. —Astronauts photograph proposed Apollo 16 landing site near Crater Descartes.

10:23 a.m. —Astronauts begin 8.5-hour rest period, in fifth orbit. 6:53 p.m. —Astronauts end rest period midway through ninth orbit. 8:23 p.m. —Telecast showing FRA Mauro landing site, lasts 14 minutes and then Shepard and Mitchell activate lunar module.

FRIDAY, FEB. 5

1:10 a.m. —Four-second firing from command ship's main engine raises its orbit to 73 by 65 miles above the lunar surface. The spacecraft is completing its 12th lunar orbit at the time. 4:05 a.m. — Shepard and Mitchell fire lunar module descent engine to start their moon landing sequence.

4:17 a.m. —Apollo 14 lands on the moon's FRA Mauro terrain.

8:53 a.m. —Lunar module hatch opened with Shepard climbing down to surface followed by Mitchell at 9:23 a.m. The moonwalk will be televised in color for about four hours. The astronauts will set up an automated science station, collect rock samples, erect an American flag and thump the surface with an explosive device to create vibrations that will be used to study the subsurface structure.

1:08 p.m. —Shepard and Mitchell end first moonwalk, unless it is extended for 45 more minutes.

1:32 p.m. Command ship changes its orbital angle in preparation for lunar module rendezvous.

3:58 p.m. —Shepard and Mitchell begin 10-hour rest period in the lunar module. Roosa started 9.5-hour rest period three minutes earlier in the orbiting command ship.

SATURDAY, FEB. 6

1:15 a.m. —Roosa awakes.

1:48 a.m. —Shepard and Mitchell wake up on the lunar surface.

5:06 a.m. —Roosa, making his 27th swing around the moon, photographs the Apollo 16 landing site Descartes a second time.

5:38 a.m. —Shepard and Mitchell begin second moonwalk, hiking a total of about 8,900 feet to a crater-topped hill and back. They will examine interesting geological features along the way and collect rock samples that may date back to the birth of the solar system. Their color television camera will be turned on at 4:59 a.m. and operate for 7 hours 43 minutes, showing the astronauts beginning their traverse and returning to their spacecraft.

9:51 a.m. —The second surface excursion ends, unless extended for 45 more minutes. Official plan to extend the walk if the astronauts are in good shape and have enough oxygen and water.

11:33 a.m. —The men on the moon eat, after throwing out excess equipment and cleaning up their cabin.

1:47 p.m. —Apollo 14 blasts off from the moon, reaching lunar orbit seven minutes later.

3:33 p.m. —Lunar module docks with the command ship in lunar orbit. This operation and preceding rendezvous maneuvers will be televised to Earth. The command ship will be making its 32nd orbit at the time.

5:47 p.m. —Lunar module is jettisoned, sent to crash on moon 30 miles west of the landing site at 7:44 p.m.

8:38 p.m. —Apollo 14 fires main engine two minutes 27 seconds to blast out of lunar orbit and head back to Earth.

Astronauts' Buddy System

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—The two Apollo 14 moon walkers will be able to share vital cooling water if necessary to triple their hiking range on the lunar surface to a mile and a half or more.

Using the buddy system technique long practiced by scuba divers, Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell will carry a 6 1-2-foot hose that will be able to transfer coolant from one spacesuit to another.

This would be used if one backpack fails while the astronauts are on their second surface excursion. Each astronaut carries an emergency oxygen supply and previously that oxygen would have to be used to cool the astronaut as well as supply his breathing needs if the main backpack fails.

Mission director Chester M. Lee said the buddy system, carried for the first time on Apollo 14, will double the time the astronauts would have to get back to hte safety of their lunar module in event of a backpack failure. The limit in such an emergency before was half an hour and half of that time would be used in repressurizing the lander.

Shepard and Mitchell will hike to the rim of a scientifically interesting crater on their second surface excursion. The crater is about 4,000 feet from the landing site and the buddy system will give them the walking range to reach it.

Ancient Surgery Evidence Found

MOSCOW (UPI) —It was a brilliant job, according to Soviet scientists. The surgeon amputated the young woman's left foot and used the bone of a ram to fashion an artificial one to go in its place.

It happened 2,300 years ago.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Sunday archeologists and physicians found evidence of the surgery in a skeleton discovered in a burial mound in Kazakhstan.

"An X-ray examination showed that the operation was successful," Tass said. "The patient lived for several years afterward, as shown by the bending of the end of the shinbone from the constant pressure of the artificial foot."

Nixon's Plan On Cancer Attacked

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral polio vaccine, believes President Nixon's proposed $100 million plan to fight cancer will not produce any miracles.

"You can't buy solutions to problems with money," Sabin said at a news conference Saturday.

Sabin, who gave up cancer research a year ago to head the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel, said, "Money alone is raw material. Unless you get good people to use it, it will not achieve its goal."

Used Car Buyer Protection Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill enabling a used car buyer to determine if the dealer turned back the mileage indicator on the vehicle was submitted Monday by Assemblyman Ken MacDonald, D-Ojai.

The measure would require the Department of Motor Vehicles to be notified of the mileage recorded on the odometer of a vehicle every time it is sold or leased. The buyer then could check with the DMV to determine the previous mileage reading.

It is already illegal to turn back odometers.

Nader Switches Consumer Crusade To Grass Roots Area

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Six years after coming to Washington, Ralph Nader is switching the focus of his consumer crusade to the grass roots.

His goal is to enlist an army of students, housewives and particularly young lawyers to do at home what Nader has done from his Washington base.

Nader says nearly all the best lawyers work for the highest bidder, usually big business. He feels this results in an almost unbroken string of decisions which shortchange the public.

Nader believes the solution is to give the public equal representation in the legal arena —the same caliber of lawyers, accountants and scientists hired by business.

For instance, Nader says it is often hopeless for a homeowner to protest his property tax. The answer, he says, is for all local homeowners to chip in, hire a lawyer and perhaps an accountant, survey all the tax assessments and argue for lower rates on homes and higher rates on business.

He says this is precisely what industry does with the result that many localities grant tax favors to local business and make up the difference by taxing homeowners more.

Now 36, Nader still works 16 to 20 hours a day. He foregoes vacations and social life, works closely with consumer-minded congressmen, needles federal agencies and petitions for tougher action against deceptive advertising, hazardous cars and contaminated foods.

But he is spending more and more time on the road, not just giving speeches —which for years have helped finance his office —but trying to spark creation of local and state public service enterprises.

"We've got to get more people into this kind of work," Nader told UPI in an interview. "There will be 1,000 public service lawyers by 1975, compared with perhaps 50 now. But that's too slow."

Nader said his primary recruiting targets are college students and young lawyers.

His approach to students runs like this:

You say you want to fight racism, pollution, consumer abuses. Well, put your money where your mouth is. Chip in $3 a year each for a statewide public service fund, elect your own board of directors, pick your targets, hire lawyers and other skilled help and go to work.

In one long day late last year, Nader delivered that message to students at nine campuses in Oregon. Within a few weeks, he said, 50 per cent of the entire enrollment of nine colleges and universities signed up to participate.

The result was OSPIRG, the Oregon Students Public Interest Research Group. Nader says similar groups are being organized by college students in Illinois, Minnesota and Georgia.

"If you could get just one of these in every state it would make a tremendous difference," Nader said.

To young Wall Street Lawyers, Nader makes this pitch: right out of law school you make $16,000 to $18,000 a year from business. You owe something to the other side of issues. Chip in $500 a year each and set up an independent law firm to do public service work.

"I call it a 'breeder law firm' because it would prompt similar lawyers' efforts elsewhere," Nader said. "They can dig up or borrow $500 to improve the system which is paying them so well."

With skilled grass roots representation, Nader said, the consumer movement can be "action oriented." So far, he said, it has been largely "informational and educational."

Nader's Washington goals this year are the same broad consumer protection laws that narrowly failed to win approval by Congress in 1970.

One would establish an independent federal agency to represent the consumer. In effect, the taxpayers would finance on a large national scale the kind of public service firm Nader is trying to create privately elsewhere on a small local scale.

Another, also linked to Nader's idea that consumers must band together, would let one aggrieved customer sue a firm on behalf of everyone victimized by the same shoddy product or phony sales pitch.

Such suits usually are impractical individually because the legal fees cost more than the amount sought. Under the "class action" proposal, the judge would award money to all affected customers, and the lawyer's fee would be taken proportionately from each recipient.

"This is real stuff," Nader said of the proposals. "Up to now we've just had subject matter bills —cars, flammable fabrics, toys. But these are substantive changes in the ground rules, all in favor of the consumer."

Nader's Washington office is frequently pictured as a small, threadbare operation populated chiefly by a few idealistic students.

Nader actually runs two Washington offices. The main one, the center for the study of responsive law, is the home of the widely publicized "Nader's Raiders," student groups whose investigative reports have scorched federal bureaucrats.

The center is tax exempt, sticks to investigations and public disclosure of alleged scandals and shortcomings in government and business, and has an annual budget of $285,000. Its half dozen lawyers make up to $15,000 a year, but the full-time staff totals fewer than 15.

Much of the money goes to the student "raiders," about 200 of whom worked last summer on 20 projects. They were paid $200 to $1,000, based mostly on need. Nader purposely pays poor students more so his center will not become an exclusive haven for the do-good rich.

The second office, with a $170,000 budget, is called the Public Interest Research Group. This is a nonprofit firm of 14 young lawyers who receive $5,000 their first year out of law school. Nader signs them up in the expectation they will move on to more lucrative jobs. A few stay two years or more, however.

It was one of Nader's young lawyers who sued the Food and Drug Administration seeking stiffer warning labels on birth control pills. Another is looking into environmental hazards of nuclear power plants. A third is exploring ways to force more public disclosure of government activities.

Still another is investigating whether the federal civil service system promotes those who make no waves rather than employes with initiative and ideas.

Where does Nader get his money? Small foundations finance most of the center's activities, Nader said, with a substantial but lesser amount coming in small contributions from individuals.

He said the fund raising gets harder with fame, not easier.

"You get less money the more effective you get," Nader said. "Some foundations have cut us off because we're too controversial for them."

The law firm is not tax exempt and hence not eligible for charitable donations. Its money comes mainly from two sources. One is the more than $400,000 Nader got in his suit against General Motors Corp., which had hired private detectives to trail the author of "Unsafe at Any Speed."

The second source is Nader's own fund raising, mostly lecturing and writing. Nader estimated he spends 20 per cent of his time raising money to pay office bills.

"Almost everything I earn is turned back," he said. "I don't need much to live on. I'm not much of a consumer."

New Shock Absorber For Saturn Rocket

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Apollo 14's Saturn 5 rocket is equipped with a new shock absorber to eliminate the "pogo" vibrations that prematurely stopped one of five second-stage engines during last April's Apollo 13 launching.

The early engine shutdown did not affect the moon mission because the other four engines compensated for the lack of thrust by firing longer. Nevertheless, the rocket's performance was reduced and a similar shutdown could lead to a moonflight abort.

To reduce the buildup of oscillations, a donut-shaped device was installed in the liquid oxygen feed system to cushion the pressures of fluid going to the engines. This dampening effect causes the propellant column to vibrate at a frequency different from the engines and stage structure and prevents the three from vibrating together in rhythm.

Similarshock absorbers were used successfully in Titan 2 rockets that launched two-man Gemini spacecraft in 1965 and 1966.

Detergent Ban By Suffolk County Leaders

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI)—The Suffolk County legislature Tuesday banned sale of all detergent products, making Long Island housewives the first in the nation to be legally limited to soap and soap flakes.

The 18-man legislature voted after a 20-minute public hearing on an amendment to an existing law, passed last November, which banned sale of most laundry detergent products, including many national brands. Under the new law, any detergent including those with non-ionic ingredents, will be banned from sale to Suffolks 1.1 million residents.

The legislation resulted from increasing pollution of Suffolk's water supply, which had led doctors in some communities to advise use of bottled water in making baby formulas. The only cleaning substances that can now be sold in the county are those made of vegetable oil or animal fat that are clearly marked "soap."

Dogs And Cats Faring Better On Their Tuna

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (UPI)—A scientist who has gained recognition for his studies of mercury levels in tuna and swordfish said Tuesday "cats and dogs are faring a lot better than people."

Prof. Bruce McDuffie, a chemistry professor at State University at Binghamton, said he had examined six brands of cat food and one of dog food containing tuna. He said all were below the mercury-level standards set by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Last year, McDuffie's findings of mercury in tuna and swordfish samples above the 0.5 parts per million acceptable level for human consumption led to the FDA ordering certain brands off supermarket shelves.

Four of the cat foods tested were of a tuna-base variety and the other two had tuna flavoring added, McDuffie said.

Billboard Banning Bill Is Introduced

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill banning billboards in California by June 1975 was introduced Monday by Assemblyman Frank Murphy who said the outdoor signs are "all over the damn place and they don't do anything."

The Santa Cruz Republican said his measure would require 25 per cent of the advertising signs to come down by June 1972, with 25 per cent more to be demolished each year until they are all gone. The bill would be administered by the state Director of Consumer Affairs.

Airlift Plan For Vietnam Soldiers

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) —Two Milwaukee men, one a Vietnam veteran, have founded Wisconsin Operation Airlift Inc., and hope by March to be able to provide trips home for Vietnam servicemen on leave.

The group planned to solicit funds from the public to finance the $502 round trip air tickets. They are cooperating with state government agencies and several airlines and plan to place the names of kevicemen in a pool, based on length of service and leave eligibility, and draw names once a month for the available tickets.

Nader Switches Consumer Crusade To Grass Roots Area

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Six years after coming to Washington, Ralph Nader is switching the focus of his consumer crusade to the grass roots.

His goal is to enlist an army of students, housewives and particularly young lawyers to do at home what Nader has done from his Washington base.

Nader says nearly all the best lawyers work for the highest bidder, usually big business. He feels this results in an almost unbroken string of decisions which shortchange the public.

Nader believes the solution is to give the public equal representation in the legal arena —the same caliber of lawyers, accountants and scientists hired by business.

For instance, Nader says it is often hopeless for a homeowner to protest his property tax. The answer, he says, is for all local homeowners to chip in, hire a lawyer and perhaps an accountant, survey all the tax assessments and argue for lower rates on homes and higher rates on business.

He says this is precisely what industry does with the result that many localities grant tax favors to local business and make up the difference by taxing homeowners more.

Now 36, Nader still works 16 to 20 hours a day. He foregoes vacations and social life, works closely with consumer-minded congressmen, needles federal agencies and petitions for tougher action against deceptive advertising, hazardous cars and contaminated foods.

But he is spending more and more time on the road, not just giving speeches —which for years have helped finance his office —but trying to spark creation of local and state public service enterprises.

"We've got to get more people into this kind of work," Nader told UPI in an interview. "There will be 1,000 public service lawyers by 1975, compared with perhaps 50 now. But that's too slow."

Nader said his primary recruiting targets are college students and young lawyers.

His approach to students runs like this:

You say you want to fight racism, pollution, consumer abuses. Well, put your money where your mouth is. Chip in $3 a year each for a statewide public service fund, elect your own board of directors, pick your targets, hire lawyers and other skilled help and go to work.

In one long day late last year, Nader delivered that message to students at nine campuses in Oregon. Within a few weeks, he said, 50 per cent of the entire enrollment of nine colleges and universities signed up to participate.

The result was OSPIRG, the Oregon Students Public Interest Research Group. Nader says similar groups are being organized by college students in Illinois, Minnesota and Georgia.

"If you could get just one of these in every state it would make a tremendous difference," Nader said.

To young Wall Street Lawyers, Nader makes this pitch: right out of law school you make $16,000 to $18,000 a year from business. You owe something to the other side of issues. Chip in $500 a year each and set up an independent law firm to do public service work.

"I call it a 'breeder law firm' because it would prompt similar lawyers' efforts elsewhere," Nader said. "They can dig up or borrow $500 to improve the system which is paying them so well."

With skilled grass roots representation, Nader said, the consumer movement can be "action oriented." So far, he said, it has been largely "informational and educational."

Nader's Washington goals this year are the same broad consumer protection laws that narrowly failed to win approval by Congress in 1970.

One would establish an independent federal agency to represent the consumer. In effect, the taxpayers would finance on a large national scale the kind of public service firm Nader is trying to create privately elsewhere on a small local scale.

Another, also linked to Nader's idea that consumers must band together, would let one aggrieved customer sue a firm on behalf of everyone victimized by the same shoddy product or phony sales pitch.

Such suits usually are impractical individually because the legal fees cost more than the amount sought. Under the "class action" proposal, the judge would award money to all affected customers, and the lawyer's fee would be taken proportionately from each recipient.

"This is real stuff," Nader said of the proposals. "Up to now we've just had subject matter bills —cars, flammable fabrics, toys. But these are substantive changes in the ground rules, all in favor of the consumer."

Nader's Washington office is frequently pictured as a small, threadbare operation populated chiefly by a few idealistic students.

Nader actually runs two Washington offices. The main one, the center for the study of responsive law, is the home of the widely publicized "Nader's Raiders," student groups whose investigative reports have scorched federal bureaucrats.

The center is tax exempt, sticks to investigations and public disclosure of alleged scandals and shortcomings in government and business, and has an annual budget of $285,000. Its half dozen lawyers make up to $15,000 a year, but the full-time staff totals fewer than 15.

Much of the money goes to the student "raiders," about 200 of whom worked last summer on 20 projects. They were paid $200 to $1,000, based mostly on need. Nader purposely pays poor students more so his center will not become an exclusive haven for the do-good rich.

The second office, with a $170,000 budget, is called the Public Interest Research Group. This is a nonprofit firm of 14 young lawyers who receive $5,000 their first year out of law school. Nader signs them up in the expectation they will move on to more lucrative jobs. A few stay two years or more, however.

It was one of Nader's young lawyers who sued the Food and Drug Administration seeking stiffer warning labels on birth control pills. Another is looking into environmental hazards of nuclear power plants. A third is exploring ways to force more public disclosure of government activities.

Still another is investigating whether the federal civil service system promotes those who make no waves rather than employes with initiative and ideas.

Where does Nader get his money? Small foundations finance most of the center's activities, Nader said, with a substantial but lesser amount coming in small contributions from individuals.

He said the fund raising gets harder with fame, not easier.

"You get less money the more effective you get," Nader said. "Some foundations have cut us off because we're too controversial for them."

The law firm is not tax exempt and hence not eligible for charitable donations. Its money comes mainly from two sources. One is the more than $400,000 Nader got in his suit against General Motors Corp., which had hired private detectives to trail the author of "Unsafe at Any Speed."

The second source is Nader's own fund raising, mostly lecturing and writing. Nader estimated he spends 20 per cent of his time raising money to pay office bills.

"Almost everything I earn is turned back," he said. "I don't need much to live on. I'm not much of a consumer."

New Shock Absorber For Saturn Rocket

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)— Apollo 14's Saturn 5 rocket is equipped with a new shock absorber to eliminate the "pogo" vibrations that prematurely stopped one of five second-stage engines during last April's Apollo 13 launching.

The early engine shutdown did not affect the moon mission because the other four engines compensated for the lack of thrust by firing longer. Nevertheless, the rocket's performance was reduced and a similar shutdown could lead to a moonflight abort.

To reduce the buildup of oscillations, a donut-shaped device was installed in the liquid oxygen feed system to cushion the pressures of fluid going to the engines. This dampening effect causes the propellant column to vibrate at a frequency different from the engines and stage structure and prevents the three from vibrating together in rhythm.

Similarshock absorbers were used successfully in Titan 2 rockets that launched two-man Gemini spacecraft in 1965 and 1966.

Detergent Ban By Suffolk County Leaders

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI)— The Suffolk County legislature Tuesday banned sale of all detergent products, making Long Island housewives the first in the nation to be legally limited to soap and soap flakes.

The 18-man legislature voted after a 20-minute public hearing on an amendment to an existing law, passed last November, which banned sale of most laundry detergent products, including many national brands. Under the new law, any detergent including those with non-ionic ingredients, will be banned from sale to Suffolks 1.1 million residents.

The legislation resulted from increasing pollution of Suffolk's water supply, which had led doctors in some communities to advise use of bottled water in making baby formulas. The only cleaning substances that can now be sold in the county are those made of vegetable oil or animal fat that are clearly marked "soap."

Newark Public School Teaching New Class In African Culture

By RONALD BURNS

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—A group of black youngsters stand, arms folded, eyes front, chanting the slogans of the red, black and green tricolor of black nationalism that is unfurled at the front of the classroom.

Around the room are several instructors, young, black and barefoot, dressed in dashikis and turban-style headgear called geles. Along the walls are colorful posters depicting African life.

"Red is for the blood of our forefathers which has not been shed in vain. Black is for the color of our faces and the job we must do. Green is for youth and new ideas."

Though it sounds at first like the underground school of some far-out fringe group, it is an experimental class now being taught in the Newark public school system that incorporates the African Free School methods originated by Newark-born poet and playwright Leroi Jones.

Thirty youngsters are learning Swahili, reading Zulu folk tales and listening to the wisdom of Bantu philosophers in the daily class in Room 309 at Robert Treat School in Newark's rundown Central Ward.

The class is aimed at giving the children "a black frame of reference," Jones said in an interview, because "African children —wherever they are — relate better to African descriptions, whether through literature or philosophy."

"Nobody thinks of teaching the Bantu philosophers to the white middle class, like, say, they teach Thomas Aquinas," Jones said. "The trouble is that only Aquinas is taught in both white and black areas so what we're trying to do is help black children learn by using images that show their own development."

The class had its origin in a weekend version of African Free School launched last year by Jones at 33 Stirling St., site of the writer's Spirit House project, a local theater and arts workshop.

The African curriculum was incorporated into the city's school system this fall through a federal grant made available for educationally deprived children under the Education Act of 1965.

Dr. Alma Flagg, assistant superintendent of Newark schools, who plugged for the inception of the program, says that as far as she knows it is "unique in New Jersey, possibly in the country."

It is being conducted in a city whose population of 402,000 is more than 70 per cent black, and in the heart of one of the nation's shabbiest ghettos that saw bloody riots three years ago in which 26 persons were killed.

Jones thinks that since the election in Newark last June of Kenneth A. Gibson, the first black mayor of a major Northeastern city, the ghetto's mood has shifted "to a much more positive approach" and the accompanying feeling that Newark can become a national showcase for black accomplishment.

"We look on the black community as in need of general improvement," Jones said, "And we think it's the black community's responsibility to initiate this improvement, not anyone else's."

Dr. Flagg emphasized that the Free School program was set up "only after there was an indication of strong interest in the community."

She also stressed that "there is a control class going on in the same building, similar in every way possible to the Free School, but using the conventional curriculum."

She said the major similarities include a multi-level approach that groups together children from grades five through eight, as well as the use of several instructors for the one class. She said the program's future was up in the air until the evaluation of its results at the end of the current school year.

A major emphasis of the class is the "family" approach and relationship of teachers to students. Teachers use only Swahili names and are called "Mama" or "Baba," which are Swahili for mother and father.

"We are like their parents," said Mama Furaha, who administers the African Free School both at Robert Treat and at Spirit House.

Jones noted that the teachers "stress the kind of discipline that is unknown in the uncontrolled school situation that you usually find today."

"In a sense it is traditional and we think of the school as traditional," he said. "Tradition in a degenerated situation becomes innovation."

Month's Delay If Apollo 14 Doesn't Go On Sunday

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—If Apollo 14 is not launched by 7:12 p.m. EST Sunday, its pilots will have to wait until March 1 to get another shot at the moon.

Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell are scheduled to blast off at 3:23 p.m. Jan. 31, but launch crews have 3 hours and 49 minutes of leeway should weather or some technical problem cause a delay. The last hour of the launch period is after nightfall.

But because Apollo 14 is programmed for only one landing site on the moon, and because special sunlighting conditions are needed for visibility during the descent and surface operations, there is just one optimum launch opportunity a month.

The next favorable launch date is March 2. However, a high priority part of the mission is to photograph a future landing area near the Crater Descartes and to do that, Apollo 14 would have to be launched March 1 and the astronauts would spend an extra day in lunar orbit.

A launch March 3 also is a possibility, although sunlight conditions would not be as good at the landing site and the Descartes photography would be missed.

If those launch opportunities are missed for some reason, Apollo 14 could be lunched on March 31 or April 1, but Descartes photography would not be possible.

An average of more than 400 billion gallons of water flow down the Mississippi River past New Orleans each day.

The African curriculum was incorporated into the city's school system this fall through a federal grant made available for educationally deprived children under the Education Act of 1965.

Dr. Alma Flagg, assistant superintendent of Newark schools, who plugged for the inception of the program, says that as far as she knows it is "unique in New Jersey, possibly in the country."

It is being conducted in a city whose population of 402,000 is more than 70 per cent black, and in the heart of one of the nation's shabbiest ghettos that saw bloody riots three years ago in which 26 persons were killed.

Jones thinks that since the election in Newark last June of Kenneth A. Gibson, the first black mayor of a major Northeastern city, the ghetto's mood has shifted "to a much more positive approach" and the accompanying feeling that Newark can become a national showcase for black accomplishment.

"We look on the black community as in need of general improvement," Jones said, "And we think it's the black community's responsibility to initiate this improvement, not anyone else's."

Dr. Flagg emphasized that the Free School program was set up "only after there was an indication of strong interest in the community."

She also stressed that "there is a control class going on in the same building, similar in every way possible to the Free School, but using the conventional curriculum."

She said the major similarities include a multi-level approach that groups together children from grades five through eight, as well as the use of several instructors for the one class. She said the program's future was up in the air until the evaluation of its results at the end of the current school year.

A major emphasis of the class is the "family" approach and relationship of teachers to students. Teachers use only Swahili names and are called "Mama" or "Baba," which are Swahili for mother and father.

"We are like their parents," said Mama Furaha, who administers the African Free School both at Robert Treat and at Spirit House.

Jones noted that the teachers "stress the kind of discipline that is unknown in the uncontrolled school situation that you usually find today."

"In a sense it is traditional and we think of the school as traditional," he said. "Tradition in a degenerated situation becomes innovation."

Month's Delay If Apollo 14 Doesn't Go On Sunday

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—If Apollo 14 is not launched by 7:12 p.m. EST Sunday, its pilots will have to wait until March 1 to get another shot at the moon.

Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell are scheduled to blast off at 3:23 p.m. Jan. 31, but launch crews have 3 hours and 49 minutes of leeway should weather or some technical problem cause a delay. The last hour of the launch period is after nightfall.

But because Apollo 14 is programmed for only one landing site on the moon, and because special sunlighting conditions are needed for visibility during the descent and surface operations, there is just one optimum launch opportunity a month.

The next favorable launch date is March 2. However, a high priority part of the mission is to photograph a future landing area near the Crater Descartes and to do that, Apollo 14 would have to be launched March 1 and the astronauts would spend an extra day in lunar orbit.

A launch March 3 also is a possibility, although sunlight conditions would not be as good at the landing site and the Descartes photography would be missed.

If those launch opportunities are missed for some reason, Apollo 14 could be lunched on March 31 or April 1,. but Descartes photography would not be possible.

An average of more than 400 billion gallons of water flow down the Mississippi River past New Orleans each day.

BOMB HOAX DELAYS GAME

VIETNAM LETTER

Drug Abuse Among GIs Held Rampant

There is an "unbelievable drug abuse problem" among men of the First Cavalry Division in Vietnam, while they are restricted to company compounds and denied an enlisted men's clubs, according to a San Rafael man who is a member of the company.

Michael K. McMillan, a former Independent-Journal circulation department employee, has sent a letter to publisher Wishard A. Brown, asking that it be published in the hope of bringing public pressure to bear.

Other members of his unit also have written to their hometown newspapers, McMillan told his former boss, circulation manager Allan Howells, in an accompanying note in which he said: "Morale is at an incredible low and drug abuse is running rampant. I think the people at home should know about it."

McMillan is a member of Company B, 228th Aviation Battalion, First Cavalry Division. His letter to the publisher follows:

"I am an Army serviceman now serving my tour in the Republic of Vietnam. I am a Marinite and worked for the Independent-Journal for three years in the circulation department . .

"Many enlisted men, including myself, are trying to bring attention to the deplorable conditions in the first Cavalry Division stationed in Vietnam. We feel we are being treated unfairly for no apparent reason. We have appealed and petitioned through normal channels with no response. Therefore, we feel our only recourse is to appeal to the American public and hope apathy will not prevail.

Finger Lickin' Chicken Is Approved

By LARRY MOWELL

Overruling the county planning commission and the wishes of Mill Valley's elected officials, the supervisors unanimously granted a use permit for the national chain's local franchiser, Harmon Investment Managers.

The approval ended years of effort on the part of the chain to open a Southern Marin outlet. Two previous sites along Highway 101 were rejected by the county; Mill Valley rebuffed the colonel three other times.

The approved take-out food restaurant will replace C's Drive-in at 510 Miller Avenue, flush with the Mill Valley city limit, but in an unincorporated area.

The city council, planning commission and architectural advisory committee of Mill Valley all opposed a new take-out restaurant at the Miller Avenue lot.

But San Rafael attorney Colin C. Claxon, representing the franchiser, argued that people in Mill Valley want an outlet of the chicken chain despite cries against more drive-ins.

He declared that a door-to-door survey of 1,000 Mill Valley residents conducted by his firm discovered that 87 per cent fa-

Wholesale Prices Take Giant Jump

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A sharp rise in farm produce prices this month has caused the largest boost in wholesale prices in a year—six-tenths of one per cent, the government said in preliminary estimates released today.

Farm product prices went up 1.7 per cent this month after falling sharply in three of the past five months, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

The more stable industrial commodities price index went up 0.3 per cent in January, about average for the past year, but down from the 0.4 per cent advance in December.

The 0.6 per cent unadjusted wholesale price increase this month was the largest since a 0.7 per cent advance last January. After season adjustment, the increase was only 0.4 per cent, matching the seasonally adjusted jump last September.

The BLS report on wholesale prices was bad news for the Nixon administration, which has been claiming it has turned the corner on inflation and rising prices. Wholesale price increases usually point to higher consumer prices, beginning almost immediately for some commodities.

In a companion development, the government's composite index of leading business indicators increased by 1.4 per cent in December, reflecting the end of the auto strike but also indicating the troubled economy might be on the road to recovery.

Crewman Reports On Radar

By MARY LEYDECKER

SAN FRANCISCO — A crewman on one of the two tankers involved in the big oil spill last week said today the other vessel must have been on the wrong side of the channel when the ships collided in the Golden Gate.

Jack R. Tetard, chief mate of the Arizona Standard, testified at a Coast Guard inquiry he was manning the vessel's radar before the crash occurred in foggy darkness on Jan. 18.

Tetard, taking the witness stand in the third day of testimony before three Coast Guard hearing officers, said he last observed the Oregon Standard, the other vessel involved in the crash, just before it passed under the Golden Gate Bridge.

When last observed, he said, the outbound Oregon Standard was on a course parallel to the inbound Arizona.

"After you lost the Oregon Standard on the radar, what did you plan to do?" Capt. Joseph E. Gould, presiding officer of the hearing board, asked Tetard.

"I planned to stay on my side of the channel — the south side," he said.

Asked to explain how the collision could have occurred, Tetard slowly but firmly responded, "According to my best knowledge, we were on our side of the channel and she (the Oregon Standard) must have been south of center."

Yesterday, the Arizona's captain stuck by his guns to say that he had helped avert an even greater disaster.

Capt. Harry H. Parnell admitted at the inquiry, however, that he should "have anticipated losing a sister ship, the Oregon Standard, in a radar blurring caused by the Golden Gate Bridge.

He insisted, however, that — after sighting the Oregon Standard's red light 200 to 330 yards away — he had done the right thing by turning the Arizona hard to the left in order to take the collision on the Arizona's bow.

Otherwise, Parnell said, the Arizona's engine room might have been hit and the ship sunk with loss of life. "Oil might have been leaking for 100 years," he added.

The captain, looking as if he hadn't had a night's sleep since the disaster which spilled thousands of gallons of oil into the bay and ocean, testified that he was primarily concerned with his own ship.

But he said that in the seconds before collision, he did consider damage to the Oregon Standard. By ordering the hard turn to the left — it was not clear from testimony whether there was time to carry out his order — he was also, he said, trying to do the least damage to

'No Ground Troops In Cambodia' Despite Reports Of Their Use

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird assured Congress today that American ground forces "will not be introduced" in Cambodia and that the Cambodians understood this.

Laird made the assertion, in a statement to the Senate Armed Services Committee, despite pictorial evidence that there have been American soldiers on the ground in Cambodia very recently.

"In essence," he said, "the President has said repeatedly we are not going to retreat from the responsibilities of leadership in the world."

But while not retreating, the Secretary said the administration "continues to pursue negotiations vigorously in Paris."

"A negotiated settlement would be the quickest way to end the war, but I must, unfortunately, report that a negotiated settlement does not appear in sight."

Laird said he had made clear that while reduction of ground forces continued in Indochina "we will take whatever actions are necessary and appropriate —in compliance, of course, with congressional actions—to hasten the end of U.S. involvement in the fighting with a minimum loss of American lives.

"The Cambodians understand that American ground combat forces and American advisers will not be introduced into their country. Our objective for the future is that the United States will not need to rely on its own manpower to achieve the objective of self-determination for our friends and allies in Asia and to thwart Communist aggression in that part of the world."

Despite the congressional ban on sending U. S. advisers or ground troops into Cambodia, the Nixon administration now has acknowledged that some

Standard Sued; A Cleanup Case

A veterinarian with offices in San Rafael and two other persons filed suit in San Francisco yesterday for $12.5 million in damages against Standard Oil Co.

The class-action suit was filed in superior court in behalf of volunteers who have rescued birds and mopped up after an oil spill triggered by a collision Jan. 18 between two Standard tankers in the Golden Gate.

Among the plaintiffs is Dr. Tom Mehlhoff of San Rafael with offices at the East San Rafael Veterinary Clinic. The others suing are Suzanne Schettler, a Palo Alto photographer and Dr. Marilyn Ting, a San Francisco physician.

The suit asks $2.5 million for work done by volunteers, $1 million to cover their medical costs and punitive damages.

Attorney Gary J. Near, who filed the suit, said his clients have a "decided willingness" to contribute any financial recovery to conservation causes.

Near estimated that up to 5,000 volunteers have taken part in the cleanup and rescue operation, performing a "vital service."

"To think that these people worked for Standard Oil for free runs against the grain of usual concepts in this country," Near said. "Standard Oil has acknowledged its responsibility and duty to clean up."

Near is an attorney for the Friends of the Earth, a conservation organization, but it is not involved in the suit.

A Standard Oil spokesman declined comment on the suit until company attorneys have had a chance to study it.

The company already has been hit with a $3.5 billion class action in behalf of all

Judge Orders Fines, Jailings In Rioting

Three union officials, including the president of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, were fined and ordered to jail yesterday in connection with the riotous demonstration at the Independent-Journal last Valentine's Day.

Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court found the three officials, as well as the typographical union itself, guilty of contempt of court for violating his injunction limiting picketing and forbidding violence in connection with the union's year-old strike against the I-J.

The union; its president, Leon Olson and Jack Goldberger, president of Periodical Drivers and Helpers Local 921 were given maximum fines of $1,500 each. Olson and Goldberger were sentenced to the maximum 15 days in jail.

They and Donald H. Abrams, a typographical union vice president, were found in contempt for three specific violations of the injunction which was issued last Jan. 28.

Abrams was fined $750 and sentenced to 15 days in jail.

Keating's action came on a petition filed last Feb. 17 by I-J attorneys charging the Valentine's Day demonstration violated the judge's injunction.

The I-J petition charged that

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Berlin Interference

BERLIN (UPI)—The East Germans for the third time in a month interfered with traffic for the third time in a month today to protest West German political activity in Berlin.

Communist border guards held up trucks carrying supplies to the city as the Russians told the Western allies they would.

The slowdown began about three hours before the scheduled arrival in West Berlin of West German President Gustav Heinemann in a U.S. Air Force transport, a trip called illegal by the East.

Airline Slowdown

LONDON (UPI) —A long-simmering pay dispute at London's Heathrow airport brought British European Airways (BEA) to a virtual standstill today and threatened to spread to British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC).

A spokesman for BEA, one of Europe's busiest carrying 14,000 passengers daily, said today the only service operating during the day would be inside Germany.

BOTH BEA and BOAC are state-run airlines. Flights of both airlines have suffered daily delays since 6,000 airport workers began a go-slow and overtime ban Dec. 14 to back demands for a 12.5 per cent raise. The airlines have offered 4.5 per cent.

Moscow Incident

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet plainclothesmen today punched and pushed an American newsman as he sought to meet a Russian on a busy Moscow street corner, the newsman said today.

It was the second such incident in the Soviet capital in four days.

James R. Peipert of the Associated Press said the men — apparently secret police agents —did not injure him or the man he had gone to meet. But they shoved, kicked and punched them, and knocked Peipert's eyeglasses to the ground, smashing one lens.

Peipert said the incident occurred shortly after midnight on Moscow's ultra-modern Kalinin Prospekt about a half block from the U.S. Embassy. He said he drove there to meet a Russian news source, keeping an appointment made by telephone and apparently monitored by secret police agents.

Ugandan Threat

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI)—Uganda's new military leader said today he had intelligence reports that troops from neighboring Tanzania, led by ousted President Milton Obote, were preparing to attack Uganda.

"I am not afraid,' said Maj. Gen. Idi Amin, who seized power from Obote in a coup Monday.

"I have just received intelligence reports that Tanzanian troops are preparing with modern (Communist) Chinese weapons requested by Dr. Milton Obote to come to attack Uganda," Amin said.

Steel Profit Drop

NEW YORK (UPI)—U.S. Steel Corp. says the 10-week long General Motors strike was the big factor in its profits dropping by $69.7 million compared with 1969.

Despite a slight gain in sales, the steel company said Tuesday its net income for 1970 amounted to $147.5 million, compared with $217.2 million the year before—a drop of 32 per cent.

Profits in the last three months of the year, the fourth quarter, dropped to $39 million from $66,322,000 in the same period in 1969. Steel shipments also declined from 22.4 million tons in 1969 to 21 million last year.

In addition to the General Motors strike, the nation's largest steel firm blamed the general economic decline in the nation and rising imports for its losses.

Credit Card Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Another worry has been removed from the consumer: the threat of financial loss through lost or stolen credit cards.

Under an amendment to the Truth in Lending Act, effective this week, no credit card holder may be held liable for more than $50 in unauthorized purchases made by someone using his lost or stolen credit card.

The new rules also require all credit cards within a year to bear some sort of identification. The law suggests a photograph, a signature, a thumbprint or electronic verification through coded magnetic symbols.

Intelsat 4 Up

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Intelsat 4 drifted toward a permanent orbit over the Atlantic Ocean today where it will operate as the world's most powerful commercial communications satellite.

The spacecraft was kicked into an "essentially synchronous orbit" late Tuesday night as it reached its third apogee, a maneuver which originally had been planned for this morning at the height of its elliptical orbit some 22,300 miles above Earth.

But the Communications Satellite Corp. (Comsat) said "an assessment of telementry information indicated it more appropriate to fire the apogee motor on the third apogee rather than the planned fourtt..."

Comsat said Intelsat 4 was in orbt at approximately 123 degrees east longitude and drifting toward its intended orbit at 24.5 degrees west.

Postal Strike Push

LONDON (UPI) – Workers staging the first postal and telecommunications strike in British history began their second week away from work today with a fresh injection of money from fellow unionists. Strike leaders centered attention on hurting the nation's businessmen.

Stanley Rosser, president of the Postal Engineering Union which is not on strike, delivered $24,000 to headquarters of striking mail carriers, switchboard and telegraph operators union as assistance to members suffering hardships in their walkout.

Nun Jailed

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI)—Smiling, Sister Jogues Egan briefly embraced and kissed her lawyer Tuesday night before going to jail for up to 18 months because she refused to answer questions by a federal grand jury investigating an alleged plot to kidnap a presidential adviser.

Despite full immunity from prosecution, the 52-year-old Roman Catholic New York City nun was remanded to York County jail by U. S. District Judge R. Dixon Herman for civil contempt for refusing to answer about 70 questions regarding her relationship with six persons accused of conspiracy in an alleged antiwar plot.

The six, including the Rev. Philip F. Berrigan, were indicted on charges of conspiring to bomb federal installations in Washington and to kidnap Henry A. Kissicger, President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser, to protest the Indochina war

Nixon State Dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President and Mrs. Nixon staged a state dinner for Prince Juan Carlos of Spain Tuesday night, the first time a member of the royal family of Spain has ever been entertained in the White House.

The prince, handpicked successor of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, also met with Nixon for an hour during the day to discuss trade and defense relations between the United States and Spain.

Juan Carlos and his wife, Princess Sophia, are on a two-day state visit to Washington. They also will visit San Diego and Houston, and will go to Cape Kennedy, Fla., to watch Sunday's scheduled launch of Apollo 14.

Nixon 'Distorts Cambodian Ban'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield says the Nixon administration has distorted the meaning of legislation forbidding the use of U.S. ground troops in Cambodia.

The result is that the administration has violated the spirit if not the letter of the law, Mansfield said.

Mansfield said Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird "seems to indicate that what is being done in Cambodia is in accord with the Cooper-Church Amendment, which I think is contrary to the fact."

Mansfield made the statement in response to a question in a television interview about the use of close U.S. air support for Cambodian forces and the use of American "instructors" for Cambodian troops.

"I think that the intention (of the law) has been distorted," he said.

The Cooper-Church Amendment, passed Dec. 29, bars the use of funds for U.S. ground combat troops or advisers in Cambodia.

However, the amendment did not use the word "instructors," and Pentagon and high administration officials have since said they do not interpret the law as banning the use of U.S. "instructors" to train Cambodian troops.

These same officials have said the law does not ban the use of funds for air support of any kind in Cambodia.

Mansfield was interviewed by news correspondents on an Educational Television Network show, parts of which were broadcast later on commercial networks, arranged as a Democratic response to President Nixon's State of the Union address last week.

Mansfield said he foresaw no congressional move to deal with the administration's interpretation of Cooper-Church, but he promised to keep pressure on the administration to abide by Congress' wishes to wind down the war quickly.

"The time has come to work harder to convince the President to speed up the withdrawal," he said.

Mansfield said that hearings scheduled by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would serve to "show these people downtown — in the executive branch of government —that these things are not going unnoticed."

Another Boast For California

The state Agriculture Department boasted Tuesday that the Golden State's average cow produced 11,521 pounds of milk last year to lead the nation. This was 2,363 pounds above the national average.

In fact, the agency said, California has been the national leader the last 40 years in milk production.

And California milk is a bargain, the department said.

In San Francisco, a half gallon is sold for 54 cents in retail stores while the Los Angeles price is 52 cents. Officials said these were among the lowest in the nation.

Beatification Nearer For John

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—The late Pope John XXIII took another step toward possible sainthood Tuesday when a Venice Roman Catholic church court completed a preliminary investigation into his beatification cause.

Church sources said it still was likely to take decades before "Good Pope John," who died in 1963, is beatified — proclaimed a blessed of the church.

The Patriarch of Venice, Msgr. Albino Luciani, signed the court's secret findings in the presence of bishops from the Venetian region in the crowded church of St. Moses Tuesday.

Formal Nod On Interior Chief Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Former Rep. Rogers C. B. Morton R-Md., whose nomination to become secretary of the Interior easily won committee approval, apparently will make it through the full Senate just as easily this week.

The Senate Interior Committee Tuesday recommended confirmation of Morton after deliberating just 10 minutes following two days of public hearings.

Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said he would move for Morton's Senate confirmation today or Thursday. Jackson said he expected no opposition.

During two days of hearings, Morton received only polite questioning and no opposition from any committee member.

The only sour note came from conservation groups who said Morton had done nothing to distinguish himself in the environmental protection field and in fact had supported programs and plans that would harm the environment.

Morton, former Republican national chairman, was picked by President Nixon to succeed Walter J. Hickel, fired by Nixon in November.

During his final day of hearings, Morton assured the committee he owned no stocks or bonds that would present a conflict of interest with his duties as head of the Interior Department.

He also promised to recommend heavy penalties if oil companies damage Alaska's Arctic areas with a pipeline to be built to carry oil 400 miles from northern slope oil fields to southern seaports.

He said he would see that to protect the delicate Alaskan permafrost, safeguards were imposed in constructing the pipeline, including monitoring of pipeline development, construction and operation, and taking the same precautions with the road that is to be constructed beside it.

Morton also:

—Promised a program of "Indianization" to give Indians more participation in government affairs affecting them.

—Said he favored extending the voting franchise to American citizens living in U.S. territories or in associated jurisdictions.

—Pledged to support measures to control overuse of national parks and campgrounds, strong laws to require restoration of land ravaged by strip mining.

vored a Colonel Sanders outlet in Mill Valley.

"You just changed Michael's mind," said Chairman Louis H. Baar and Supervisor Michael Wornum did vote for the franchise.

The representative of Southern Marin on the board said he was at first inclined to go along with the Mill Valley City Council since it was "a freak of chance" that C's Drive-in is not in Mill Valley.

However, he said he changed his mind because the city council had approved two new drive-in restaurants in the past year, one only a block and a half from C's.

"I just don't see how in all conscience that I can vote against something that is wanted and needed by the people." he said.

Wornum, an architect, told Claxon, "Your product is fine, but your architecture is lousy."

In his motion to approve the use permit, Wornum tried to give power to veto the building's design to Mill Valley, but Richard V. Godino, assistant county counsel, said such abdication of authority would be illegal.

Godino said the final decision on the architecture of the building must rest with the county.

Although no design was offered yesterday, supervisors made it clear they won't accept the standard red and white structure with a chicken bucket rotating at the top of a tall pole and with the colonel's statue grinning in the window.

Wornum called it some of the worst architecture in America and Arnold M. Baptiste said, "I'm just sorry we didn't hold out like Mill Valley did."

Six Mill Valley residents were not as concerned about the design as they were about getting a Colonel Sanders outlet closer than San Rafael.

Mrs. Charles Zuffinetti of 9 Leyton Court said, "My husband, he is crazy about Colonel Sanders's chicken."

Others argued that the franchise would replace a hangout and provide variety from the string of hamburger drive-ins along Miller Avenue.

Arguing against the proposed use of the lot were Mrs. R. C. Mountjoy, a member of the architectural advisory committee and Robert E. Burton, chairman of the Mill Valley Planning Commission.

Burton, who had appealed staff approval of the use permit to the planning commission, argued that the Mill Valley master plan does not envision commercial use of the site.

Therefore, if the site were in Mill Valley proper, "this use permit would have been denied," Burton said.

The chairman of the architectural advisory committee, Kalvin Platt, wrote the board claiming there would be traffic congestion during commute hours, noise and litter, and the "corporate image building."

Claxon countered with figures he claimed proved there would be no traffic problem. He said the company would be willing to alter its design — a step it refused to take in the past.

Noise and litter would be reduced in comparison with the existing use, he said.

Supervisor John F. McInnis noted that the San Rafael branch seems to be neatly kept. During peak traffic hours in the afternoon, he said, it does not add to the congestion.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni said the lot has been commercially zoned since 1948 so the use would be consistent with past use.

Baar, summing up, said, "I think the people are saying that they want it there."

ORDER

union officials urged thousands to come to San Rafael for a demonstration and that Goldberger had even warned there might be violence at the rally.

Furthermore, the I-J said that union members passed out handbills at colleges encouraging students to come to the demonstration.

During an early morning assault on the building, windows were broken and rocks, bolts, bottles and boards were thrown, and an I-J delivery truck was set afire.

After police arrived and circled the building, the demonstrators still continued to hurl objects at officers and refused repeatedly to disperse, the I-J said.

Earlier this month, a Solano County Superior Court jury found six men, including John J. DeMartini, a vice-president of the typographical union, guilty of a total of 18 criminal charges stemming from the Valentine's Day riot.

Seventeen persons, including three policemen were injured.

Keating ruled yesterday that the union and men had "engaged in combination and in concerted activity with each other and with others to violate the preliminary injunction."

The sections of the injunction violated, Keating said, were those limiting picketing at the I-J; preventing violence or threats of violence to the paper, its employees or customers, and preventing damage or destruction of I-J property or property of I-J employees.

Keating's order, which was issued in brief form yesterday, will be superseded by a formal order prepared by I-J attorneys. The formal order, on which a hearing will be held before it is signed by the judge, will specify when the fines are to be paid and the jail terms served.

Gary T. Giacomini, an I-J attorney, said the formal order would probably be submitted to the judge Friday.

Keating cleared six other organizations and individuals whom I-J attorneys had also charged were in contempt.

They are: Goldberger's drivers union; George Duncan, ITU international representative; DeMartini; Al Vergez, an officer of the drivers union; San Francisco and Marin County Central labor councils.

Keating's ruling was the second contempt order against the union in a week.

Last Friday, Judge William T. Sweigert of U.S. District Court in San Francisco, fined the typographical union and two teamsters unions $25,000 each for violating his orders against illegal secondary boycott activity aimed at I-J advertisers.

Abrams and two teamster officials were placed on a year's probation by Sweigert who found them guilty of criminal contempt.

Four Fire Departments Sign Pact

Four fire departments have signed contracts with an Oakland firm which will prepare a study of fire department consolidation in Southern Marin, Carl H. Modell, chairman of the consolidation commission, announced today.

The four agencies participating are the Sausalito and Mill Valley departments, the Tamalpais Fire Protection District and the Marin County Fire Department (for Marin City and the Panoramic Highway areas.)

Modell said the firm of Gage, Babcock and Associates hope to complete the study and come up in June or July with "the most effective and best possible plan" to merge the fire agencies.

He said the consultants will survey fire protection facilities in Southern Marin and study consolidations in other areas and their effect on fire service and costs.

The company will also develop alternative plans for consolidation and a master plan for changes and additions to the current fire stations.

An estimate of the total cost of consolidation will be provided, as will a study of manpower requirements and an organizational plan for the new consolidated fire department, according to Modell.

PRICES

Commerce Department, is a statistical analysis of eight business indicators which usually point the way to future patterns in the economy.

The statistics bureau said the farm products index jump resulted largely from higher prices for fresh and dried vegetables and cattle. Live poultry and grain prices also went up, but prices for hogs, eggs and fresh fruit were down.

Prices of processed foods and fees advanced 1.1iper cent after three months of declines. The bureau said the increase resulted mainly from substantial price increases for meats and processed poultry.

Almost all major industrial commodity groups registered price increases, especially motor vehicle and parts, lumber and wood products, iron and steel scrap, furniture, floor coverings, glassware and footwear.

Trio Files Giant Standard Oil Suit

property owners and boat owners affected by the spill. The company has announced a telephone number (894-3027) for persons wanting to make property damage claims.

Standard Oil and the Coast Guard reported very little oil left from the nine-day-old spill. Nearly three-fourths of the 800,000 gallons of goo that was lost has been recovered, the company said.

Despite Standard's reduction in cleanup operations, the Marin Ecology Center in Mill Valley said there was still a need for volunteers "no matter what Standard Oil says."

The Coast Guard theorized the remaining oil may have emulsified with seawater in subsurface Pacific Ocean currents, but Standard said it has been unable to find any underwater oil.

Greg Hewlett, a teacher aid at Bolinas School taking part in attempts to string a new boom across the lagoon entrance, reported today workers hoped to complete installation of the device by tomorrow.

He said Standard Oil, which previously had backed out of the operation, agreed to return with needed equipment and supplies as a result of a meeting among volunteers, a Standard Oil representative and county officials in West Marin last night.

Pierre W. Joske, county parks and recreation director, told the Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday the battle to save the lagoon, a wildlife sanctuary, was far from over.

He said he saw more oil in the lagoon yesterday than before and urged the county to take over the cleanup operation. But the supervisors praised Standard Oil's mop-up efforts and said they would leave the job up to the company, with county officials keeping watch.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, yesterday toured the huge bird treatment center at the San Francisco zoo, where fowl plucked from oily waters are being cared for. Muskie held a bird in his hands and called the oil spill "a political issue."

Also yesterday, a task force of several federal and state agencies began a survey of affected areas to assure that "all public interests" are served in the cleanup, and Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, introduced in Sacramento a bill to permit closing of navigable waters during fog, much as airports are shut down.

LETTER

"Our complaints are as follows:

"1. Major General Putnam, First Cavalry Division commander, has forced us to close our enlisted men's club. Our club was closed because it sold beer and soft drinks. The proceeds from the club paid for what little entertainment we get and was spent only after approval of the club board of directors.

"2. We are not allowed to have alcoholic beverages of any kind. Other divisions have clubs that sell mixed drinks to their men and allow liquor in the billets. The First Cavalry Division is dry. With the unbelievable drug absue problem in Vietnam I cannot understand why the men here have to fight prohibition. Drugs are cheap and easy to get and the inability to have alcohol is in all likelihood going to turn many men to marijuana and even heroin.

"3. We are at all times restricted to the company compound. Other units allow the enlisted men to go into major villages and cities to unwind, but not the First Cavalry Division. We are allowed minimum contact with the Vietnamese people. We are allowed no cultural benefit.

"4. Sanitary conditions are deplorable. The dining area and billets we sleep in are infested with rats. The rats carry disease everywhere. Major General Putnam seems more concerned with our sobriety than our health because there is only minimal effort to control the rats. They are in our eating and sleeping areas and very often bite us while we sleep in our bunks.

"5. The food is so bad that men steal "C" rations rather than eat in the mess hall. Many men have become ill after eating in the mess hall. The food is very poor in quality and short in quantity.

"6. There is total and complete lack of privacy at all times, irregardless (sic) of whether materials are available to build rooms or not. Other units allow their men to have rooms but not the First Cavalry Division. A man can't even cry out his loneliness or fear without being humiliated in front of his friends.

"These may seem like trivial complaints to people living in the hygienic, orderly world of America, but to the men here they are real and important . . . Why can't the men of the First Cavalry Division, nicknamed the 'First Team' because it is America's finest defense force, be treated with the respect, trust and understanding that other divisions receive with lesser merits? Why do the men of the first team have to be treated like animals kept in a cage?"

the other ship, also owned by Standard Oil.

Parnell said he had brought his ship through the Golden Gate perhaps 400 times. He did not deny awareness of the "merging" effect the big bridge has on radar images, an effect which canceled out the other ship's image on the screen.

A veteran of about 30 years at sea, Parnell said that after that image vanished, he had simply relied on his belief that the other ship was going to clear the bridge before his own shipped passed through in the dense fog.

Chief Mate Tetard, another longtime sailor who first went to sea in 1942, told how he had earlier followed the course of the Oregon Standard on the Arizona's radar, but then more or less gave up trying to locate it because he had "other problems."

Tetard worked with painful deliberation recreating the drawing of charts for the three Coast Guard officers seeking the cause of the crash. The task of redrawing the charts took so long that a recess was finally called.

In answer to questions from hearing officer Cmdr. Forrest E. Stewart, a lawyer who had conducted many Coast Guard investigations, Tetard admitted that he never tried to estimate the speed of the Oregon Standard.

"I assumed she was going the same speed we were," he said, referring to the 10-knot speed which Captain Parnell has said the Arizona Standard was maintaining in the heavy fog and darkness.

Tetard also testified that after he lost the Oregon Standard on his radar he busied himself with "directing our own course." He said he felt "it was vital" that the Arizona stay on "our own side of the bridge" — that is to the south end.

Like his captain, the first mate reacted to a call that there was a "red light" off the bow and looked out a port hole to find the sister ship within a few hundred yards.

"I don't think we were under the bridge yet," Tetard said about the point of collision.

Parnell had earlier testified that the point of impact was about 700 yards southwest of the center of the bridge.

The captain also said that his first concern was for fire when the collision occurred and that after he sounded the general alarm aboard his ship, his crew "responded well." Although the men quickly gathered fire extinguishing equipment, the vapors coming from the other ship turned out to be only from ruptured steam lines, he said.

There was a brief flurry yesterday in the courtroom in the federal building when two marshals ejected a television crew from Channel 7 because they had violated an order not to film while witnesses were testifying.

Gould had ordered that they not be allowed into the courtroom again after live portions of testimony were shown on television last night.

Bicycle Theft Suspect Booked

Michael A. Tournahu, 18, of 1217 Fourth Street, Novato, was arrested by Novato police at his home yesterday on suspicion of possession of stolen property.

Police said Tournahu had two bicycles, valued at $210, which where stolen in Novato earlier this month.

He was booked at Marin County Jail under $1,250 bail and scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court today.

types of military personnel might soon be dispatched there.

In the first instance, military equipment delivery teams will be sent from Saigon to Cambodia to turn over various types of weapons to the Cambodians.

Defense Department press officer Jerry Friedheim outlined for newsmen Tuesday the functions of the delivery teams and said they might also make sure Cambodian forces know how to operate the equipment they are receiving.

Military specialists, however, insisted that this role was not that of an "adviser". In the strict definition of that term, an adviser actually accompanies local troops into combat and might become involved directly in hostilities, they said.

It was through the initial dispatching of "advisers" under President John F. Kennedy that the United States found itself slowly increasing its forces in South Vietnam.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers is expected to explain U.S. policy in Cambodia in greater detail when he appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday.

Meanwhile, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler repeated that administration policy remains in concert with the Cooper-Church amendment, passed by Congress late last year, which forbids the introduction of U.S. ground combat troops or advisers into Cambodia.

In a related development:

—The Pentagon said it "appears" that 15 to 20 U.S. personnel in civilian clothes were at the Phnom Penh airport to pick up a damaged helicopter. CBS reported Tuesday night that one of its film crews accidentally encountered the men, who it said were carrying weapons and wearing combat boots, but were dressed in "civies."

State Department officials said the activities of military delivery teams were being established by the Defense Department, the State Department, the U.S. Pacific Command and the U.S. Embassy in Phnom Penh.

State Department officials reported Emory C. Swank, the U.S. ambassador in Phnom Penh, was exercising his influence towards restricting the activities of the delivery teams which will be arriving from Saigon.

FINISHING TOUCHES

Fireman Larry Salarpi (left) and Charles Ralston of the Corte Madera Fire Department gauge the pressure during an acceptance check of a newly installed hydrant on Casa Buena Drive. The hydrant, installed last week near Marin Joe's Restaurant in the recently annexed Meadowsweet Drive area, reportedly will reduce fire insurance premiums for property owners by about 50 per cent.

Northgate Park Unit Is Approved

The San Rafael Planning Commission last night approved plans for a 14,465 square-foot commercial building in the Northgate Industrial Park for Ronald Antonioli.

Andre Bertauche of Novato, owner of property across from the proposed building site at 128-134 Carlos Drive, objected, claiming insufficient parking in the industrial park now.

The planning commission then instructed Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner to draw up some policy on future industrial parks so that they would have community parking and open spaces. No date was set on presenting the policy to the commission.

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

APARTMENTS — Approved plans for a 22-unit apartment building at 1428 Mission Avenue for Roland Johnson. These identical plans had been approved in 1969 but the approval expired before construction.

OFFICE BUILDING — Approved plans for a 7,200-square-foot, two-story office building at 818 Fifth Avenue for Robert H. Greene.

SCHOOL — Postponed until its Feb. 8 meeting a use permit for a pre-school school at the Methodist Church at 9 Ross Valley Drive.

DUPLEX — Approved Mark Johnson's converting a single-family residence at 623 B Street into a duplex.

RENEWALS — Renewed for one year, use permits for the construction yard of Holiday Magic at 2155 Francisco Boulevard and storage area for Quin Ongaro at 1625 Francisco Boulevard.

LOT SPLIT — Approved a lot split at 1747 Lincoln Avenue for Carlo Gnemmi. The upper 8,947 lot on Prospect Drive would be for a single-family dwelling and the lower 35,605 square feet on Lincoln Avenue would be used for multiple family development.

SETBACKS — Approved a setback within 13 feet where 25 feet is required for Peter C. Haywood at 208 Bret Harte Road, and 20.5 foot setbacks for five lots on Esmeyer Drive for Alameda Homes Corp.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned until 7:30 p.m. next Monday to take up the housing element in the general plan.

Pepperland Wins Year's Use Permit

Pepparland, San Rafael's rock concert hall, was granted a year's use permit last night by the San Rafael Planning Commission.

The commission granted the permit by a 5-1 vote with commissioner James Dougan against. The permit has a list of attached conditions for the property at 751 Francisco Boulevard.

The use permit may be appealed by anyone within five days, or until 5 p.m. Friday, said Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner. It would then have to go before the city council, he said.

Among the conditions of the permit are: curbs, gutter and sidewalk be installed on Francisco Boulevard; a limit of 3,000 persons in the building at one time; an overhead sprinklar system be installed; a largar airicirculating system be added and more adequate exits made into the building.

Benjamin Blatt, owner of the concession, agreed to the conditions. He said he had 10 to 20 private guards at each performance. He agreed to furnish a guard for Bellach's Furniture Co. at 777 Francisco Boulevard, which complained about patrons of Pepperland using its parking lot before it closed at 9 p.m. Fridays.

"I'm real happy and I want to thank the commission," Blatt said after its action.

The only other complaint was made by W. C. McGarvey, owner of five commercialiproperties and 11 apartments at 32-38 Front Street. He complained of patrons of Pepperland using foul languaga and taking up the parking placas for his apartments.

Although there were about 30 young people in the audience, James Lehman of Lagunitas was the only one who spoke in favor of the permit.

"It is a fine thing for Marin County to have a safe placa for the young people to enjoy their own music," he said.

The commission discussion centered around the cost of having to put in all the improvements if it granted only a six months use permit as recommended by Hotchner.

Hotchner said he had visited the area and counted about 600 cars during a performance. He thought that the area could handle about 1,000 cars.

On his recommendation, the commission granted a variance from the required 88 off-street parking placas based on the square footage of the building. It now has 20, Hotchner reported.

Rights Panel Will Consider Reorganization

Marin Human Rights commissioners will meet tomorrow night to consider a reorganization because the present system of miniboards is not effective.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the San Rafael High School cafeteria.

D. Curt Moody, executive director, said he will propose that an advisory body of 10 citizens be appointed from each of the five supervisorial districts as liaison between various communities and the human rights commission.

Also on tomorrow's agenda is discussion of Bella Aaron's letter of resignation from the commission.

Mrs. Aaron resigned with a blast at her fellow commissioners.

School Association To Hear Naturalist

Naturalist Clerin W. Zumwalt of the Audubon Canyon Ranch will address the Marin County School Boards Association Thursday at 8 p.m. at the county schools office in Corte Madera.

Zumwalt will speak on the "Ecological Environment or Where did all the Birds Go?"

Public Hearing Set On Police Tax Plan

The controversial county service area for police services, a proposal which is bitterly opposed by the unincorporated areas, will get a public hearing before the Marin County Board of Supervisors at 3:30 p.m. on Feb. 23.

Marin County Board of Supervisors yesterday set the time for public hearing and announced that the door into the Civic Center Administration Building will be kept open until 6 p.m. that night. All doors at the Civic Center now close at 5 p.m. for security reasons.

The county service area for police services would include all areas patrolled by the sheriff's department. The cities want the county service area established so that communities that want more sheriff's patrols than they now get will pay for that added service.

At present, taxpayers throughout the county, including city residents who pay for their own city police, share the cost of the sheriff's patrols equally.

Marin County Board of Supervisors also:

ABATEMENT — Ordered the abatement of a dilapidated houseboat owned by Mrs. Ernest Beyer of Novato in Richardson Bay at Gate 6½. Last Oct. 20, supervisors gave Mrs. Beyer 60 days to repair the houseboat to county standards or face demolition.

TRANSIT — Decided to discuss the Golden Gate Bridge District's five proposals for rapid transit at next Tuesday's meeting of the Marin County Transit District board of directors.

REAGAN VETO — Voted 4 to 1 to ask the National Office of Economic Opportunity to overrule Governor Reagan's veto of $2 million in funds to the California Rural Legal Assistance. John F. McInnis, lone dissenter, said he voted "no" only because he did not have enough information to make a decision.

HAMILTON FIELD — Got a recommendation from Benjamin R. Ostlind of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce that the county unite behind a master plan for future full development of Hamilton Field for civilian use. Ostlind warned the air base may close next year, but supervisors said information from Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First Dis- and the Marin Aviation Commission indicate otherwise.

AUDITORIUM — Awarded these contracts for furnishings for the Veterans Memorial Auditorium at the Civic Center: Additional stage rigging to be installed by Stage Craft Industries for $4,400; motorized movable wall to be built between the theater seats and the flat floor area by L. W. Aubry Engineering for $19,578; and a three-year lease on the sound system to be provided by General Electronics for $607.49 per month.

DRYDOCKS — Asked County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney to try again to get the U. S. Army Engineers to remove the huge drydocks that are mired in county waters off Sausalito as a navigation hazard. If the Army will not do it, McInnis said he prefers burning the drydocks at a cost of about $40,000, much less expensive than the $75,000 to $100,000 it would cost to dismantle the drydocks.

FOSTER HOMES — Decided to continue licensing foster homes in Marin after being told by Betty L. Presley, director of county public social services, that the State Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation is unable to run fingerprint checks on foster home applicants because of a cutback in CII personnel. The board decided the need for homes was too great to brook delay and asked Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos to make security checks.

CLAIM — Rejected a claim by George M. Goulart of 4135 Bod- Avenue, Petaluma, who is asking $150,614 damages from the county and $50,614 from Constable Michael McLean. Goulart charges he was falsely arrested Nov. 29, 1969.

TOPOGRAPHIC STUDY — Agreed to pay $630 to Gerson/Overstreet of San Francisco for a topographical study of the plalnned site of the new Marin City Fire Station.) FIRE CONSOLIDATION STUDY — Agreed to contract with Gage-Babcock and Associates to study the feasibility of consolidating Southern Marin fire districts. Cost to the county will be $310.

PARKING MARKS — Passed an ordinance making it punishable by a $25 fine to remove traffic officers' chalk marks from the tires of parked vehicles.

CHILD DEVELOPMENT — Agreed to a contract with the Marin Child Development Center to provide psychiatric day care services to young children at a cost not to exceed $30,000 for the fiscal year.

SOIL TEST — Agreed to spend $1,296 for soil tests by Structural Testing at the site of the girls residence unit of the Marin Juvenile Hall.

POLICE RELATIONS — Authorized a renewal application for funds for the Marin Police-Community Relations Program for fiscal 1971-72.

FLOOD AND MUDSLIDE — Authorized application to the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for subsidized flood and mudslide insurance.

WELFARE STUDY — Put over one week approval of a proposed contract for Corey, Canapary and Galanis to study the effectiveness of the Department of Public Social Services. Although the state is to pay for the study, Supervisor Louis H. Baar said he would oppose it. The board therefore put the matter over to allow department director Betty L. Presley to explain the study.

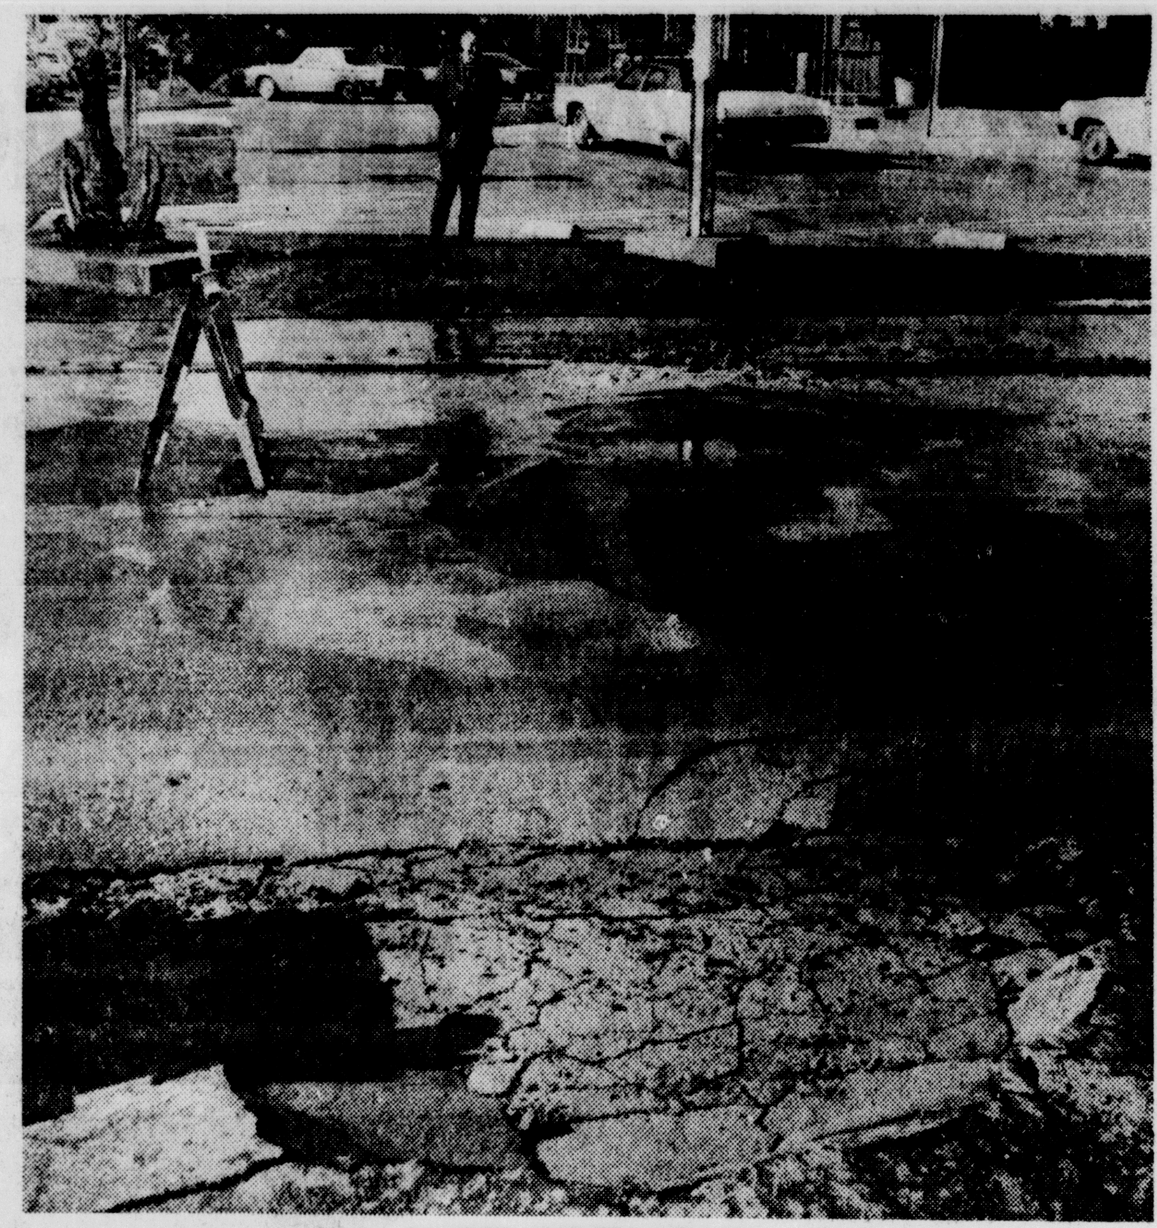
ROSS — Delayed one week approving a right-of-way contract with the Town of Ross to see if the town will commit the money received to auxiliary flood problems. Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni said that since Ross required additional flood relief work as a condition of the Corte Madera Flood Control Project, the right-of-way funds should be used for that added work.

Giant Orange Juice Purchase Is Announced

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Agriculture Department has announced purchase of nearly 2.7 million gallons of frozen concentrated orange juice for school lunch rooms and other child nutrition programs.

The $5.1 million purchase program announced Tuesday was launched before the recent Florida freeze. It had been designed to help growers who have difficulties in marketing this year's big orange crop. Officials said there were no plans "at this time" for further purchases.

The purchases were made from one bidder in California and seven Florida bidders out of a total of 26 suppliers who offered a total of 19.2 million gallons of concentrated juice. A total of 2.7 million actually was purchased.



WET POTHOLE

An unidentified passerby chuckles as he views a buckled section of Medway Road in San Rafael. The road caved in near Mill Street shortly after 1 p.m. yesterday when a water line burst under it. The line was repaired by 5 p.m., according to D. G. Grant, administrative engineer for the Marin Municipal Water District, and he promised the badly damaged street will be temporarily repaired soon. He said no customer lost service as a result of the break.

Phnom Penh Quiet, Solemn For Buddhist Chief's Rites

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—The Cambodian capital remained quiet today for solemn and elaborate funeral services for a Buddhist leader, but fighting was reported 18 miles south of the city where a Cambodian relief force that included 12 and 15-year-old boys was rushing to help.

American and South Vietnamese forces ended a 24-hour Tet lunar New Year truce in neighboring South Vietnam today and military spokesmen said it was violated 37 times by the Communists. A four-day Communist cease-fire remained in effect.

The Cambodian military remained on alert and the civilian population was tense because of the possibility of a Communist offensive during the three-day Chinese New Year, or Tet, starting today. But by nightfall there had been none of the terrorist bomb attacks of the past five days.

The Tet holidays coincide with three days of solemn Buddhist ceremonies culminating in the cremation of Huot Tath, the former chief Cambodian monk. Tanks guarded street corners and scores of blocks were cordoned off as Premier Lon Nol and Maj. Gen. Sisowath Sirikmatak joined the funeral procession.

Just 18 miles to the south two battles were reported near the beleaguered government outpost of Saang.

Reporters near Saang said a Cambodian column moved south today toward the town and that extremely young Cambodians were in the front lines.

There was no word from the high command late today on the progress of a new, large scale Cambodian army operation aimed at clearing areas west and northwest of the capital where Communists have been reported massing for a possible attack on Phnom Penh.

No major engagements were reported during the Tet truce in South Vietnam.

Vote Snafu Puts Man In, Then Out

San Rafael mortgage broker Richard Oesterman was appointed to the Marin County Personnel Commission yesterday morning, then later replaced by incumbent Robert B. McCreadie because a county supervisor said he voted for Oesterman on a misunderstanding.

McCreadie, whose term expired last Friday, was willing to accept reappointment for four more years, until Jan. 22, 1975. Supervisor Michael Wornum said he didn't realize McCreadie was willing to continue on the personnel commission and voted with John F. McInnis and Louis H. Baar for Oesterman during the morning session.

At 5:15 p.m. Wornum asked for reconsideration, explaining his misunderstanding, and voted for McCreadie. This reinstalled McCreadie by 3-to-2 vote, with McInnis and Baar dissenting.

"I didn't realize Mr. McCreadie was being dropped when he wanted to continue on," said Wornum. "I'll apologize to Mr. Oesterman publicly for this."

The supervisors also reappointed Herber C. Leney to the county parks and recreation commission as a representative from the fourth supervisorial district, replacing Lothar Salin, who did not want reappointment. Leney, already on the commission, was a representative from the second supervisorial district.

This leaves two more posts open on the parks and recreation commission. They are the representative from the second district, and another from the third district, where Helen E. Newman retired.

Supervisors voted a letter of commendation to Bella Aaron, who resigned from the Marin Human Rights Commission with a blast at fellow commissioners. She charged that the commission work has been dismal and ineffective, and the commissioners discriminated against her because she tried to do an effective job.

West Marin Density To Be Reviewed

The density of 1.5 dwelling units per acre in West Marin, adopted by the Marin County Board of Supervisors in 1967 by 3-to-2 vote, will be reviewed again sometime after the budget sessions next June for a possible lowering of density. (Another supervisors story, page 1.)

On a motion by Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste, the Marin County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously yesterday to decide at budget time whether the county planning department should review the West Marin density.

Supervisor Michael Wornum declared that a review of West Marin density is in order because two things have happened since the previous board of supervisors set the density of 1.15 units per acre.

Not only has the membership on the board of Supervisors changed but also the regional plan by the Association of Bay Area Governments shows far less density, said Wornum.

Chairman Louis H. Baar wanted to make sure that residents of West Marin are notified about the review of density.

On a suggestion by Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., the supervisors decided to wait until budget time before asking the county planning department to re-study the density.

The West Marin denisty question arose during a discussion of the countywide general plan, which County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell hopes to complete by mid-1972.

Von Gundell said he is working on major components of the countywide general plan, including studies and reports on tourism potential, housing, and environmental qualities.

Supervisors approved an $8,500 outlay to complete those components, if the department of Housing and Urban Development, which helps finance the studies, would extend the completion date from April 5 to Aug. 5.

Supervisors also voted a go-ahead for completion of the Marin City planning program, which is also aided by HUD funds. They asked the county administrator to see whether consulting firms, which will make the $30,000 Marin City study, will wait for payment until after HUD reimbursements arrive.

Two Transit Proposals Are Backed

The Novato Planning Commission has endorsed two of the Golden Gate Bridge District's transit proposals, one for a busway and the other for a dual system, buses and rail transit.

However, commissioners Monday night recommended that the terminal under the busway system be located downtown are, not at Rowland boulevard as proposed, Planning Director Brian W. Mattson reported yesterday.

The staff reported that the dual system would offer the most benefits to Novato, and the busway appeared to be the most feasible economically, so these two systems should be preferred.

The Novato Planning Commission also:

Cyclist Is Treated For Minor Injuries

A 25-year-old Corte Madera man was treated at Marin General Hospital for cuts, scrapes and bruises after his motorcycle overturned on Tennesse Valley Road near Tamalpais Valley, the California Highway Patrol reported yesterday.

Richard S. Adams, of 1449 Buena Vista Avenue, Apt. 5, was injured Monday when his motorcycle failed to make a curve of the road one-half mile south of Shoreline Highway, the patrol said.

Novato Endorses Span's Proposed Transit System

Novato City Council last night endorsed the Golden Gate Bridge District's proposed busway transportation system for the Golden Gate Corridor, San Francisco to Novato.

After a review of the bridge's district's various plans including rapid transit and a combination of rapid transit and busway, the council gave first priority to the busway.

In Marin the busway would run generally along the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Co. right-of-way to a terminal in Novato.

Councilman George C. Quesada said the proposed busway "would be the best interim solution" but wouldn't be the ultimate solution to the transportation problem.

Councilmen agreed that the busway terminal should be in downtown Novato, rather than at Rowland Avenue as shown in the bridge district's plan.

The city planning staff recommended endorsement of both the busway plan and the district's fifth alternate, a combination rapid and busway system.

The dual proposal called for a bus line between San Rafael and San Francisco and a rapid transit System in Richmond, across to San Rafael and then northward to Novato.

The Novato City Council also:

ASSISTANT — Heard that Rodney B. Brown, administrative assistant with the City of Berkeley, will become the city's first administrative assistant Feb. 16 at a salary of $988 a month. There were 61 applicants for the job.

VOLUNTEERS COMMENDED — Commended Novato residents who volunteered to work in the oil spill disaster in San Francisco Bay, and authorized a letter of commendation to Peter K. Pilaski of the A and W Root Beer outlet at the Nave Shopping Center, for delivering 280 hamburgers, 20 gallons of root beer, five gallons of coffee, 20 pounds of french fried potatoes and two gallons of orange drink to volunteers at Bolinas Beach.

NOVATO SQUARE — Approved amendments to the master plan for Novato Square, east of Highway 101, between Grant and DeLong avenues, which require a use permit for all food dispensing businesses. Councilman Joseph D. Gargiulo abstained. Developer Ben R. Ostlind of San Rafael filed a letter of protest saying any change in the plan would deprive property owners of rights.

NOVATO BOULEVARD — Passed an ordinance to annex 65.5 acres north of Novato Boulevard, west of the city limits.

RANCHO VILLAGE — Passed an ordinance rezoning 12.5 acres in Rancho Village Unit 10 from limited agricultural to single family residential.

WILSON AVENUE — Referred back to the city planning commission an ordinance to zone a nine-acre parcel on the east side of Wilson Avenue, opposite Sinaloa Junior High School, for planned residential development with a density of one unit per 20,000 square feet. The vote was 4-1 with Quesada dissenting. A motion to adopt the ordinance was defeated by a 3-2 vote, with Quesada and F. Wayne Sartain for adoption.

BOLLING DRIVE — Approved annexation of 6,000 square feet at the northeast and southeast corner of Bolling and Nave drives to the city.

PARKING LIMIT — Approved a 20-minute parking limit on the south side of Vineyard Road, in front of Sinaloa Junior High School, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily except Sundays and Holidays.

STREET FUNDS — Heard a report from Public Works Director Clifford E. Temps that $60,000 in Marin County urban thoroughfare funds was available for revamping of the Novato Boulevard-Diable Avenue intersection, and authorized application for $70,000 in federal funds.

SIDEWALK — Ordered construction of a sidewalk along the south side Ignacio Boulevard, between Alameda Del Prado and Highway 101, a stretch heavily used by commuters walking to a bus stop.

The term Feudal Ages refers to the years 900-1300.

Master Plan For Big Housing Development Is Given Approval

The Novato City Council last night approved a master plan for development of 528 housing units, townhouses and apartments, northwest of Highway 101 and South Novato Boulevard.

The vote was 4-1 with Councilman George C. Quesada dissenting.

The plan by McKeon Construction Co. is for 204 townhouse units, 324 apartment units, six acres of commercial development and 21.8 acres of open space.

The property was designated in the Novato General Plan as a location for a sub-regional shopping center but the city is now considering a major shopping center in the dowtown area.

The council deleted a condition that access to the southern portion of the development be from Redwood Boulevard rather than South Novato Boulevard.

The developer is bound to provide a school site in the area, if a school is needed there.

The council also was alerted by City Mgr. Charles A. Brown that the Marin CountyiPlanning Commission's recommendation on development at Ignacio Industrial Park could be in contradiction to the city's proposed downtown plan.

The county planners voted Monday that offices, banks and retail stores be permitted on about 30 acres of the 250-acre park, along Bel Marin Keys Boulevard. In contrast, the Novato planning staff has urged that office use be restricted to six acres, contending that extensive office space at the industrial park, would hinder the goal of the city's plan for office use in downtown Novato.

Edwin V. Grundstrom of Soiland and Associates of Bel Marin Keys, the developers, said: "We're not out to kill the downtown plan and we don't think the city is out to kill our industrial park."

The council agreed to adjourn until next Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Novato Community House to discuss the industrial park proposal.

New Structure Wins Approval

Peter B. Haywood may build a house and garage at 100 Geldert Drive in Tiburon, the city's board of adjustments and design review board have decided.

The groups met together Monday and approved the design of the structures and a variance to allow what first was planned as a carport to be built four-and-a-half feet into the required 14-foot front yard setback.

Philemon V. Scott, development administrator, said the board of adjustments established one condition, that Haywood completely enclose the carport to make it a garage.

Additional $2,500 To Linear Fund

Receipt of an additional $2,500 in "after the goal" contributions toward purchase of a linear accelerator for Marin General Hospital was reported today by Mrs. Walter G. Strauss, campaign chairman.

The $50,000 sought in the drive already had been turned over to Marin Hospital District. Ray K. Bolinger, hospital administrator, said the additional $2,500 will reduce the amount to be spent from the hospital's depreciation fund in paying for the cancer treatment device.

Included in the $2,500, said Mrs. Strauss, was a contribution from three young people who turned over their Christmas gift money to the campaign.

Glenn Nichols, 20, and his sisters Leslie, 22, and Lynn, 16, gave $30 they had planned to use for Christmas presents for each other and for their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nichols of 30 Graceland Drive, San Rafael.

Hub Council Delays On Written Discussion Policy

The San Anselmo City Council agreed last night that the public should be allowed to speak on agenda items at council meetings but failed in several attempts to put the policy into writing.

After more than an hour of discussion, councilmen finally decided to strike from the bottom of the evening's agenda a note that discussion was limited to items listed as public hearings.

It was this note, which appeared for the first time on last night's agenda by order of Mayor James F. Reed, that prompted Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro to ask the council to define its policy on public discussion at meetings.

Although in agreement to strike a note reading "Unless an item is listed as a public hearing, the item is for council discussion and/or action," councilmen could come to no consensus on a written policy.

They finally agreed to look at policies at a future meeting.

Councilmen earlier heard several members of the small audience speak against any attempt to halt public discussion. One woman, Cynthia Barrows, said, "It's the duty of the council to listen to the public. Efficiency is not the first consideration at these meetings."

Judy Ainsworth, of 1635 San Anselmo Avenue, representing the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, read a statement criticizing the council for not acting "within the spirit of the law."

"It is our sincere hope," she said, "that if interested citizens of the community wish to speak on any item of interest to them, that the San Anselmo City Council will afford them, for a reasonable period of time, not the privilege, but the right to do so."

Another resident, David E. Bacigalupi Jr., of 56 Alder Avenue, read a list of suggestions on how to streamline meetings and yet retain public participation. His points included starting meetings a half hour earlier, putting items of widest interest high on the agenda, and distributing to audience members a list of pointers on how to speed up their presentations.

He also suggested the councilmen limit their own discussion.

After some parliamentary maneuvering and a few false starts, the council voted unanimously to remove the paragraph from the agenda and adopt a written policy at a later meeting.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

LOT SPLIT — Approved a three-lot subdivision for a parcel at 50 Park Way owned by Otto H. Poehlmann.

CREEK — Declared sewer lines in Sleepy Hollow Creek to be a public nuisance and ordered them abated.

EXTENSION — Gave Geil Davis and Daisy Hatton until March 1 to convert an illegal duplex at 16 Foothill Road to a single residence.

POLICE — Accepted the resignation of Sgt. Richard B. Standridge from the police force and hired Louis Landini as a probationary officer at a monthly salary of $767. The council also authorized an examination to be given for the post of sergeant.

PARKING — Denied a variance to Betty Kaplun to allow a parking space within the required sideyard setback at 19 Carolina Avenue.

RECREATION — Stated its policy not to conduct recreation activities outside the city.

ZONING — Appointed John A. Levo Jr., of 16 Fairview Court, to the citizens committee on zoning.

STREETS — Heard Reed announce a vacancy on the city's streets and traffic committee and ask persons interested in the post to submit their names.

PARK — Invited Ribera and Sue, an Oakland planning firm, to present a proposal to the city council on development of Robson-Harrington Park.

FUND — Heard on first reading an ordinance establishing a fund for capital improvements.

'All Geared To Go' With North Campus But No Funds

"We're all geared up to go" on the north campus "except we don't have any money," Marin Junior College District trustee Theodore C. Wellman said last night.

Wellman and trustees Elizabeth M. Deedy and Donald K. Felt spent considerable time worrying whether delays in state matching funds would upset the district timetable to have the north campus in Novato ready for at least 1,162 students by September 1974. Last night's special meeting was a workshop on the status of plans for the campus.

John A. Grasham, district superintendent-president, warned that California's community colleges had requested $80 million in the 1972-73 state budget, but that the chancellor's office predicted only $30 million will be available. Graham said he had talked to the chancellor's office in Sacramento yesterday but "we have no official response. I'll be calling again."

He explained that the chancellor's office is preparing budget requests for the state Department of Finance. "By April, we'll know whether the chancellor's office will support our request. If they don't, the district is dead for at least another year" on getting the north campus ready, he said.

Mrs. Deedy warned that the state budget could have an adverse effect on voter response to the $16,920,000 bond issue on the April 20 college district ballot, to help finance north campus work.

In other discussion, Dale E. Fleming, district director of planning, reviewed the extensive timetable for north campus plans and outlined proposed space allocations staffing needs.

His report included a mass of data submitted with applications for state funding, but no actual drawings of the future campus.

He said the proposals are based on the concept of creating up to seven "inner colleges" each with up to 750 students.

Central facilities serving all the students should include a library — Fleming called for 4,000 volumes to start, building up to 34,000 volumes — a bookstore, a cafeteria and other items.

He said staffing requirements would be nearly the same whether the campus featured the traditional departments, or the inner college concept.

13 Miners Killed

KLERKSDORP, South Africa (UPI)—An underground fire killed 13 African miners and injured 14 others Tuesday in the Zandpan mine near here.

Mail Rate Hike Vote By Panel

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The board of governors of the new U.S. Postal Service has voted to request increases in mail rates.

Although the exact increases were not spelled out, it is likely it will cost 8 cents to mail a first class letter, beginning probably about mid-May.

The board Tuesday simply authorized the service to propose to the independent five-member Rate Commission a "recommended rate package." But Postmaster General Winton M. Blount has indicated for some time he would ask for a 33 1-3 per cent across-the-board increase.

A spokesman said the rate increase was expected to be submitted next week, which would mean the earliest possible date of implementation would be in mid-May.

FEELING BETTER ALREADY

A surf scoter, rescued from last week's aftermath of oil spillage between two tankers at the entrance to the San Francisco Bay, waddles from its refuge center—a men's room at Marin World near Redwood City. The rest room — standing idle until the oceanographic park opens its season in late March, has provided a warm and quiet atmosphere for oil-soaked birds which so far have survived the disaster.

Forgery Probe Suspect Booked

A 17-year-old San Rafael youth was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall at 11:30 p.m. yesterday on suspicion of forgery, passing checks to defraud and possession of stolen property, police reported today.

Ronald Leigh Lukesh of 1710 Lincoln Avenue, tried to cash a $28 check at Villa Rafael Motel at 1606 Lincoln Avenue, using identification belonging to Christine Mae Potter of 1718 Lincoln Avenue, according to police.

Manager John Stewart Silman of the motel alerted Mrs. Potter when Lukesh tried to cash a check. The youth previously had cashed a $12 check using her identification. She asked to be notified, police reported. She called police who had Lukesh in custody when police arrived, according to reports.

Little Tykes To Get Their Ceremonies

Sixth grade promotion exercises nearly fell by the wayside last night, but the Cotati School District board acceded to the wishes of parents and voted to retain the formal programs.

Teachers and administrators had recommended that graduation ceremonies be dropped and questioned how much the programs really meant to the young children. Parents, however, told the board that their children would appreciate a formal program.

In a survey of parents of children in grades three through six, it was shown that 149 were in favor of commencement exercises, while 123 preferred an informal awards program.

The Cotati School District board also:

ELECTION — Approved a resolution consolidating the April 20 school board election with a special referendum sponsored by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors on whether to lift the current moratorium on mobile homes.

ENROLLMENT — Heard a report that enrollment had increased by 22 students since Jan. 11, the first significant increase of the school year.

TEACHERS — Approved an agreement with Sonoma State College for student teachers.

Bureau To Give Aid To Job Seekers

The Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau is willing to send mailers to its members announcing that students from any Marin school are seeking part-time clerical jobs, according to manager Carroll A. Snyker.

The chamber of commerce Jan. 15 sent out a letter announcing, "Dominican College would appreciate any assistance in obtaining job placements for some of its students."

Snyker said that for the past three or four years the chamber of commerce has sent out similar letters for the College of Marin and will do so for any other school with students qualified for part-time "clerical-type" work.

The Dominican release states, "Many are qualified for special typing and clerical assignments, tutoring, babysitting and similar hourly jobs."

Forest Knolls Man Appeals Hash Case

CHANEA, Crete (UPI)—Five Californians appeared before a higher court today to appeal maximum prison sentences and heavy fines imposed on them six weeks ago for entering Greece with a load of hashish on their private plane.

John R. Moore, 50, Phillip Erwin Amos, 30, Kenneth Connel, 28, all of Sacramento, Calif., and Robert Black, 29, of Forest Knolls Calif., were given 10 years imprisonment, and David Lee Mantell, 30, of San Francisco, nine years jail when a court found them guilty of purchase, possession and transport of 1,325 pounds of Lebanese hashish.

In addition, they were fined a total of $75,900.

All had said they were unaware the drug was on the aircraft, and pleaded not guilty.

They were arrested last August when their plane landed from Lebanon at Heraklion Airport, Crete, after being chased across the eastern Mediterranean by British Royal Air Force planes.

In defense, the five said they were hired to help high political refugees escape from Lebanon. They denied any connection with international drug trafficing gangs, alleged by the prosecution.

The appeal hearing, which could last two days, is attended by the wives of Black and Amos and their children. A consular officer of the American embassy in Athens is also present.

The Americans are being defended by two Greek lawyers.

(The case has other lings to Marin County Sausalito attorney Michael Henry Metzger, 33, is awaiting trial after being arrested Dec. 6 on charges of possessing LSD, cocaine, marijuana and a tear gas weapon in his home.

(An informant in the Metzger case was Gerald N. McDonald, captain of a converted subchaser, who said Metzger had tried to talk him into using his craft to rescue the five Californians from Certan authorities.

Metzger's attorney's however, claimed that McDonald had tried to interest Metzger in the attempt, not the other way around.

Man Pulled From Court In Outburst

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Wesley Allen Johnson was removed from his superior court trial here yesterday after kicking over the defense table and accusing the judge of railroading him.

Johnson, facing four charges stemming from a 1969 holdup attempt and gun fight with police, was ordered to a holding cell by Judge Joseph J. Karesh while jury selection was completed, according to Cyril Weeks, assistant public defender.

Weeks said Johnson was to be readmitted to his trial when the prosecution opened its case this afternoon.

Johnson was ordered from the court after continuously interrupting proceedings to charge he wasn't properly represented and to ask for more time to prepare his case.

Three motions for continuance were denied by Judge Karesh.

The judge termed Johnson's behavior obstreperous and told the defendant he could be found in contempt, gagged and chained if he continued his "constant outbursts."

Johnson, also known as Joe Allen Johnson, is charged with burglary, attempted robbery, being an ex-felon in possession of a firearm and shooting at police.

Sentencing Set On Pot Charge

Alfred Carl Ensminger, 29, of Larkspur, has pleaded guilty in Marin Superior Court to a charge of being in a place where marijuana was used.

He had earlier pleaded innocent to a charge of possessing marijuana, but was allowed to change his plea Monday to the lesser offense.

Ensminger and Ralph Dennis Snow, 24, of San Rafael, who earlier pleaded guilty to being in a place where pot was used, will both be sentenced Feb. 22.

Preliminary School Plan Is Approved

Preliminary plans for an eight-classroom addition to Rancho Cotate High School, Rohnert Park, were approved last night by the Petaluma Board of Education.

The board approved employment of architects Reynolds and Chamberlain for the addition that will also include enlargement of the library and remodeling of the business area to accommodate home economics classes.

Board secretary Marion Beltzner said no cost estimates have yet been made, but that the addition will permit a total enrollment of 1,000 students and should be completed in late spring of 1972.

The plan also includes tennis courts and additional parking facilities and fits in with the master plan of development for the school.

The Petaluma Board of Education also:

DRUGS — Endorsed the efforts of the Third Way House of Petaluma Inc., to work with young people to combat drug abuse problems.

CONTRACTS — Heard a report on how performance contracts have been used in other school districts to solve specific problems and asked for further study on how the plan might be used in Petaluma.

HIRED — Approved employment and set salaries for three teachers including Philip Avila, $4,153; Arthur Banti, $3,900; and Mary Lynn Te Selle, $3,647.

RESIGNATION — Accepted resignation of Mary Elizabeth Hance, who will retire from teaching on July 1.

San Jose Driver Suffers Cut Lip

A 30-year-old San Jose man was to see his own doctor for a cut lower lip after his car hit a utility pole at 12:30 a.m. yesterday, San Rafael police reported.

William Aldret Burns was northbound on Jordan Street east of Lindaro Street when he hit the pole. He told police that he must have dozed off while driving, according to police reports.

Fire Chief Raises Alarming Situation

Sausalito's fire alarm system for street alarm boxes is just about on its last legs and maintenance is becoming increasingly difficult and costly, the Sausalito City Council learned last night.

Fire Chief Charles E. Masten told the council the insulation has worn away on many wires which run through trees in the city's residential areas. "When the rain runs down through the trees, it hits the wires and the system can't carry the signal," the chief said, adding the alarm system has been broken down for the last several days.

Mayor Alexander R. Imlay said the system is necessary for insurance purposes. "We have too much of an investment not to continue it," the mayor said.

Masten said his department plans to renovate the equipment and he hopes to present a proposal to the council at budget time. The chief estimated the improvements will cost between $8,000 and $10,000 if his men do most of the work.

He said he would like to remove most of the boxes from the residential areas and concentrate them in the downtown area where telephones are not so accessible. "In the six years I've been here, we have never had a fire reported from an alarm box that we haven't gotten by phone first," he explained. Taking the boxes out of residential areas would make maintenance much easier, he added.

The Sausalito City Council also:

SALARY INCREASE — Approved a $483 salary increase for Sausalito Youth Center Paul Kozak to allow him to work more hours.

DECK ENLARGEMENT — Approved a variance application from James A. Roman to legalize the enlargement of a rear deck on property at 218 Fourth Street. The deck exceeds the city's maximum coverage limitations.

WORKROOM — Upheld a planning commission decision to grant a variance to Niels-Henrik Carlsen to add a workroom to a house at 308 Third Street, even thought the dwelling is non-conforming.

UNDERGROUND UTILITY DISTRICT — Passed a resolution establishing an underground utility district for Second Street, between Richardson and North streets.

OLD TRUCK — On the recommendation of the fire chief, agreed to give an old 1942 fire truck which the city is phasing out of operation to Synanon in Marshall.

TRANSFER — Agreed to transfer $18,244 earmarked for the widening of Bridgeway from Napa to Johnson streets to a new project to widen the city's main street between Nevada and Ebbtide streets. The city engineer told the Council he felt the northern widening was a higher priority because of the 450-unit Whiskey Springs development being built in that area.

BUS STOP — Asked for a plan for a canopy and lighting for the city's newly-designated Greyhound Bus Stop north of Bay Street. The old stop in front of city hall was discontinued last week when the city banned all parking, including bus parking, on Bridgeway between Princess and Anchor streets.

SUBCOMMITTEE — Appointed Councilmen Robin Sweeny and Stephen A.Fraser to a permanent subcommittee to keep the council informed of what is happening in the Marin Headlands in the way of proposed developments and the like.

Tax Rise, Aid Drop Seen In Red Ink School Budget

Officials of the San Rafael city school system said last night they expected more money from the local taxpayer in fiscal 1971-72 but less in state aid because of the tax rise.

Added up, this still means more income because the gain in tax revenue is predicted to be greater than the loss in funds from Sacramento, officials told the board of education.

However, the board was cautioned in a preliminary budget forecast, the school system also is expected to be more costly to run next fiscal year. Thus, schools probably will wind up poorer at the end of fiscal 1971-72 than at the conclusion of the current fiscal year.

The jumbled financial report was delivered by Supt. John F. Plank and Business Mgr. Charles L. Condrotte.

Condrotte's preliminary figures showed projected 1971-72 income in the elementary district of $5,409,007, up about $250,000 from this fiscal year. In the high school district, income is tentatively projected at $5,392,700, up about $180,000.

Expenditures, however, were put at $5,544,856 in the elementary district and at $5,437,230, both up about $300,000.

The projected deficit spending will mean a total dip into reserves in both districts of about $179,000, meaning a plunge in 1971-72 ending balances to $303,018 in the elementary district and to $202,935 in the high school district, Condrotte's figures showed. Reserve levels, the figures illustrated, already are far below those of recent years.

Condrotte said he had included an employee pay increase of 7 per cent, along with step increases, in the preliminary spending program. The raises would cost $272,730 in the elementary district and $229,908 in the high school district.

Plank said income from assessed valuation probably would jump about 10 per cent in both districts because of the mandatory rise from 23 to 25 per cent in fair market value tabulations for properties.

However, according to the figures, state aid is expected to drop $126,538 in the elementary district and $104,155 in the high school district because of the rise in tax revenue.

In the high school district, Plank said, this will mean a drop from $171 to $125 in state aid per student, rendering the district what Plank called a "basic aid" entity.

"The weather districts receive a minimal amount of support," he said. "The poorer districts get more."

The board withheld thorough analysis of the preliminary figures until future budget sessions.

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ADVISORY — Heard a report from Lewis Pollock, chairman of the citizens advisory committee, on group progress and asked the board to name several replacements for members who couldn't serve.

AUDIT — Accepted the fiscal 1969-70 audit and hoped it could be submitted closer to the end of the fiscal year in the future.

TEXTBOOK — Heard of plans to continue an experimental world history course at San Rafael High School. Teachers of the class, Thomas Truchan and Angelo Douvos, reported student enthusiasm over the new format.

APPOINTMENTS — Named Everette Clark a substitute custodian at $3.11 hourly; Anoosh Mizany, high school science teacher, $9,117 annually; Patricia Stengall, high school English, $11,997 annually, and Mary Warren, high school mathematics, typing and geography, $13,738 annually. All teachers are replacements.

RESIGNATIONS — Accepted the resignations of Fred Hines, San Rafael High School physical education teacher, resigning after 33 years' service; Audren Johnson, San Rafael High School custodian, health reasons; Richard Kelly, San Rafael High School custodian, personal reasons, and granted leave without pay to Doreen Wasson, secretary at Laurel Dell Intermediate School, personal reasons. The board issued a special commendation to Hines.

GIFTS — Accepted gifts of books from Santa Venetia Middle School Parent-Teacher Association; miscellaneous play equipment from the Gallinas Parent-Teacher Association; a rug from Mrs. Harold Ellison; lumber and labor for an art display from Robin Hadley and Alan Gizzi and $150 from the Coleman School Parent-Teacher Association for play equipment.

Snakeless Hawaii Gets Zoo Reptile

HONOLULU (UPI)—Hawaii residents watched in awe today as the island's first legal snake slithered around in his cage and basked in artificial sunlight.

"He's not at all shy," said Honolulu Zoo Director Jack Throp.

Throp, who's been trying to get a snake imported into the zoo for years, was finally successful when the 1970 legislature relented, but only under strict conditions.

Only two non-poisonous, male, unrelated snakes would be allowed.

No snakes are native to the Hawaiian Islands.

Unlike some shy snakes which burrow into the ground, the three-foot-long Red Rat Snake "just likes to be where the sun is," Throp said.

So his cage is lit with a special lamp which imitates the sun.

"He's the most popular exhibit at the zoo right now," Throp said, "and all the people around haven't bothered him a bit."

Petaluma Reception Mild On Transit Plan

The Golden Gate Bridge District's long range transit plan got a mild reception in Petaluma last night with city officials reserving most comment and criticism for the final hearing next Wednesday at San Rafael City Hall.

In response to questions about what the rapid transit link to San Francisco would mean to Petaluma, Robert E. Shields, project manager, said buses would be provided to feed commuters from Santa Rosa and Petaluma to the transit system in Novato.

Petaluma City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer questioned whether the buses would circulate in residential areas, or if the district should plan on building a large parking lot for commuters cars.

Thomas Farrington of Petaluma offered the strongest criticism, saying the plan included on the old technology of trains, buses and ferries and was "not conceptual." "What we're doing is bailing out Marin County and giving us peanuts" he said.

Richard R. Day, of the Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce, protested that his city, the third largest in the county and home of Sonoma State College, had been totally ignored on the plans.

Looking at the plan generally, he said it would make Sonoma County a total bedroom community to San Francisco with no base of its own. Day said the plan would also generate urban sprawl because it would determine growth patterns since the county has no general plan.

Several of the 75 persons at the hearing questioned the possibility of using hydrofoils or hovercraft on the Petaluma River. Shields said consultants had taken a hard look at exotic crafts, but dismissed them because the narrowness of the river would severely limit speed and make the other modes of travel more attractive.

More major battlers of the Civil War were fought in Virginia than in any other state.

Marinwood CSD Eyes Fire Budget

The Marinwood Community Services District last night began consideration of a 1971-72 fire protection budget totaling $99,223, compared to $85,330 this year.

Business Mgr. Genevieve T. Bolding said that, despite the increase, the tax rate would remain at 61 cents because of increased assessed valuation in the district.

Accounting for most of the increase in the proposed budget are 5 per cent cost-of-living raises for the five Marinwood firemen and a possible retirement plan for which $6,300 is budgeted, Mrs. Bolding said.

Early consideration was required because a contract must be signed by March for fire protection in the Upper Lucas Valley area. Mrs.Bolding said the contract the board decided to submit to Upper Lucas Valley is for $33,223.

The community services district will take up the budgets for parks and recreation and administration in June, she said. The two have a total tax rate of 62 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

The board, according to Mrs. Bolding, also favored a sprinkler system at the new workshop at Marin County Juvenile Hall. The community services district is considering taking over fire protection of Juvenile Hall.

The board also voted to leave recreation fees the same this year and to purchase a used electric typewriter for $75.

Stolen Property Suspect Booked

A 20-year-old San Francisco man was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of burglary and receiving stolen property after he was discovered emerging from a Belvedere home about 10:40 a.m.

Belvedere police said Arthur Lee Ward was apprehended at the James A. Mitchell residence on Golden Gate Avenue as he and two other youths emerged from the house carrying about $10,000 in furs. An employee of the Mitchell's held Ward until police arrived, but the other youths escaped.

Ward was held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear this afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

Once-Abducted, Buried Alive Heiress To Wed

MIAMI (UPI)—Heiress Barbara Jane Mackle, who was buried alive in north Georgia woods for more than 80 hours in 1968 while her kidnapers negotiated for $500,000 in ransom, will be married this spring.

Millionaire land developer Robert Mackle of Coral Gables has announced the engagement of his daughter to Stewart Hunt Woodward of Charlotte, N.C., who attended Emory University in Atlanta with Barbara at the time of the kidnaping. No wedding date was set.

Miss Mackle was abducted from a motel room where she was staying with her mother by two persons who put her in a ventilated box and buried her. After Mackle paid the ransom, the kidnapers told FBI agents where to find the girl.

KEEPING ACTIVE — Lucille C. Klieforth knits a pair of socks for her son-in-law while enjoying a sunny day in her garden. Mrs. Klieforth, who retired last month after 20 years with the San Anselmo library, uses the added free time to knit and to care for her garden.

LIBRARIAN RETIRES

Readers Ducking Sexy New Novels

By LARRY MOWELL

San Anselmo library patrons haven't changed much in 20 years. Books, unfortunately, have, according to retired librarian Lucille C. Klieforth.

Mrs. Klieforth, who retired Dec. 31 because she reached the city's mandatory retirement age of 70, has watched the library double its space and grow from 27,000 volumes to more than 50,000.

Despite its growth, she said, the library's clientele remains the same. Most of the people checking out books are middleaged and elderly, just as when she began working as a substitute librarian about 1950, she said.

Men still favor nonfiction, history, travelogues and westerns; women still seek mystery novels and bestsellers; and youngsters still look for science fiction thrillers, she said.

While tastes haven't changed much in San Anselmo, books have, she said. "Authors don't write the good books that they wrote at one time. There is too much sex and all," she said.

"The patrons that I have known for years say they just can't read these books. They just bring them back in a day or two," she said.

Those who hastily return the titillating modern novels are mostly women, she said. Men tend to keep them out longer.

While declining to single out any objectionable works, she was willing to list what readers do approve of: "(John) Steinbeck — you know — like that. These books have always been popular."

Readers are also partial to Nevil Shute, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway and Agatha Christie, she said.

In fact, she said, San Anselmans are rereading their works rather than read some of the current bestsellers.

While San Anselmo readers wish authors would return to the fiction of the past, Mrs. Klieforth wishes she could have continued to work at the library at 110 Tunstead Avenue.

Still energetic, Mrs. Klieforth said she wanted to stay on the job because she enjoyed the work and the people she met during her tenure.

Although she started about 20 years ago, she did not become a full-time employee until 1956. She said she usually worked about 26 hours a week after gaining a full-time designation.

Legally too old to work, Mrs. Kleiforth said she will remain active nevertheless.

She said she regularly dons overalls and works in her garden at 381 Laurel Avenue.

"That is what I am looking forward to. I really relax outside. I like to be outdoors."

When not gardening, she knits and visits with her children, she said.

A daughter, Carol Klieforth is a service representative for Pacific Telephone in San Francisco. Her other daughter, Diane Culler lives in Layton, Utah, and her son, Harold Klieforth Jr. is a meteorologist working for the Desert Research Institute of the University of Nevada.

Mrs. Klieforth, a native San Franciscan, and her husband, Harold, a retired San Quentin guard, moved to San Anselmo from San Francisco in 1933.

Mental Health Center Gets Inspection Nod

The Marin Hospital District board was told last night that a federal inspection team apparently was satisfied with operation of the Marin Community Mental Health Center during recent inspection.

Dr. John S. Guerrant, center director, reported today that he told the board the survey team of the National Institute of Mental Health unofficially advised him it was satisfied with the way federal funds were being used at the center.

The center receives four federal staffing grants which are used to finance partially about 80 per cent of the center's employees. This year's grant totaled about $640,000.

"Their overall impression of the center was quite favorable," Guerrant said adding that an official written report is forthcoming.

He said the team appeared impressed with group therapy programs in both children and adult servies as well as the center's in-service training for its staff and college students.

The team directed some criticism, he said, at the method planned for developing a community master plan of mental health services.

"This is one area of the report we will be quite anxious to read," he said adding that the team expressed some concern that representatives from agencies supplied services be involved in the planning.

Guerrant said he was not sure when the written report would be received from the team's first visit to the center two weeks ago.

The Marin Hospital District Board also:

GIFTS — Accepted two specially designed record players from the hospital volunteers which acquired them from the California State Library for the Blind. The machines were designed to play records of books for persons unable to see or read.

APPOINTMENT — Appointed Dr. Martin Albin, a Greenbrae internist, to the position of assistant chief of staff at Marin General Hospital. Dr. William L. Clark is chief of staff.

COMMITTEES — Appointed board members to the board's six standing committees.

CONTRACT — Referred to Harold F. Riede, attorney for the district, a letter from the Kentfield Fire District asking the hospital board to consider increasing its fire service fee. The hospital currently pays $1 per year.

PHYSICIANS — Extended for one month an agreement with the hospital's emergency room doctors increasing their pay from $5 to $10 per hour. Negotiations on the question of fees are continuing.

Ross Merger On 'Sounding Board'

The proposed $30,000 study for the unification of upper Ross Valley will be discussed at 9 a.m. tomorrow on KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board" program.

Joining moderator Kitty Oppenheimer will be San Anselmo Mayor James Reed, Fairfax Vice-Mayor Cornelis van Vliet, ABAG's senior planner, Frederick Silva, and Mrs. Louis Emis of the San Anselmo Citizens Action Committee.

Questions phoned during the live broadcast will be answered. The program will be repeated on tape Sunday at 10:05 a.m.

Autopsy On Lewis Remains Uncompleted

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The autopsy performed yesterday on Samuel L. Lewis, 74, American patriarch of the Sufireligious sect, showed that he had a "marked swelling of the brain," the San Francisco coroner has announced.

Lewis, formerly of Mill Valley, died last Jan. 15 after an apparent fall in his San Francisco home.

Coroner Henry Turkel reported yesterday that initial study could find no cause for the swelling and that the final determination of the cause of death would depend on laboratory, pathological and toxicological tests.

Permission for the autopsy was granted by a San Francisco superior court judge after Lewis's followers protested the autopsy as in violation of their beliefs.

Woman's Condition Is Listed As Good

A 46-year-old Mill Valley woman was listed in good condition today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital where she was taken Monday after being found unconscious in a room at the Edgewater Inn, Corte Madera.

Officers said Joyce D. Sellers of 477 East Blithedale Avenue at first appeared dead but a slight pulse was noted and the woman was moved to Kaiser where she was treated for an overdose of medicine.

No Roses Cake For Angela

Angela Davis spent her 27th birthday yesterday in her Marin County jail cell, without cake or flowers to mark the day.

Capt. Harvey Teague of the sheriff's office said jail regulations prohibited both cake and flowers.

Teague said arrangements were made last week with Allan Brotsky, one of Miss Davis's attorneys, to handle any flowers sent Miss Davis.

An order for 27 roses was wired from Italy through Burns Florist, 1230 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, but the florist said the order was being returned because of the jail regulations.

Miss Davis is charged, along with San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with the unsuccessful escape attempt last Aug. 7 at the Marin Hall of Justice which left four men, including Judge Harold J. Haley of Superior Court, dead.

Charges On Marijuana Dismissed

Marijuana charges against Mill Valley attorney Mark Susnow and a friend, Susan Gay Pasley, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court.

Smith dismissed the case after the district attorney's office asked for a postponement of a preliminary hearing because it did not have enough evidence to proceed.

The district attorney's problems arose Jan. 14 when Judge E. Warren McGuire of superior court granted a defense motion and quashed the search warrant with which state, county and Mill Valley officers raided Susnow's home and confiscated a half kilo of marijuana.

Judge McGuire ruled the warrant was invalid because of technical irregularities in its preparation.

Fifteen persons were arrested in the Dec. 11 raid, but only Susnow and Miss Pasley were charged, both with possession of marijuana.

The district attorney's office yesterday asked Judge Smith to continue the proceedings against Susnow and Miss Pasley until an appeal of Judge McGuire's action could be made, but Judge Smith dismissed the case.

Theft From Car

A tape deck and stereo tapes, valued at $100, were taken Jan. 8 from a car parked in a College of Marin parking lot, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

Deputies said the car was owned by Kristopher G. O'Conner of 8 East Drive, Mill Valley.

Cyclist Killed In Head-On Crash

A 23-year-old San Rafael man was killed and another man injured last night in a car-motorcycle crash on fogbound Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in the San Geronimo Valley.

Killed was James Leonard Long Jr., the motorcyclist, of 873 Fourth Street, Apt. 5, San Rafael. Injured was Leslie M. Booth, 32, of 60 Frustuck Avenue, Apt. B, Fairfax.

The California Highway Patrol gave this account of the 10:30 p.m. accident:

A compact car driven by John F. Neilson Jr., 47, of Forest Knolls, was eastbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard west of San Geronimo Valley Road behind an unidentified vehicle when Booth's station wagon came up from behind.

Neilson and Booth simultaneously pulled out to pass the other car. Neilson completed his pass but Booth still was in the left lane when, he told officers, he suddenly saw the headlight of a motorcycle in the fog ahead.

He tried to swerve back into the right lane but collided both with Neilson's car and head-on with Long's motorcycle.

Officers said Long probably was killed instantly but was rushed to Marin General Hospital by ambulance where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Booth was treated at the hospital for multiple face cuts, scrapes and bruises.

Long moved to Marin one month ago from Sparks, Nevada. He worked at McDonald's restaurant in San Rafael. Funeral arrangements were pending today at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

The death was the county's second traffic fatality of 1971, the same as at this time last year.

Innocent Plea To Pot Possession

Clayton Duane Blackmore, 39, of Mill Valley has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of possessing marijuana and misdemeanor counts of driving under the influence of drugs and possessing narcotics paraphernalia.

Preliminary hearing was set for March 2.

Blackmore was arrested by the California Highway Patrol after his car was seen weaving on Shoreline Highway Jan. 15.

Hugh Burns Launches A New Career

SACRAMENTO (UPI) Former Democratic Sen. Hugh M. Burns who wanted an easy government job, launched a new career today as a $14,000-a-year state liquor control commissioner.

Burns, the dean of the Legislature who retired last year, was appointed by Gov. Ronald Reagan Tuesday to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Appeals Board.

The ABC board is a three-member commission which reviews disciplinary decisions against licensees made by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Department.

The colorful 68-year-old Burns currently is entitled to a monthly $1,053 state pension as a retired lawmaker. He served 34 years in the legislature. The pension payment will drop to $824 when he takes his new post.

Burns told newsmen on the last day of the legislative session in 1970 that he intended to ask Reagan to name him to a part-time board or commission.

The affable, barrel-chested Democrat told newsmen he wanted "something with a minimum amount of labor. I'm not interested in anything that entails a lot of work."

He endorsed Reagan over fellow Democrat Jess Unruh last year for governor and headed a Democrats-for-Reagan campaign committee. In 1968, he endorsed Richard M. Nixon for President and declined to support Democrat Alan Cranston for the U.S. Senate.

Burns will serve at Reagan's pleasure—meaning he can be replaced at any time.

The appointment of Burns is subject to confirmation by the Senate, which he headed for 13 years as president pro tem.

He replaced James Shumway of Suisun on the liquor board. Shumway resigned.

Did Reagan Goof On Medi-Cal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) A state health official indicated Tuesday Gov. Ronald Reagan's decision to cut Medi-Cal services could have resulted more from bookkeeping errors than what the governor called "excesses."

"A projection was missed," Richard L. Camilli, deputy diirector of the State Department of Health Care Services which runs Medi-Cal, said in a story by the Sacramento bureau of the Los Angeles Times.

He said his department failed last spring to count 20,900 Medi-Cal recipients in its caseload estimates for the current fiscal year.

The Legislature, as a result, failed to put money for them in the current budget, which runs to June 30, 1971.

Camilli also said his department predicted last spring that several cost controls would take effect early in the year, thus cutting Medi-Cal costs during the balance of the year. The controls, however, failed to be implemented as expected, he said.

Reagan announced Dec. 2 that the Medi-Cal program threatened to go over its budget, a situation that allows the administration under state law to make cuts in the program.

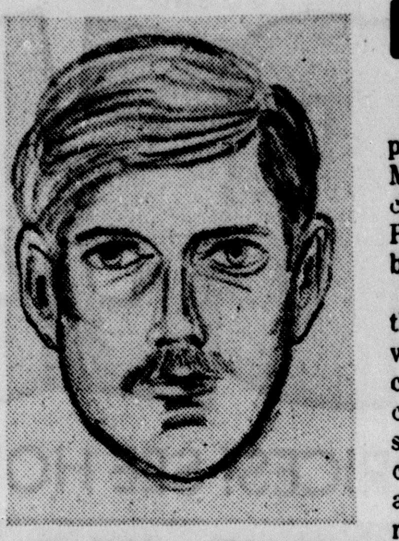
Hub Police Seek Leads On Attacker

San Anselmo police today called for any information leading to a mustached man who raped three 13-year-old girls Saturday in a remote area of Red Hill.

Officers yesterday said the man was discribed by his victims as about 28 years old, five feet 11 inches tall, 175 pounds with light brown hair and wearing a light brown sweater brown corduroy bell bottom pants and brown boots with buckles.

The girls told officers the man approached them at about noon Saturday while they were picnicing in the forested area of Red Hill.

They said he threatened to beat them with a golf club he was carrying if they ran.



ATTACKER — This composite sketch was drawn from a description three 13-year-old girls gave a sheriff's artist of the man they said raped them on Red Hill, San Anselmo

Creek Building Guidelines May Prove Something Of Challenge

The new guidelines for proposed construction along Corte Madera Creek may prove a challenge for both the Larkspur Planning Commission and the builders.

In their first meeting since the stringent requirements were established in a joint city council meeting Monday, the commission approved with design recommendations two architectural proposals for apartment buildings that did not conform to the policy guidelines.

These guidelines would require a wider space between adjacent buildings on South Eliseo Avenue and would limit the width of the buildings to less than 140 feet.

In approving an application for architectural supervision of Mrs. J. Buchanan for a five-unit apartment on 725 South Eliseo Avenue, the commission agreed that the creative design that was offered was a "welcome addition to the shoreline even if the sideyard space was not wide enough.

Councilmen agreed that the guidelines should not restrict or limit the structures to the extent that the waterfront would be lined with a long row of three-story block-shaped buildings.

Also because of its unique design, the commission unanimously approved plans for a seven-unit apartment building for 705 South Eliseo. Any increase in the sideyard width, according to the architect representing applicant Mrs. Carol Auslen, would result in increasing the number of stories or change the design.

Here again, the commissioners noted that by requiring adherence to the guidelines they would be defeating their own purpose, which was originally an attempt to maintain environmental quality of Corte Madera Creek.

The commission approved architectural design submitted by developer Neils J. Schultz Jr. for a 10-unit apartment along South Eliseo on condition that recommendations concerning roofing materials and plans for mechanical equipment be considered. Schultz's architectural plans met the guidelines of the new policy.

The Larkspur Planning Commission also:

CARPORT Approved an application for variance proposed by A. Lamperti of 206 Wilson Way to add a carport three feet from the front property line.

GENERAL PLAN Approved the addition of a recreation and open space element for local parks and recreational facilities to the 1965 General Plan.

COMMITTEE Chose three architects, Arthur Sestak of 356 Wilson Way, Malcolm Smith of 160 Marina Vista Road and Paul L. Gruner of Broadwalk No. 1 to form the nucleus for the proposed five-man architectural review committee to meetMonday. The committee would review the architectural proposals for the commission and make recommendations.

RENTAL OFFICE Reviewed parking plans of the Schultz Investment Co. rental office at El Portal and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and recommended commissioners observe the development of the parking area for its traffic hazards.

Sharing Their Salad Secrets

Salads, salads, salads will be the feature of the Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society sustaining membership luncheon at the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley on Monday, and members have been practicing and perfecting their own best recipes.

They also got together and wrote them down to produce a cookbook of their best salad ideas, with ingredients and method given.

MOLDED SPINACH SALAD
(Mrs. Douglas O'Conner, Tiburon)

1 pkg. lemon gelatin
1½ T. vinegar
½ c. mayonnaise
¼ tsp. salt
½ c. chopped celery
1½ Tbsp. minced onion
1 c. chopped frozen spinach (thawed & drained)
¾ c. cottage cheese

Dissolve gelatin in ¾ cup boiling water. Add cup cold water. Add vinegar, mayonnaise and salt. Chill until almost firm in fair-sizing mixing bowl. Beat until fluffy. Add celery, onion, spinach and cottage cheese. Place in 1 qt. mold and chill till firm. Best done day ahead. Serves 6.

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD
(Mrs. Theodore A. Martin, San Rafael)

2 cups cooked turkey or chicken meat, diced
1 apple, peeled and diced
1 cup pineapple, cubed
¼ cup raisins
⅓ cup chopped dates
2 tbsp. chopped chutney with syrup
½ cup shredded fresh coconut

Simmer 1 tbsp. curry powder in 2 tbsp. chicken consomme for 2 minutes, stirring to a smooth paste. Add curry paste to 1 cup mayonnaise and stir into salad mixture. Serve on bed of lettuce or in coconut shells. Garnish with thinly sliced breast of chicken or turkey and chopped ginger. Top with ½ cup shredded coconut. Serves 6.

COLESLAW PARFAIT
(Mrs. Robert Bramman, Tiburon)

1 envelope gelatin
1 cup cold milk
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup cream
2 tsp. prepared mustard
1 tsp. celery seed
1 tsp. grated onion
1 tsp. salt and dash of pepper
2 cups finely shredded cabbage
Curly Endive
Peeled tomato wedges
Cucumber twists

SALADS ARE the thing to be served by Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society members at their special luncheon and collected into the chapter's new salad cookbook. Here Mrs. Richard Grechnow of Kentfield and Mrs. Theodore A. Martin of San Rafael dress one of their favorite salads. They share some of the recipes below.

Soften gelatin in ½ cup milk and dissolve over hot water. Cool. Combine with mayonnaise, remaining milk, cream, mustard, celery seed, onion, salt, pepper and gelatin and mix well. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in cabbage and pour into 6½-inch ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold, surround with endive, tomato wedges and cucumber slices.

24 HOUR SALAD
(Mrs. Richard Marchand, Greenbrae)

2 eggs, beaten
4 Tbsp. vinegar
4 Tbsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. butter
2 cups white cherries (halves), drained
2 cups pineapple (chunks) drained
2 cans Mandarin oranges, drained
2 cups marshmallows, quartered
1 cup whipping cream

Put eggs in double boiler and add vinegar and sugar. Beat constantly until thick and smooth. Remove from heat. Add butter and cool. When cooled, fold in whipped cream and fruit mixture. Put in molds. Serves 12-14.

RASPBERRY SURPRISE
(Mrs. Frank A. Tessin, Kentfield)

3 regular-sized package raspberry gelatin dissolved in 1¼ cups hot water. Stir in: 3 cans stewed tomatoes (break up tomatoes with fork). Add 6 drops Tabasco sauce.

Pour into a lightly oiled 12-cup ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on greens and fill center with 1 pint commercial sour cream mixed with 1 tablespoon creamed horseradish, ½ tsp. salt, and 1 tsp. sugar.

(Mrs. Edwin Thomas, San Rafael)

3 oz. lime flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
⅓ cup lemon juice
1½ cup mashed avocado
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup mayonnaise

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Pour lemon juice over avocado. When gelatin is cooled add remainder of ingredients. For nice texture put through a blender. Chill until set.

1 envelope plain gelatin
¼ c. cold water
1 c. boiling water
2 tbsp. sugar
1 can (10 oz.) tomato soup
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add boiling water. When cool add remaining ingredients. Stir until smooth. Add to already-set avocado very gently. Chill.

1 medium can pineapple
1 medium can apricots
Dissolve 1 pkg. orange gelatin in 1 cup hot water.

Here's A Quick Meatball Strogonoff

Obviously mushrooms are becoming more and more popular on the American dinner table, for the use of canned mushrooms alone has increased 11-fold in the last 35 years. Food stores large and small sell them whole, sliced and as stems and pieces.

Canned mushrooms add flavor and texture to all kinds of sauces, soups, casseroles, stews. As a for-instance, do try this quick Mushroom Meatball Stroganoff.

QUICK MEATBALL STROGANOFF

1/4 cup soft bread crumbs
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce, divided
1-1/2 pounds ground lean beef
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1-1/4 teaspoons salt, divided
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon butter or oil
1 tablespoon flour
1 can (6 to 8 oz.) sliced mushrooms
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 teaspoon chopped fresh dill or dill weed
Cooked rice or noodles

In a large mixing bowl combine bread crumbs with 3/4 cup of the tomato sauce; mix lightly. Add beef, onion, 1 teaspoon of the salt, nutmeg and black pepper; mix well but do not overmix. Shape into 1-1/2 to 2-inch meatballs. In a large skillet heat butter.

Add meatballs, turning to brown on all sides, about 8 minutes. Remove meatballs to serving dish; keep warm. To butter remaining in skillet stir in flour. Gradually add liquid from mushrooms; blend well. Add mushrooms, remaining 1/4 cup tomato sauce and 1/4 teaspoon salt, sour cream and dill. Cook until hot but do not boil.

Serve with cooked rice or noodles.

Yield: 6 portions

You Can Save On Coatings And Seasonings By Mixing Your Own

NEW YORK (UPI) —Dramatic savings on coating and seasoning mixes for meat, poultry and fish are possible when you make the mixes yourself.

A homemade version of coating mix for chicken costs about one-third as much as a comparable commercial one designed to prepare 10 pounds, or four (2½-pound) chickens. The homemade variety will cost slightly more if you buy national instead of store brands of ingredients.

The following recipes were developed by test kitchens of the American Spice Trade Association. The chicken mix will keep for months in airtight containers in a cool, dry pantry; the two containing cheese should be refrigerated, and will also keep for months.

HERBED BREAD coating for chicken is a mixture of 2 cups of dry bread crumbs, ¼ cup of flour, 3 tablespoons of paprika, 4 teaspoons of salt, 2 teaspoons each of sugar, onion powder and ground oregano, 1 teaspoon of ground red pepper and ½ teaspoon of garlic powder, plus hortening. Mix dry ingredients well together and cut in ¼ cup of shortening until mixture is again crumbly. Store in tightly covered container. Makes about 2⅔ cups, enough for 4 chickens, cut in serving-size pieces. Use about ⅔ cup per chicken. Dip the chicken pieces into milk and then into coating. Arrange in single layer in ungreased shallow baking dish. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 50-60 minutes, or until tender and brown. This mix also is suitable for fish or pork chops. Use same method for coating and bake until done.

To prepare 1 meat loaf, mix ½ cup of the herbed blend with 1-3 cup of water, 2 tablespoons of ketchup and 1 egg, lightly beaten. Add 1 pound of ground beef and mix well, but do not overmix. Bake in an 8½ by 4¼ by 2½ inch loaf pan in a preheated 350-degree oven for 40 minutes. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

HERBED MEAT loaf blend starts with 2 cups of dry unflavored bread crumbs. Mix well with ¼ cup ofgrated romano or parmesan cheese, 4 teaspoons of salt, 4 teaspoons of dried parsley flakes, 2 reaspoons of basil leaves, 1 teaspoons of oregano leaves and ½ teaspoon of ground red pepper. Refrigerate in tightly covered container. Makes about 2 cups, enough for four meat loaves using 1 pound of ground beef each.

HERBED BREAD crumb blend for meatballs starts with 2 cups of unflavored dry bread crumbs and ½ cup of grated romano or parmesan cheese. Mix these well with 3 tablespoons of paprika, 5 teaspoons of salt, 1 tablespoon of dried parsley flakes, 2 teaspoons of marjoram leaves, 1 teaspoon each of powdered mustard and rosemary leaves and ½ teaspoon of ground black pepper. Refrigerate in tightly closed container. Makes 2⅔ cups, enough for 4 pounds of meat.

To use, mix 1 cup of herbed blend with ½ cup of water. Add 1 pound of ground meat and 1 egg, lightly beaten. Mix gently and shape into 1-inch balls. Place in a single layer in a casserole, pour over 1 cup of tomato sauce, cover and bake 1 hour in preheated 350-degree oven. Makes 4 servings.

Numb Fingers And Toes

BOSTON (UPI) — When you're cold or under emotional stress, do your fingers or toes blanch or go numb? If so, medical men have a name for it: Raynaud's phenomenon. It's a chronic clampdown of tiny blood-carrying vessels in the body's extremities, and is common to young adults, especially women.

The cause is unknown, but studies by Dr. Jay Coffman of Boston Medical Center revealed that reserpine, a drug widely used to treat high blood pressure, can produce improvement in some patients.

Diet Lacking

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Extension food and nutrition specialists at the Pennsylvania State University say the diets of many children fall short of the essential nutrients — calcium, ascorbic acid and vitamin A. Adequate amounts of milk, citrus fruits, and dark green and deep yellow vegetables should be in each day's meal pattern to assure adequate amounts of these nutrients.

Oven-Cooked Beef Stew Saves Time

With this recipe there's no need to brown beef cubes, adjust heat or thicken gravy. Preparation is simply a matter of combine and bake until the beef is tender and the stew delicious.

SPANISH BEEF OVEN STEW

2 pounds boneless beef, cut in 1-inch cubes
4 medium-sized carrots, cut in half crosswise and lengthwise
1 pound turnips, pared and cut in quarters.
1 leek (or 3 green onions), cut in 1-inch pieces
1 can (15 ounces) garbanzo beans, drained
1 cup tomato juice
¼ cup water
⅓ cup quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon rosemary
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Place beef, carrots, turnips, leek, garbanzo beans, tomato juice, water, tapioca, rosemary, salt and pepper in a Dutch oven. Combine thoroughly. Cover and cook in a slow oven (300°F.) for 3 to 3½ hours until meat is tender. Stir occasionally. 8 servings.

Dryer Efficiency

To keep washer and gas dryer operating efficiently, clean the lint trap after each load. Wipe the inside of the dryer drum with a damp cloth occasionally, especially if you have dried heavily starched or tinted items.

Chanel's Last Collection Is Shown Without Coco

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—The top step of the mirrored staircase at Chanel was empty yesterday.

Gabrielle "Coco" Chanel sat on that step during every collection of her famous casual clothes since the salon was remodeled in 1931.

Two weeks after the last great female Paris designer died at the age of 87, only two of her old journalist friends who always accompanied her, sat on the lower steps on the staircase.

IN THE GOLD and white salon below, her wealthy clients, including Madame Claude Pompidou, wife of the president of France, and several Rothschilds, paid the designer homage by gathering for the last collection that Chanel personally attended to before she died.

One of the executives of the house said that the Chanel No. 5 perfume will carry on and the designing part of the business will continue with fabrics and designs Chanel left behind. But the spokesman admitted frankly, "We know it will be difficult."

Fashion experts said they believed the salon might only last another two seasons without Chanel's personal touch. The house of the late Jacques Fath closed in similar circumstances but Dior, Lanvin and Patou salons kept going after their founders' deaths because other designers took over. But Chánel styles were only Chanel. They were again today.

Pierre Cardin, leader of the fashion revolutionists, returned the leg to glory with half-hidden shorts and a few mini dresses at his spring-summer collection today.

AND BACK at the quiet beige salon of Pierre Balmain, his regime kept in power longer classic clothes covering the knees that have delighted millionaires wives for 25 years and inspired the "silent majority" of women the world over.

Cardin's show is not just for the young in heart who rebel against traditional clothes, however. His collection was so large that there were plenty of sheaths with wrap-around skirts and trailing scarves or beautiful little buttonless coats covering matching dresses that the wife of any ambassador could wear.

While electronic music droned away in the black glass showroom of his theater, the Cardin girls paraded black leather shorts discreetly half-hidden by matching leather skirts slit up both sides and topped by tight ribbed sewaters.

For resort wear there were printed cotton dresses cut in a U-shape and split up each side to reveal shorts. The Cardin evening shorts were topped by navy silk slit sheaths or micro-mini dresses in satin with swirling accordion pleated skirts and long sleeves.

BELOW-KNEE coats were split up the back to the waist. Suits at mid-knee had long jackets with scalloped edges.

"Fashion freedom" is the new motto in Paris, with designer Rosette Mett of the Torrente Salon proclaiming "there are no decrees, no imposed skirt lengths but a liberty of hemlines."

But even the Torrente show had its limitations—every coat and every dress covered the knee, from just below to midi. The long knee-covered look also held sway at Louis Feraud, Jean-Louis Scherrer, Marc Vaughan and Madeleine De Rauch. Only Philippe Venet showed mini dresses, and those always were worn with much longer coats. The designers were unanimous in choosing midi-maxi for after 5 pm.

IN OTHER words, trouser lengths range from the ankle to as short as nature allows. But skirt lengths mainly are below the knee so far in the collections.

Even with this limitation, for the first time in the history of women's clothing women are free to show as much or little of the leg as they want.

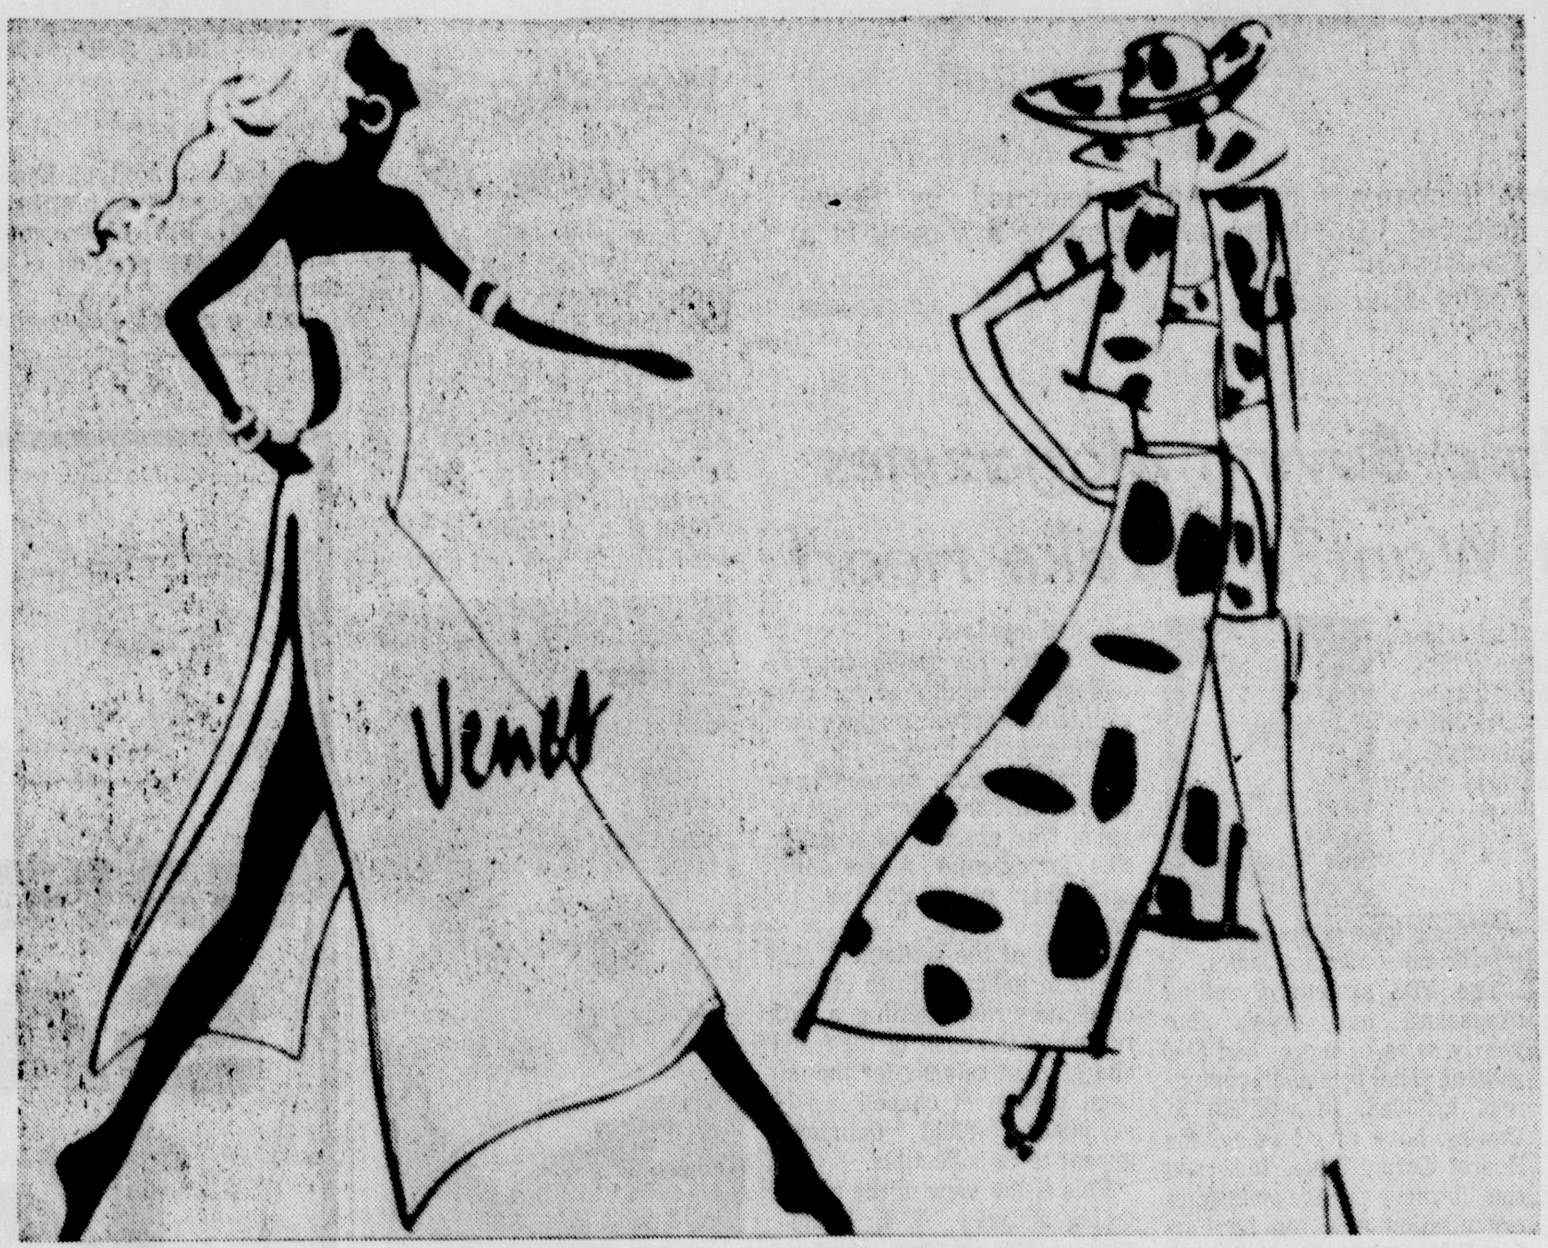
As Miss Mett says, "women of today must be able to say no to the dictates of a style which often does not suit their bodies, their personality, their life and their tastes. Our ambition is to make all women well-dressed, the thin, the fat, the short and the tall, the young and the less young, the classics and the originals."

For females who groan at the idea of shorts, the collections feature plenty of slim dresses just covering the knee with matching belted coats.

THE BIG dress of spring so far is the shirtmaker or shirtwaist. Venet and Jean Louis Scherrer and Torrente all showed those soft printed silks with long full sleeves, swinging pleated skirts, snugly belted waists and long matching scarves around the neckline.

Long trousers still are shown, usually one-piece jump suits with some midilengths polka dot vinyl pants at Louis Feraud to go with his matching maxi raincoats and souwester hats. Not many suits are around. Knickers have not appeared so far.

The Scherrer collection was his first in two years.



THE MAXI-slit, a big item in the collections of Philippe Venet and Louis Feraud is sketched, left, on one of Venet's most striking ensembles — a sarong-like maxi evening dress slit nearly to the waist on both sides with a cut-out back. At right is a sketch of Feraud's version of short shorts which he featured almost exclusively. This outfit matches spotted shorts and halter with short jacket, broad brimmed hat and wrap maxi-slit skirt of same fabric design.

AAUW Hears Talk On Equal Education, Employment For Women

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Women who believe there is little or no discrimination against them because of their sex would have been surprised and enlightened had they attended yesterday mornings meetings of the Mill Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women at the Mill Valley Library.

Guest speakers were Jacqueline Bradford, deputy regional director of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission from the San Francisco office, and Mrs. Alvin Zimmerman of Pleasanton, chairman of the AAUW State Division's Status of Women Committee.

"EQUAL EDUCATION and Employment of Women" was the topic, with Miss Bradford explaining the current situation in employment and Mrs. Zimmerman, the state division's newest projects.

The most recent development came Monday, Miss Bradford said with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in its first sex discrimination decision under the employment provision of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. This was that employers cannot refuse to hire women solely because they have small children unless fathers are also denied jobs.

"It was a bitter-sweet victory, however," Miss Bradford reported, "because the court sent the matter back to the trial court for hearing as to whether the test case of Mrs. Ida Phillips, mother of seven children, could be denied a job under the special exception to the law. This exception says it isn't illegal to refuse a job because of race, color, religion, natural origin or sex where such trait is a bona fide occupational requirement.

"The Supreme Court said that parenthood, if demonstrably more relevant to job performance for a woman than for a man, could be a basis for refusal to hire a woman.

"This point has not been settled in this case," Miss Bradford said. "Bona fide occupational qualification is the key term. Since it has not been spelled out by law, many claims cannot be settled.

THERE ARE many cases of sex discrimination in the lower courts, she pointed out. She said many of the cases the Equal Opportunities Commission deals with involve the state's so-called "Protective" laws for women in connection with limitations on number of hours of regular work, overtime and weight lifting.

Typical was the complaint she described of a Mrs. Rosenfeld who was denied a job as a station master by the Southern Pacific Railroad under these laws. Though she worked all day in an office job, then went home to her ranch and pitched hay and lifted up to 95 pounds — and the company itself admitting she was qualified — the state law prohibited her from taking the job at a higher rate of pay.

"These state laws are invalid," said Miss Bradford. If for no other reasons than federal law supremacy and that they have a discriminatory effect against women because of their sex."

Equal pay cases, she explained, are settled on the basis of the Equal Pay Act, and more and more claims are being filed and won.

MISS BRADFORD said the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission covers basically private employers — there are special laws for government and educational institution employment.

"We accept charges of discrimination, investigate them and

Family Dinner On Golden Occasion

By MOLLY MARIN

The 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer A. Weden, who were married Jan. 26, 1921, in Boston, Mass., was celebrated with a family dinner Saturday at Sabella's restaurant in Mill Valley.

Twenty-four relatives, including the Wedens' son, Elmer Weden Jr., joined the celebration. Mr. Weden was vice president and general manager of the J.W. Hale Corp. in Manchester, Conn., and president of the Manchester Memorial Hospital board of trustees before retiring in Fairfax in 1961.

The couple was also honored by the First Methodist Church of San Rafael when they were presented with 50 golden roses at the Sunday service.

MR. AND Mrs. Robert Sockolov of San Rafael have returned from a 13-day cruise from Los Angeles to Mexico stopping at Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and Manzanillo.

SGT. STEPHEN E. Hansen, who claimed Hyon Chee Kim of Seoul, Korea, as his bride on Dec. 18, returned to Novato Monday. His bride will join him in March.

Sergeant Hansen, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hansen of Novato, was graduated from Novato High School and went to Korea in 1969, serving in the Army. He is the brother of Norman Hansen of Crocket and Martin and Barbara Hansen of Novato. His bride is the daughter of Yon Hong Kim and the late Mrs. Kim. They were married at Munsanni Ceremonial Hall in Seoul.

'Housewives Should Reshape Industry'

Ralph Nader's sister has urged American women "to really wheel around some of the companies whose products they use."

U. S. housewives should use their collective purchasing power to reshape the thinking of American industry, says Laura Nader Milleron.

"American women haven't taken advantage of their buying clout. One of the most powerful consumer groups in Japan is the housewives' consumer group. Women in this country could really wheel around some of the companies whose products they use," she says.

American women, declares Mrs. Milleron, must also be given further opportunity to compete in the professions.

"There are more women physicists in Italy than in America," says the anthropology professor at the University of California.

The answer to upgrading the status of women does not lie in telling them all to become professionals. Most women are housewives. We should upgrade the job of housekeeper. American housewives have one of the hardest jobs in the world, simply because of their isolation.

A Good Put-Down For The Woman Who Constantly Ogles Her Face

DEAR HELEN:

You know the type: The woman who has everything and calls attention to it by "worrying" about her perfection. She spends more time on her face than I do on my whole family. Her skin is flawless, every eyelash perfect. She's entirely in love with herself.

And she's always making less endowed girl friends aware by "seeing" a tiny blemish in the mirror; then we're supposed to respond with lavish praise.

Please tell me a good put-down, next time she ogles herself with those gorgeous orbs and asks, "What do you do for bags under your eyes?" when she expects me to exclaim, "What bags?" — TIRED OF BEING MRS. STOOGE

DEAR TIRED:

Tell her to wear an "eyebra," says my husband, Bob. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Five months ago, Tony and I were married after knowing each other three weeks.

Today a letter came in the mail and I opened it by mistake. It was from a lawyer in Ohio, and it contained a legal paper for Tony to sign so that he may obtain his final divorce decree.

I'm afraid to show it to him, as this means we aren't married, and maybe he wants it that way. He is a perfect husband, but do I really know him? I knew there was a former wife, but assumed he was free. Maybe he thought so, too — I hope!!

If I seal the letter up I may never know the truth. If I tell Tony I snooped, he may hate me. Either way, will we have to get married again? And will he want to? — NOT QUITE A WIFE

DEAR NOT:

Tell Tony the truth and expect the same from him. A "perfect husband" (almost) won't let you down, though it may require another ceremony to make him perfectly legal. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Why is it that my wonderful, strong, handsome husband isn't normal?

I mean any normal male of 24 would be satisfied with looking at baseball and football games on television, playing golf or tennis. But my man is some kind of nut who flirts with danger. He skis on impossible trails, plays La Crosse, surfs, skin dives — and his last announcement of sky diving is the final blow.

How can he do this to me? I'm all worried out after only six months of marriage. Will he ever become that non-athletic guy I want for a husband and father of our children, or should I join him and we can at least die together? — SUSAN

DEAR SUSAN:

Is your husband really a danger freak or are you a chicken?

I'd guess there's a little of both in your family, and the only solution is compromise. Get involved in his sports and perhaps some of your caution will rub off on him — especially after he becomes a father. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

Trapped Into Buying Magazines You Don't Want? — Take Heart

WASHINGTON — People who feel tricked or trapped into buying subscriptions to magazines they don't want stand to benefit from a court case just concluded by the Justice Department and Cowles Communications Inc., publisher of Look and several other magazines.

Settlement of the case makes clear that magazine subscribers have a right to cancel a subscription and get a proportionate refund at any time despite a written contract that appears to bind them to make monthly payments for 2-1/2 years for 5-year subscriptions.

In most magazine subscriptions, where the entire fee is paid in advance, the right to cancel and get a refund for the unused portion of the subscription price has been honored by publishers.

BUT IN in monthly payment subscriptions, known as Paid During Service (PDS), companies have usually insisted that the long-term contracts were binding and that no refunds were required even when the subscriber may have a legitimate complaint.

People who stopped paying because of alleged misrepresentation have often been subjected to high-pressure dunning tactics. These have included long distance telephone calls to subscribers and their employers, sometimes in the late evenings or early morning hours.

The PDS system of selling magazines has grown into yearly sales of more than $100 million. The principal companies involved, in addition to Cowles, have included the Hearst Corp., Time, Inc., and the former Curtis publishing organization now run by Perfect Film and Chemical Co.

After a long investigation, sparked by Rep. Fred B. Rooney (D-Pa.), the Justice Department filed formal charges of mail fraud against five subsidiaries of Cowles. They are Home Reference Library, Home Reader Service, Mutual Readers League, Civic Reading Club and Educational Book Club.

IN THE settlement, the firms were fined $50,000 after pleading "no contest." They also agreed to a consent order forbidding them from continuing certain practices but not forcing them to admit that they violated any law.

In effect, the settlement was a deal which allowed the government to appear as the victor while granting Cowles, the parent organization, some protection against massive consumer suits. The absence of a guilty plea, for example, makes damage suits more difficult to bring.

Terms of the settlement also seem to indicate little chance of a subscriber getting a full refund on the basis of the fraud charge. But refunds for the unused portion of cancelled subscriptions would definitely appear to be collectible.

This is the view of the prosecuting attorney, A. L. Donielson, of Des Moines. He says there should be no question about the subscriber's right to cancel and get a refund.

FUTURE SUBSCRIBERS would also be protected under the terms of the consent order requiring full disclosure during the sales pitch. Salesmen would have to disclose that the purpose of the call is to sell magazines, not to conduct a quiz or survey, as many have indicated.

Companies also would be prohibited from threatening legal action when they did not intend to do so.

Equality For Women In Employment And Education

attempt first to conciliate the parties. Many cases never get to the courts because we work out a great many agreements. Companies may see clearly what is right or don't want the bother of going to court or don't like the bad publicity.

"The commission has issued hundreds of decisions" she said. "Many deal with stereotypes of the conception of the female role, and there are no guide lines.''

Typical of objections on this basis were denial of jobs as night watchman and guards handling firearms because of the danger, and one company's refusal to give a woman a position as messenger because they had no women's bicycles.

"Decisions have to be on an individual basis,'' she maintained. "Not all women want such jobs, but if they do, they should have the opportunity to be hired.''

SHE SAID a large number of cases of discrimination against women involve job classifications and seniority systems.

"Standards, qualifications and requirements are set up with built-in discriminatory effects against certain groups, and one of the groups can be women. The whole problem is really one of combating a system which has often been unconsciously and unintentionally constructed so that it keeps out certain groups,'' she said.

Offenders are not only industry, she said, but businesses such as banks and insurance companies and educational institutions.

"When there is no compliance with a decision of the commission, everything leads to the courts,'' she declared, adding that though this is an extremely slow process, progress is being made.

"Previously women haven't fought, but they have more support now. They don't have to take discrimination any more.''

Mrs. Zimmerman's special concern was discrimination against women in education.

QUOTING FROM a report by faculty women to the academic senate of the University of California regarding the differential treatment of women, she said statistics were very incriminating on how many had applied for positions, been accepted or been given full professorships.

"There are only 15 women who are full professors!'' she exclaimed.

New projects of the state AAUW, she said, are an educated women power committee set up to work on such inequities and apply social pressures in behalf of changing policies, and a committee that will be concerned with wrong attitudes in school counseling programs given young girls regarding their second rate roles.

"If we can get the money,'' she said, "we hope to make a semidocumentary movie to appeal to both boys and girls about planning their lives.''

Child care centers are another important interest of the state AAUW, she indicated, since: "3,000,000 women work in California — at least half have to work — one in 10 are the sole support of families — and one-third have minor children.''

Working in child care centers is the profession of the future she predicted; yet there are no university programs for training directors.

Sonoma Volunteer Heads New Unit

A new organization, Auxiliary of Sonoma State Hospital, has elected Mrs. John J. Sciutto of Novato its first president. She has been a volunteer for three years at Sonoma.

Barbara Sciutto and her husband, a partner of Sunset Scavenger Co. in San Francisco have five children, Mrs. Jack Rademann of Novato, Mrs. Gary Vann of San Francisco, Michael Sciutto of San Luis Obispo and Patricia Sciutto, 16 years old and a patient at Sonoma State Hospital; and Thomas Sciutto, 9 years old, living at home.

She was born in Kansas City, Mo., and attended schools there. She moved to San Francisco 21 years ago and has lived in Marin County three years. Bowling, oil painting and sewing are among the new president's interests.

"The auxiliary hopes to assist in obtaining those items for the hospital that the State of California cannot provide,'' Mrs. Sciutto said. An elephant train for the transportation of the physically handicapped patients is just coming off the production line. This has been made possible by a handful of parents and interested friends of the hospital and has taken five years to accomplish,'' she said.

"Sonomaland, a park and recreational area on the hospital grounds has been in the 'wishing' stage longer than the train with occasional contributions coming in.) "There is a picnic area without tables or benches,'' she says. "These are but two of the items we would like to help the people of Sonoma State Hospital have and enjoy.''

Listed among its projects and activities are an orientation coffee and membership drive on Feb. 18, a golf-a-thon this spring and a Christmas bazaar.

MRS. JOHN SCIUTTO

Officers elected to serve with Mrs. Sciutto are Mmes. James Marsh, of Glen Ellen, first vice president; Jack Rademann of Novato, second vice president; John Jackson of San Rafael, secretary; and Jerome Schuman of Fairfax, treasurer.

Caring For Wooden Floors

Scarred wooden floors that have lost their original beauty can often be revived with paint. Painting is not only an easy and inexpensive procedure, but it's also an authentic treatment for an Early American decor.

The first step is to remove all old dirt and wax with mineral spirits or naptha and steel wool. Paint a strip around the baseboards with a brush, and do the rest of the floor with a roller, using at least two thin coats of a quality deck enamel and then wax.

DRAMA REVIEW

Should A Comic Be A Salesman?

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

SAN FRANCISCO — At least one thing about Red Buttons, noted stage film and television personality, he knew how to keep the usually quick-exit Curran Theater audience a little longer last night — just throw in a little nightclub patter and fast one-liners.

But if he was sincere in his final post-curtain call pitch about drumming up trade for Woody Allen's comedy, "Play It Again, Sam," of which he is the star, he spoiled a sometimes amusing evening. Hopefully it was all in jest.

"Play It Again, Sam," is an ideal vehicle for the older-than-30 generation who likes to gobble up sexy one-liners. It should make a tremendous hit when it makes the town and gown circuit and most likely a future production of the Ross Valley Players.

While Allen is one of our finer young comics, some of the crispness which he penned in his first play, "Don't Drink the Water" and the delightful film, "What's New, Pussycat?", is lacking in "Sam."

Such lines as "I smoked pot once and had a bad reaction; I tried to take my pants off over my head" were just a little wearing.

Most of the evening Buttons as Allen Felix, a film critic in search of a girl after his wife walked out on him, is delightful. The veteran comic knows how to handle his lines, playing them for sustained laughter. He even comes off good as a loser in his finally found affair with his best friend's wife. He is however, counseled, by his alter-ego — the film image of Humphrey Bogart — handled expertly by Peter De Maio right down to the pulled down hat, trench coat and cigarette.

As his amour, Deborah Deeble, makes a sweet and rather wacky Linda Christie. When Buttons seemed to overact in his advancements, she managed to stave off awkward stage movements.

Helping to make the evening bounce along a little tighter were Connie Day as Nancy Felix, who is only seen in Allan's daydreaming, and William Bogert as Dick Christie, the young corporate upstart who probably dialed telephone numbers in his sleep.

For a touring company, the setting by William Ritman was in far better shape and done in more tasteful decor than seen in past roadshow productions and Martin Aronstein's lighting played an integral part in the over-all presentation.

As Buttons mentioned "Sam" will be at the Curran Theater through Feb. 6 with evening performances at 8:30 p.m., except Sunday at 7 p.m. with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, 2:30 p.m.

"PLAY IT AGAIN, SAM" — A comedy by Woody Allen. Directed by Ben Gerard. Settings by William Ritman; lighting by Martin Aronstein, and costumes by Ann Roth. The cast: Red Buttons as Allen Felix, Connie Day as Nancy Felix, Peter De Maio as Bogey, William Bogert as Dick Christie, Deborah Deeble as Linda Christie, Glory McRae as Dream Sharon, Rebecca Shaw as Sharon Lake, Tanya Duncan as Gina, Jan Cobler as Vanessa, Marika Choma as a go-go girl, Julie Prince as a museum girl, and Miss McRae as Barbara Tyler.

Holdout Is Threatening Market Halt

I-J Special Report

WALNUT CREEK—A walkout by one holdout local of the Retail Clerks Union still could shut down practically all supermarkets in eight Bay Area counties, a negotiator warned today.

John Bacon, negotiator for the Food Employers Association, said no changes have been made in the offer that six Retail Clerks' locals accepted in voting Sunday. The Contra Costa Local 1179 rejected the offer by a vote of 470 to 455.

Should the Contra Costa union members strike, other counties' supermarkets — including Marin and Sonoma — would close by previous agrement, Bacon explained.

A spokesman for the Contra Costa local said the members would meet in two shifts tomorrow for more discussion and possibly second votes on the three-year contract offer. The meetings will be held at 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. in the Richmond Civic Auditorium.

Both Bacon and the clerks' spokesman said no new offers have been made since Sunday's vote. The negotiated package would provide a 75-cent hourly raise retroactive to Jan. 1, 25-cent raises for the second and third years, and a 4-cent improvement in payments to health care and pension benefits.

The maximum pension for retiring clerks would be increased from the present $250 and $425 per month, the union spokesman said.

No more negotiations are scheduled, pending the outcome of tomorrow's vote in Contra Costa, Bacon said today.

The clerks' last three-year contract expired Dec. 31, was extended to Jan. 21,

Cost-Cutting Plan For Angela's Trial

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation that could save Marin taxpayers several $100,000 in trial costs from the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Hall of Justice has been introduced by Assemblyman Pauline Davis, D-Portola.

A 1961 law by Mrs. Davis provided state reimbursement to counties for any homicide trial cost in excess of the amount the county could raise by 10 cents on its property tax rate.

Her new measure (AB 26) would cut the figure to five cents, thus halving the amount a county would have to pay before the state picks up the rest of the trial cost.

In Marin, 10 cents on the property tax raises about $650,000, thus her bill would cut to $325,000 the amount the county would pay before qualifying for state reimbursement.

Marin County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell has estimated the cost of trying Angela Y. Davis and Ruchell Magee at $200,000 just to June 30, but he has figured the total cost of damage suits, insurance, medical expenses and security following the shoot-out at $1.25 million.

How much of this total would qualify under Mrs. Davis' bill was unclear, but she told the Independent-Journal yesterday that it would cover "anything related with the trial."

Mrs. Davis noted that she won passage last year of a bill cutting the figure from 10 to three cents, but that Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed it on the ground that the state could not afford such payments. She said no estimate was available on the cost to the state of her measure, but that one would be made soon.

She said that she passed the 10-cent measure in 1961 when Sierra County was hit with the cost of the Larry Lord Motherwell trial. It also took a special state appropriation to help the little county pay for the trial.

Nelson To Show Cause On Request

Warden Louis S. Nelson of San Quentin Prison was ordered yesterday to show cause in Marin Superior Court Feb. 23 why convict Ruchell Magee should not be interviewed by a reporter for a weekly Marin publication.

Alice Yarish, a writer for the Pacific Sun, obtained the order on Nelson from Judge Joseph Wilson

Mrs. Yarish said Magee was willing to see her but was blocked by a prison order.

Both Magee and Angela Y. Davis are covered by an order from Judge E. Warren McGuire that no one connected with their case shall discuss it in public.

Miss Davis and Magee are charged with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in the unsuccessful courtroom escape attempt that killed four persons, including a judge, at the Hall of Justice in August.

'Moby Dick' Solo

Actor Jack Aranson of Mill Valley will portray nine characters in his own adaptation of Melville's novel, "Moby Dick" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at St. Stephen's Parish, Belvedere.

Stringent Pollution Plan

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Unprecedented legislation to prohibit any variance from air pollution controls has been introduced by Sen. Gordon Cologne, R-Indio.

The Bay Area Air Pollution Control District had 19 variances outstanding on Jan. 1, including special exemptions for oil refineries, Pacific Gas and Electric Co. and for open burning at Angel Island State Park and at Point Reyes National Seashore. Some of the variances were more than six years old.

But under Cologne's bill (SB 87), all sources of air contamination would have to meet all district rules, regulations and orders. The bills would apply to all air pollution control districts in the state.

The effect of Cologne's bill would be to shut down emission sources if they could not meet district regulations. Variances in the Bay Area district are granted by its hearing board upon a showing by the affected source that it temporarily cannot meet district emission limits.

School Burglary

Burglars took $20 in petty cash from the Deer Park School near Fairfax Jan. 11, Marin County Sheriff's deputies have reported.

Protest Hearing For Booted UBAC Groups

OAKLAND (UPI) —The United Bay Area Crusade's new president says that agencies which have been notified their funds would be slashed could count on their usual amounts of money pending appeals.

Jerome W. Hull, the new president, also told a Tuesday night crusade group that a meeting would be held Feb. 8 with agencies protesting cutbacks.

"It is our hope that at this meeting not only can differences be aired but at least initial steps can be taken toward their resolution," added Hull, who is the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. president.

(Marin agencies cut off entirely were St. Vincent's School for Boys in Marinwood and Marin Aid to Retarded Children. The Red Cross, Salvation Army and Young Men's Christian Association, all in Marin, received sharp cuts.

Saying it was seeking "new directions," particularly in the field of minority groups, the crusade has announced plans to cut off support to 29 agencies, trim funds for another 66 and ask 72 to merge into 13 areawide organizations.

"If, as a result of this appeal process, we find that there have been inequities, we intend to correct them," Hull declared.

Another speaker, volunteer Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, warned:

"UBAC presently faces a crisis of confidence which arises in part because it has acted unilaterally, sometimes without knowledge of all the pertinent facts, and without adequate notice or process, in its relations with some of its agencies."

Before the meeting, representatives of Spanish speaking organizations declared their support of the "new directions" fund allocation proposal.

They also criticized agencies who had declared opposition to the plan which would set aside $1 million for minority groups.

"We applaud the UBAC leadership who have had the guts to say 'Yes, we've got to make changes and let's start now,' said Larry Gonzales, chairman of the Bay Area Raza for United Funds at a news conference.

"Those agencies who complain about budget cuts should instead be taking a supercritical look at themselves, because for the first time in years they're having to prove their relevancy, not only to the crusade budget committee but also to the entire Bay Area community," he added.

Maria Salazar, Spanish Speaking Information Center director, said, "Our people are giving too. They are the people who work in the factories, where they are more pressured to give."

Behr Preparing Bill To Ban Seismic Explorations

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, announced today that he was preparing legislation to prohibit the oil industry from conducting seismic explorations off the California coast.

Behr said his measure was sparked by a request from Humble Oil Co. and Phillips Oil Co. for renewal of their permits to conduct such explorations along the coast from Mendocino County to the Mexican border. The permits expire this month, and Behr said he would oppose their renewal in testimony tomorrow before the State Lands Commission in Sacramento.

Behr said his measure would close the last loophole in state laws establishing an oil sanctuary along the coast and in San Francisco Bay. Oil and gas drilling and core sampling were barred in the sanctuary, which last year was extended by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, to include the bay and most of the north coast to Oregon.

But the state's oil sanctuary law was silent on seismic explorations, in which explosive charges are detonated and measurements of their shock waves used to find underwater oil deposits.

Permits for such explorations, Behr said, "represent the first link in a chain reaction leading to core drilling and then platform drilling." If seismic explorations turned up oil, he said, the inevitable result would be "tremendous pressure" on the state by the oil companies to open up the sanctuary to full-scale drilling.

The oil sanctuary law was passed after the 1969 oil leak in the Santa Barbara Channel.

Since the oil companies were barred from taking core samples or drilling within the sanctuary, Behr said, "then no proper reason can be advanced for the granting of this (seismic exploration) permit."

He noted that the Humble and Phillips permits were first granted in 1964 and had been renewed by the State Lands Commission routinely every six months since that date. The last reported explorations under the permit were in 1966 and 1967, Behr said.

Behr stressed that the state permit was of crucial importance to the oil companies, since a state permit was required in order to conduct seismic explorations on adjacent federal lands beyond the state's three-mile jurisdiction. The freshman senator noted that his point was not revealed on the commission's agenda for tomorrow.

Behr, noting the lands commission's staff previously justified such permits for providing scientific information, said that this rationale was "ridiculous." He said that such information was "like feeding lettuce to a hungry rabbit."

Behr's bill would be effective immediately upon passage and signing by the governor.

As for the lands commission's hearing on the permits, Behr said, "There is no need for further hearings. Santa Barbara and San Francisco Bay are testimony enough."

North Marin Federation Shows Growth

The North Marin Federation of Homeowners Associations has grown to a membership of 11 associations representing about 3,500 homes, it was reported at a recent federation meeting by president Guthrie R. Greene.

Plans for 1971 include expansion of some existing associations and formation of new associations, Greene said.

During the past year, the Forest Park Homeowners Association joined the federation.

Green recently was reelected president, of the federation, Harold K. Blue, president of Lynwood Park Improvement Association, was reelected vice president and Evelyn Johnson, president of Loma Verde Homeowners Association, was elected treasurer.

Abandoning Plans On Communes Urged

The Mill Valley Planning Commission has asked the city council to abandon plans to adopt an ordinance outlawing communes in the city, saying that the city has no authority over intra-family matters.

Zoning Administrator Howard R. McGill said the commission voted Monday to ask that the council not amend the zoning ordinance to define family as no more than five unrelated persons. The amendment, if adopted, would prohibit communes in single-family zones.

McGill said a resolution adopted by the commission noted the "ordinances controlling trespassing, noise and other objective matters arising in the community," but stated that "a redefinition of the word family does not relate to these objective problems."

The commission said that "it is not the city's function to legislate intra-family relationships but only to govern their objective impact on the community." It called the amendment "difficult to interpret and enforce" and said it may be unconstitutional and discriminatory.

The council will consider the ordinance on second reading Monday and could adopt it then.

The commission, which met until 2 a.m., set an adjourned meeting next Wednesday at 8 p.m. at city hall to take up items from Monday's agenda.

These include approval of a precise development plan and tentative map for 38 dwelling units in Scott Valley, and consideration of a planned unit development of 203 apartments near Sabella's restaurant on Redwood Highway.

The Mill Valley Planning Commission also:

SPLIT - Approved a request by S. E. Behrens for a two-lot subdivision at East Blithedale Avenue and Kipling Drive.

PARKING - Waived requirements for five off-street parking spaces for the old city library, which William E. Cullen is converting to apartments.

APARTMENTS - Approved a development plan for construction of 10 apartments at 230 Miller Avenue. The applicant is Marinways Co.

RECYCLING - Continued to Feb. 3 consideration of a use permit to allow a recycling operation at the city's corporation yard. City Atty. Leland H. Jordan has said the use is prohibited by city ordinance.

FONDUE - Waived off-street parking requirements for the Fondue Pot, 1 El Paseo.

Field Cut To 11 For School Job

The Marin County Schools Office Personnel Commission has narrowed to 11 the field of applicants for the position of personnel director.

Byron W. Mauzy, assistant superintendent of schools, said yesterday the commission reviewed 80 applications Monday, discarding 69.

The commission set Monday and Tuesday for interviews with the 11 finalists for the half-time position which will pay $8,520 per year.

The position, which oversees a county schools clerical force of 140 persons, is expected to be filled by Feb. 7, he said.

In other action, the commission reviewed but took no action on a preliminary budget totaling $18,801.

About $13,000 of the proposed fiscal 1971-72 budget will go to salaries, Mauzy said, including $900 for the commissioners who receive $10 per meeting.

Other budget items include $4,100 for operating expenses; $1,300 fringe benefits and $550 for meetings and conferences. The proposed budget is down about $2,500 from this year's projected budget, he said, adding it may be increased if office equipment is deemed necessary. The commission is expected to act on the budget at its next meeting, Feb. 8.

Third Grader Reads Well In Kentfield

The reading ability of the average third grader in the Kentfield School District is about eight months ahead of the average California third grade, the district board has been told.

Supt. Anthony G. Bacich said yesterday reading results from the manditory Stanford Reading Test, administered yearly to the primary grades, were reported Monday to the board.

He said first graders tested at the state average while second graders were about three months ahead of their contemporaries.

The board also learned the parent-teacher associations at Wolfe Grade and Greenbrae school next week will sponsor a five-day outdoor education excursion to the Santa Cruz Mountains.

On personnel matters, the board went into closed session to consider dismissal of a teacher. No decision was reached, Bacich said.

List Cut To Six Candidates

The Fairfax City Council, meeting in closed session Monday night, weeded out all but six of about 100 candidates for city administrator, according to city clerk Eileen L. Foster.

Mrs. Foster said the council scheduled interviews with the six candidates for Saturday and Sunday.

That is all that was done at the adjourned meeting, Mrs. Foster said.

$300 Theft From Petaluman's Car

A guitar, tape recorder and cash, valued at about $300, were taken from a car parked near 29 Circle Drive, San Rafael, last Friday, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

The car was owned by Karen Killgaard of 75 Queens Lane, Petaluma, deputies said.

Shepherd Resigning At Nicasio

John L. Shepherd, president of the Nicasio School District board, last night announced that he intended to resign June 30 from the board on which he has served 18 months.

Shepherd, a Christian Science Practitioner and reserve Chaplain at Hamilton Air Force Base, told fellow trustees that demands of his career as a teacher of Christian Science would not allow him sufficient time to serve as a trustee.

Shepherd said he expected the election of his successor to be held April 20.

The Nicasio School District Board also:

BOOKS — Approved that a request be made for $200 from the Elementary Secondary Education Act, to purchase library books.

CONTRACT — Approved a motion that a new contract be sent to former principal Jeffery Pflugrath who was on a one year leave of absence but who wished to return to the Nicasio school.

Nine-Month Jail Term In Burglary

Paul Waldmar Brust, 25, of San Francisco, has been sentenced to nine months in Marin County Jail for burglarizing a Novato business in November 1969 and concealing stolen property last August.

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court also placed Brust on probation for three years.

He had pleaded guilty to burglarizing and possessing property stolen from the Shamrock Building Supply Co. as well as stealing and concealing a car at his home.

Charges that he burglarized three Larkspur shops last December are pending in Marin Municipal Court.

Revenue Potential For Gambling Nil

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative analyst A. Alan Post says he hasn't made up his mind about legalizing offtrack betting in California but he is definitely opposed to a state-operated lottery.

Post said Tuesday that based on the experience of the New York State lottery, such an operation is an expensive producer of only small amounts of revenue.

He said in 1969-70 that lottery sold $47 million worth of tickets, from which $14 million was paid to winners, $7 million went for administrative expense while only $26 million in net revenues flowed into the state treasury.

For California, Post said his "investigation indicates this would be a very expensive revenue source to administer and the net proceeds would be very minor compared to our needs."

The state currently faces a potential budget deficit of $150 million. Post has estimated that if left unchecked the sum would balloon to a huge $712 million shortage next year.

Post said he is studying other forms of gambling as potential producers of state revenue but that his investigations were incomplete and he could not now "express a view on that in the same economic terms."

Gov. Ronald Reagan earlier said he opposed a California lottery but added he was "willing to listen" to arguments favoring legalization of bookmaking away from horse race tracks.

A bill proposing a state-operated lottery to finance education has been introduced in the Senate. Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, has ordered an investigation into the feasibility of raising state revenue through liberalization of antigambling laws, including offtrack wagering.

Burglary Case To Juvenile Court

The case of Robert Karry Campbell, 18, of Petaluma, has been turned over to Marin Juvenile Court.

Campbell is charged with burglarizing an Inverness residence Dec. 9.

$27,000 Property Bid Turned Down: Too Low

Trustees of the Mill Valley School District have rejected the single bid received for the district's Harvard Avenue property because the amount offered was less than the $33,360 minimum set by the board for the 1.6 acres.

Carol Taylor, secretary to the superintendent, said the lone bid of $27,000 came Monday from Jeffrey Morehead of Frank Howard Allen and Company, Marin realtors.

Morehead's low bid could affect negotiations on a 5.13 acre parcel of land in the Tamalpais Valley which has been the object of a dispute between the school district which owns it, and the Tamalpais Community Services District which wants to buy it.

An appraisal commissioned by the school district set the value of the land, at Eastwood Way and Glenwood Avenue, at $85,000, while a services district appraisal values the land at $55,000.

Last Tuesday the boards of both districts agreed to postpone negotiations on the land until bids were received on the Harvard property. At that time Glenn Lambacher, president of the services district, said if bids for the Harvard property were substantially lower than the school district's appraisal, negotiators will have a better idea of fair market value of the Tamalpais Valley land.

The school board tabled the matter until its Feb. 8 meeting.

The Mill Valley School District board also:

APPLICATIONS — Voted to proceed with printing of invitations for prospective applicants for the principalship of Edna Maguire School, vacant since the death of Principal Glenn Skelton last November. The principal chosen will head the district's new middle school when it opens. Deadline for applications is March 12, Mrs. Taylor said.

BEAUTIFICATION — Approved first step work in a master plan for beautification of Strawberry Point School which will include planter boxes, trees, shrubs and playing fields. The Strawberry Point Parent-Teachers Association has contributed $1,400 to the project.

VAN — Authorized the district business manager to purchase a new van for the maintenance department.

LEAVE — Granted sick leave — until Feb. 26 — to Nancy Campbell, a seventh grade teacher at Edna Maguire School.

CLOSED SESSION — Met in closed session for 20 minutes to instruct its agent, Supt. James A. Collins, in regard to negotiations with employee organizations.

$85,000 Cost On Sewer Plan

A subregional sewage planning study covering North Marin and Southern Sonoma will cost about $85,000, according to Charles A. Joseph, manager of the Novato Sanitary District.

Joseph told district diractors Monday night that about $30,000 in federal funds are expected for the study; the remainder to be financed by local agencies.

Directors also applied to the Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission to annex 43 acres owned by Robert C. Roberts off Trumball Avenue, near the Oaks subdivision.

Camera, Tape Gear Stolen From Car

A camera and tape equipment, valued at more than $400, were taken from an Alameda man's car in Marinwood Jan. 12, Marin County sheriff's deputies have reported.

The car of Earl D. Sertahl was parked near 310 Blackstone Drive, deputies said.

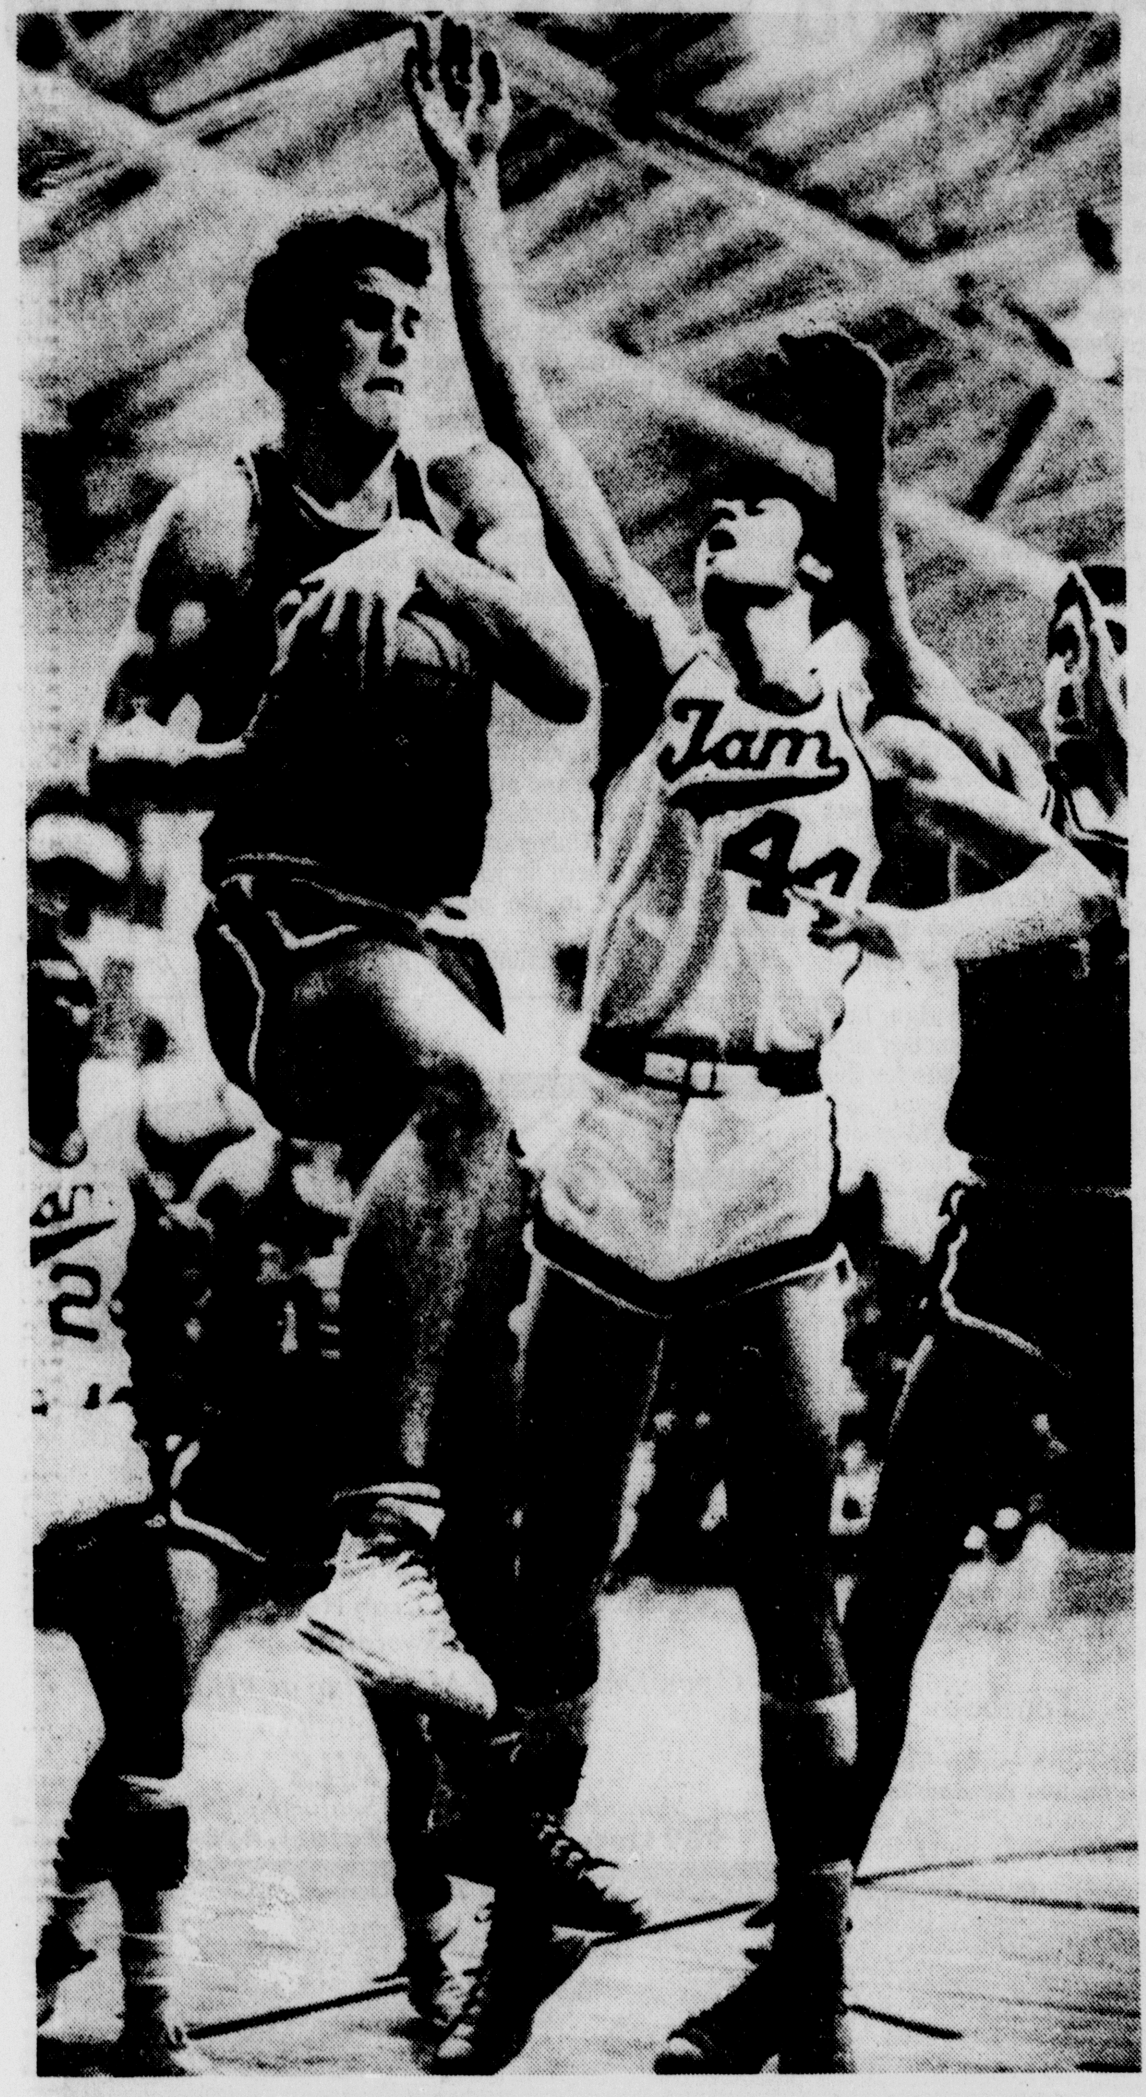
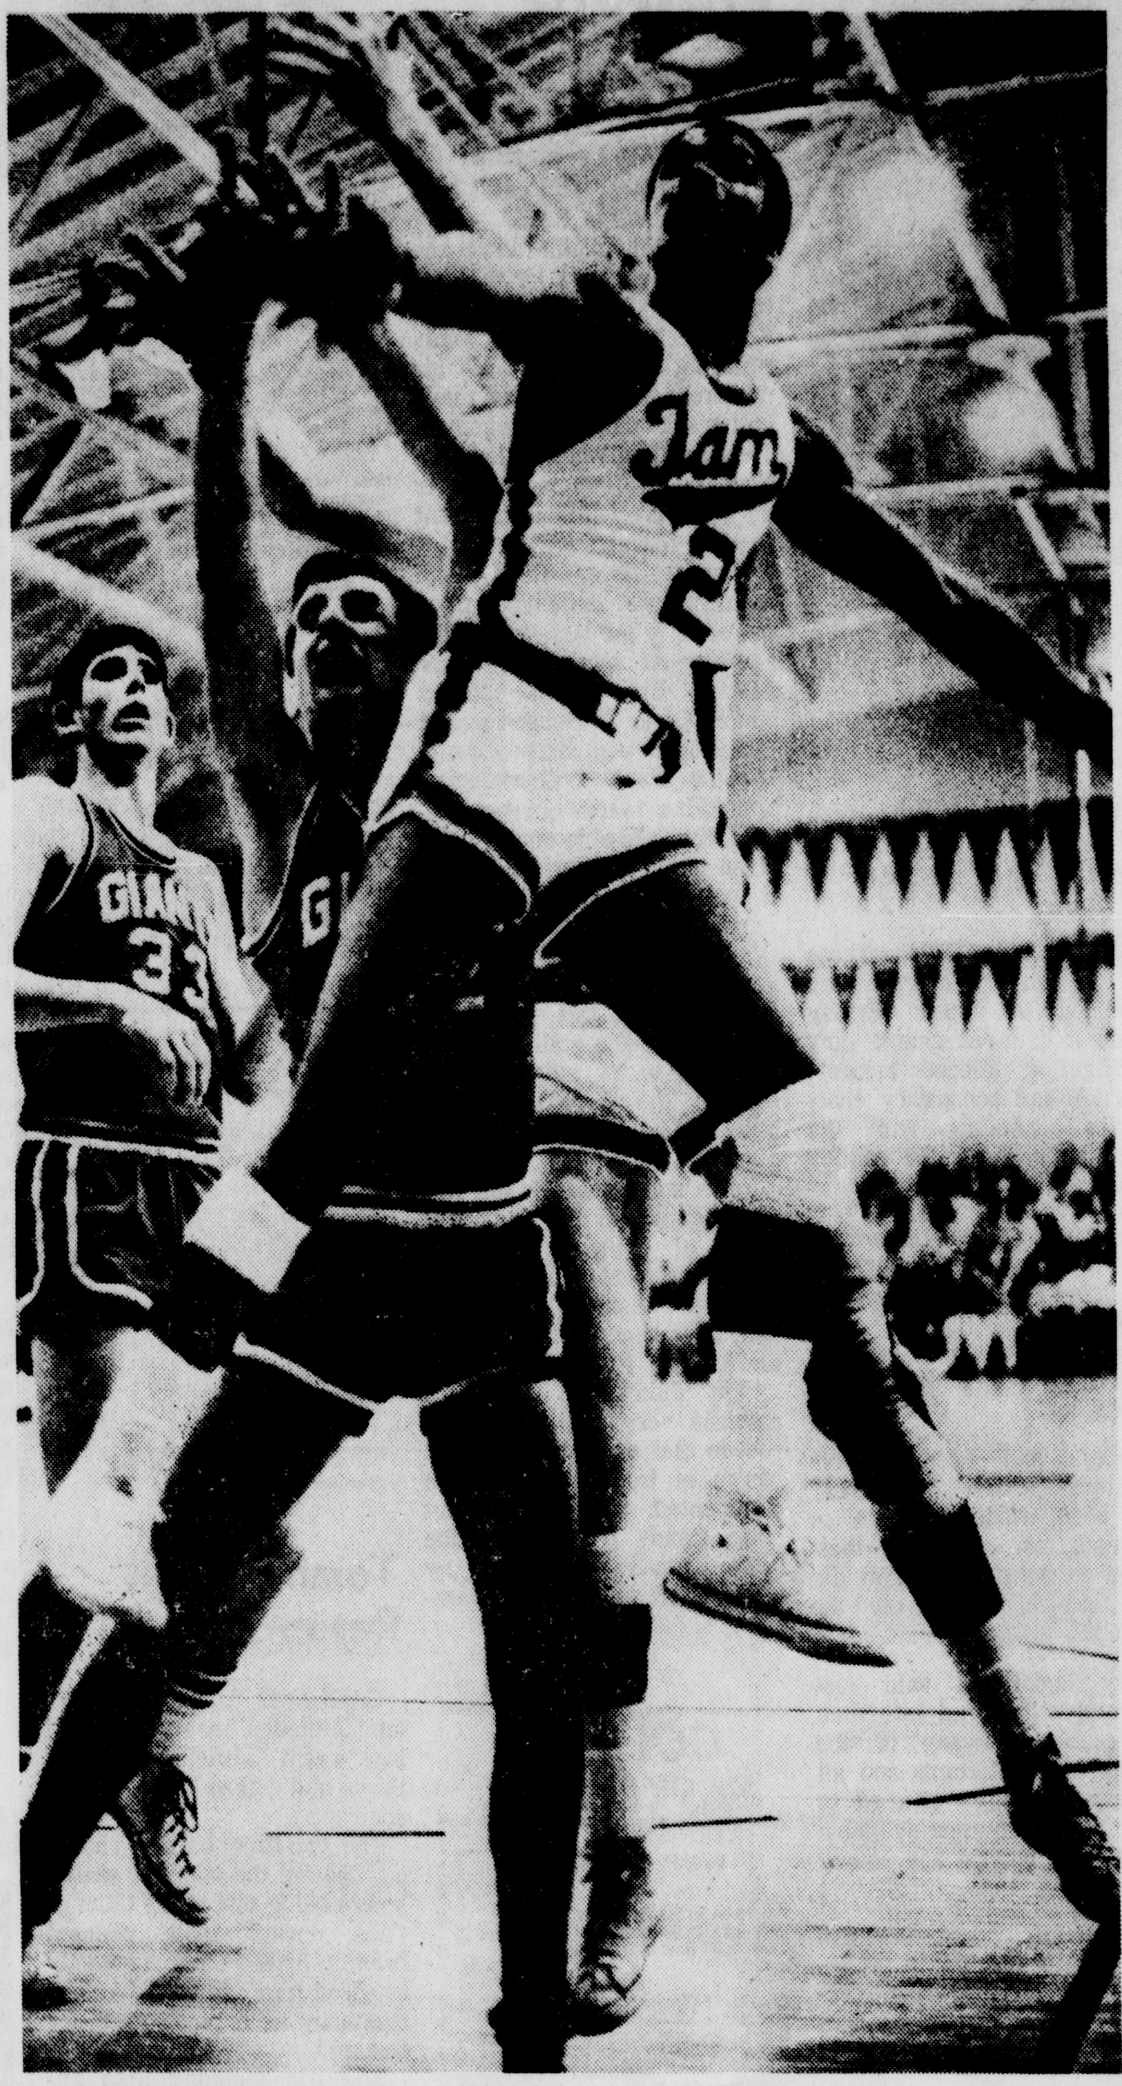
Bomb Scare Halts Tam-Redwood Basketball Game



PROTECTING THE BALL — Steve McGee of Redwood outjumped Tam's Steve Miles (44) and teammate Tim Hennessey (22) to clutch a rebound during last night's bomb-scare abbreviated game at Tamalpais. McGee was a central figure on defense as the Giants of Larkspur battled the Indians of Mill Valley for first place in the Marin County Athletic League.



FIGHT FOR POSSESSION — Clifford Hall of Tam went over Redwood's Tim Hennessey as they fought for a rebound in the second quarter, but neither came down with the ball. Scott Trobbe of Redwood (33), who led all scorers with 11 points, stood by apprehensively. Redwood led, 30-27 when the game was called in the third quarter.

Gym Emptied After Call; To Finish Game Tuesday

By DAVID EINSTEIN

No explosion took place at the tiny Tamalpais High School gym in Mill Valley last night, but police weren't taking any chances.

A capacity crowd of some 650 fans threatened to blow the place up, figuratively speaking, as Tam met Redwood in a crucial Marin County Athletic League basketball game. But one anonymous phone caller threatened to really blow it up, and at 8:07 p.m., Mill Valley Police ordered the building evacuated.

In hurried council, coaches Bernie Schneider of Tamalpais and Dick Hart of Redwood agreed to postpone the game until next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in the Tam gym. It will pick up where it left off, with 4:06 left in the third quarter and Redwood leading, 30-27.

According to Mill Valley Police Sgt. Robert Dyche, who issued the order to empty the gym and adjoining locker room, the caller claimed a bomb had been set to go off in 15 minutes. There was no choice but to clear the building, Dyche said, and conditions were so chaotic outside, what with several hundred disappointed fans milling around looking for a way in, that it would have been impossible to resume the game after waiting out the threat.

Even though there turned out to be no bomb, it's possible that had the league leading Giants from Larkspur continued to defeat the Indians, the fans inside might have torn the gym down anyway. Most of them had been sitting there since 6 o'clock, when the capacity of 600 was reached and the doors were shut, by edict of the fire marshall.

About 50 determined fans gained entrance after that, either through special connections with people inside, or by storming the side doors; the crowd swelled in numbers until standing-room-only became hanging-room-only, as some younger fans dangled from the basket installations on the side walls.

The game itself had reached fever pitch during the early moments of the third quarter, as Tam, down by eight at halftime, scored seven in the space of a minute to close to within one at 27-26. It was anyone's game when the halt came, and players and fans from both sides reacted to the evacuation order with anger and frustration.

First place in the league was at stake; Redwood was 5-0 going into the game, Tam was 4-1.

All the trouble, from the hopeless situation of the giant crowd and the cramped old gym to the bomb scare itself might have been avoided had the game been changed to a more worthy site, namely College of Marin. But when asked for the use of its gym by the Tam adminstration, the Marin athletic department said no, according to Schneider, even though no activity was scheduled there for last night.

Up until the time the game was called, Scott Trobbe of Redwood led all scorers with 11 points, followed by teammate Tim Hennessey and Tam's John Earl Huff with eight apiece. Tam's Will Garner and Redwood's Steve McGee, opposing centers who are among the league leaders in scoring, were held to just three and two points respectively.

Drake In Big Upset

The Drake High School Pirates played their "best game" of the season last night, and, behind Mark Daubenfeld's 18 points, upset Marin Catholic, 54-44 at Drake in San Anselmo.

The victory was only the second of the year for the Pirates, who, with only one returning letterman, have lost four games. For the Wildcats of Kentfield, the loss was the second in a row, and now they too are 2-4.

Daubenfeld, a junior who played his freshman year at Marin Catholic, was, according to Pirate coach Bob Fitzhenry, "The Game's outstanding player," as he hit a career high scoring figure, and most for any Drake player in one game this year.

Fitzhenry said afterwards, "We played our best game. We made the fewest mistakes of any game this year." Besides Daubenfeld, he cited the work of guard Dave Wilkinson, another junior, who came in at the start of the third quarter, and pulled the Pirates together as they outscored the Wildcats in the second half, 36-24.

High point man for Marin was Bill Donellan, the league's third leading scorer, with 13 points, and Tim Stone was second with 10.

Jim Gregg had 12 points to back up Daubenfeld, and he along with Jim Forni, the only letterman, dominated the board for the Pirates.

Marin Catholic 20 24—44
Drake 18 36—54

Marin Catholic — Vanni, 1-2-4; T. Stone, 5-0-10; Donellan, 6-1-13; Stahl, 0-2-2; Hurley, 1-4-6; Sullivan, 1-0-2; D. Stone, 0-2-2; Mahoney, 1-1-3; Christensen, 1-0-2; Totals — 16-12-44.

Youngest Skater At The Nationals

Juli McKinstry, the 14-year-old freshman at Terra Linda High School who has done big things in junior figure skating, today embarks on her National Senior career.

At 14, she'll be the youngest competitor at the U.S. National Championships today through Sunday at Buffalo, N.Y. Up against our nation's finest skaters, she'll be under extreme pressure, but that's nothing new because in 1970 Juli came through to win the National Ladies Championship, which is not to be confused with the Senior Ladies, her new category.

Miss McKinstry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard McKinstry of 619 Cedarberry Lane, San Rafael, is one of the most dedicated athletes in Marin County — or anywhere else, for that matter.

I've written before about her gruelling training schedule, but I'll bring you up to date about her progress in the past seven months. Last June she passed the test for "Seniors" and since then has been trying to perfect the varied and complicated figures, plus develop a unique and difficult program necessary for free skating.

To accomplish this she has been training at the Olympic Blythe Arena at Squaw Valley with the famed Grogans. Barbara Grogan has a Gold Medal from the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley and James D. Grogan was on our World Skating Team for years as well as our Olympic Teams.

With such a perfect training environment plus excellent tutors, Juli should continue climbing the ladder to figure skating success.

Juli's mother says: "We really have our eyes on the mountains. Juli's 10-year-old brother, Roy, is a skier and races on the Squaw Valley team. He had a wonderful summer skiing in Chili and is looking forward to Argentina next summer."

Golly, those McKinstrys really get around.

"However," adds Mrs. McKinstry, "our hearts are here and we're staying right here in Marin County with Juli at Terra Linda High and Roy a student at Lucas Valley School. Also, my husband is an engineer with Matson Navigation Company and this is where the ships are."

Although Juli will skate under the banner of "Village of Olympic Valley," we'll still claim her as a local girl. This is where she got her start.

San Marin Wallops San Rafael

Held in check until the third quarter, the San Marin Mustangs broke away from San Rafael in grand style last night for a 79-57 Marin County Athletic League basketball victory at San Marin High School in Novato.

The Mustangs, behind a 22-point performance by 6-foot-8 center Dana LaFerriere, evened their league record at 3-3, while handing the winless Bulldogs their sixth loss.

San Rafael, with the brother combination of Wayne and Bill Lechner leading the way, played well enough to lead at the end of the first quarter, 16-15, but San Marin rallied to take a five-point lead at halftime. Still, the Mustangs were way under their average scoring pace; they made up for it by outscoring the visitors in the second half, 51-24.

LaFerriere paced the club in the first half, with 18 points, and Brad O'Riley sparked the second half performance with 15, his toal for the game. One other Mustang, Hoza Wright, hit double figures with 10.

Wayne Lechner led San Rafael with 17 points, followed by brother Bill with 13. Duke Bessee contributed 11 to the losing cause.

And grid immortal Ernie Nevers gave Plunkett the Pop Warner Award given by the club annually to the top senior player on the West Coast.

Dozens of sports celebrities attended the banquet.

Streaking Novato '5' Stuns Terra Linda

The surging Novato High School Hornets won their third straight Marin County Athletic League basketball game last night, upsetting the Terra Linda Trojans, 61-47 in Terra Linda.

The Hornets, who lost their first three league games but now stand even at 3-3, relied on a balanced attack paced by Marty Moroski, and some terrible foul shooting by Terra Linda to nail the Trojans with their second loss in six games. The home club had won two crucial games in a row, and was apparently down for this one.

Moroski, a junior forward who last Friday starred in Novato's win over Marin Catholic, led the Hornets with 13 points and again overshadowed teammate Joe DeMaestri, the league's leading scorer, who finished with 10.

The Trojans got a 19-point performance from forward Joe Casteel, but they were never really in the game. Novato jumped off to a 13-6 lead in the first quarter, and led by 16 at halftime. The game was lost on the charity line, where Terra Linda missed on 24 of 43 free throws.

Novato 13 18 13 17 — 61
Terra Linda 6 9 12 20 — 47

Novato — Larman, 4-0-8; Moroski, 5-3-13; Crozier, 3-2-8; DeMaestri, 4-2-10; Gardiner, 3-3-9; Colony, 2-0-4; Lowney, 1-0-2; Tetu, 1-0-2; High, 0-5-5; Totals — 23-15-61.

Renault Drivers Survive Blizzard In Monte Carlo

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI)—Sweden's Ove Andersson and Britain's David Stone, driving a French Alpine Renault, survived a night of blizzard in the Alps to lead the Monte Carlo Auto Rally at the end of its second stage today.

Conditions during their 26-hour drive to Chambery, France, and back, proved so treacherous that only about 45 of the 177 crews who started out Tuesday managed to struggle back.

The 32-year-old Andersson headed the trio of Alpines with a 32 second advantage after the nine speed tests. Filling the next two places were the all-French crews of Jean-Claude Andruet, Guy Bial and Jean-Luc Therier-Marcel Callewaert.

Sweden's Bjorn Waldegaard, winner for the past two years, remained in fourth place with his Porsche 914-6—one minute seven seconds off the pace.

But unofficial reports said the Swedish farmer again had been penalized more than one minute for being late at a control point.

Both cars and drivers showed signs of their ordeal amid the ice and snow of the Alps, as they limped into the sunny quayside at Monte Carlo.

Missing lights, shattered windshields and badly dented bodywork told the tale of 26 hours of non-stop driving in the appalling conditions.

Sandro Munari of Italy held on to fifth place in a Works Lancia with the Nissan Datsun of Finn Rauno Aaltonen in sixth spot.

Alpine, with six of its entries still in the top 12, now appeared almost certain to win. Datsun received a setback when its first car, driven by South African Ewold and Minota-Ann Van Bergen, was forced to retire after the fifth speed test during the night.

Britain's Tony Fall and John Wood in the second Datsun were unofficially 11th.

West Germany's Hannelore Werner dramatically took over the lead in the ladies prize in the early morning hours. French girl Marie-Claude Beaumont, in an Open Commodore, lost 20 minutes changing a wheel during the eighth speed test.

Miss Werner's BMW was now some seven minutes ahead as the two reached here.

Slumping Warriors In Detroit

DETROIT (UPI) —The San Francisco Warriors are riding a three-game loss skein moving into tough Detroit tonight.

They trailed at Baltimore only 99-98 with 1:20 to go Tuesday night but then collapsed for the 103-98 loss.

Earl Monroe and Jack Marin combined for 47 points and Gus Johnson hauled down 22 rebounds for the Bullets.

The Warriors got 23 points out of Nate Thurmond, 20 out of Fritz Williams and 17 out of Jeff Mullins, but the bench failed to pick up the slack when the starters took a rest.

A setback tonight would leave the Warriors at .500, but still with a solid lead over third-place Seattle in the Western Division.

HUSKY PUPPIE WINS AT FIRST SHOW

Mayhill Browneyed Misty takes a stance with owner, Dr. Gar. C. May, San Rafael, as she went from a first in Puppie Class to second place in the working group, in her first show. This 6 months old Siberian Husky bitch represented Mayhill Kennels at the Golden Valley Kennel Club, Turlock, on January 17. Over 700 dogs were entered in the show.

From this showing, she will join four other entries from Mayhill Kennels in the Golden Gate Kennel Club show at the Cow Palace, January 31. Included in the listing will be her illustrious sire, Muskaka Sandyhills Red Flash, who has garnered 11 championship points in 55 days; including 2 majors. He went best of breed as an open entry over 7 specials at the San Matio Kennel Club Show, Nov., 1970. Flash is also entered in the Westminister National, Madison Square Garden, New York City, in February.

An Introduction For Dick Williams

OAKLAND (UPI) —Charles O. Finley resents assertions that he is running the Oakland A's club from his farm in LaPorte, Ind.

"It's not true," he told a news conference Tuesday. But then added that "if I did, I must have done a helluva job. We finished second the past two years."

Finley was in good humor at the conference, called to introduce new Oakland A's pilot Dick Williams.

He said some have worried because attendance for the A's and California Golden Seals, also owned by Finley, has not been good.

But the multi-millionaire insurance man said "just this morning I swung the biggest group insurance deal of my life. I sold a health, life and dismemberment group policy to all my former managers. So, I figure that will take up any financial slack."

Finley has fired 10 managers in nine years, counting Hank Bauer twice since he was fired twice.

Finley promised that Williams, who led Boston to its pennant in 1967, would have "100 per cent authority on the field, to sink or swim with it."

Williams finally took over from his talkative boss and commented that "he can't see any reason why the A's can't win the Western Division this year."

Concerning outfielder Reggie Jackson—a star in 1969 and a flop in 1970—Williams said that he'd seen him play in Puerto Rico this winter and "his attitude is so good it's almost scarey."

He said third baseman Sal Bando will keep his job as team captain.

Bando, also on hand, said "our problem last year wasn't so much that we were a young team; we were immature. We need a heavy hand. I know Dick has one."

Williams also indicated that the A's might face some tough discipline this season.

"What I want most," said Williams, "is togetherness on this club. Even if they hate me, I want togetherness out there—the players."

Brundage Asks IOC To Ban Some Skiers

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI)—The president of the International Olympic Committee brought pressure on IOC members today to support his position that 10 Alpine skiers should be banned from the 1972 Winter Olympics for professionalism.

Avery Brundage asked the committee members to answer four questions under an Olympic rule which permits the president to conduct a poll when an urgent answer to a problem is required.

Brundage's four questions were:

—Can the Alpine skiers who participated in a commercial ski camp at Mammoth Mountain, Calif., last year be admitted to the Olympics?

—Can the Alpine skiers whose pictures and names are extensively used to advertise commercial articles be admitted to the Olympics?

—Can a skier be admitted to the Olympics, who publicly boasts that he earns $50,000 to $60,000 annually from the sport and wears a uniform bearing the name of his employer at races?

—Can you agree with the proposal of the International Ski Federation that Alpine ski racers should be compensated for the loss of five and a half months of income annually?

FIS president Marc Hodler asked the committee members to be prompt with their answers.

Howell Is Back In Seals' Lineup

OAKLAND (UPI) —Gray-haired Harry Howell returns to the California Golden Seals lineup tonight when Minnesota skates into the Oakland Arena.

The veteran defenseman has been out of action with a back problem.

Another casualty, Bill Hicke, is also scheduled to play despite a broken nose. He'll wear a combination helmet and face guard.

Howell's return gives the Seals six defensemen for the first time in two months. Earlier, Bert Marshall didn't see any action until two weeks ago and now Carol Vadnais is out of action with a broken thumb

Barber Now 2nd In PGA Money

Shaw has won $29,752 so far in the young tournament season. Barber has earned $29,129. Bob Lunn is third with $26,218.

N.Y. Probe Continues On Bribery

Buffalo, N.Y. (UPI) —Three top Erie County officials are scheduled to appear Friday before a federal grand jury investigating alleged bribery, extortion and conspiracy charges in connection with the county's proposed $50 million domed stadium project.

County Attorney Robert E. Casey, Jr., and Democratic legislators Frank C. Ludera and Frederick F. Pordum confirmed they would testify voluntarily before the federal panel.

Ludera and Pordum have admitted certain "overtures" had been made to them in attempts to influence their voting on the project. They did not disclose who made the attempts.

Both legislators said last Thursday they had informed the county attorney of the alleged bribe attempts and all three have since offered to make the information available to both the federal and county grand juries.

The county grand jury will resume Monday as it probes alleged bribery, larceny, conspiracy and official misconduct charges.

J. Lloyd Walker, the stadium's project engineer, is scheduled to appear before the panel to continue testimony he began Monday, the first day of the panel's investigation.

Knicks Handle Bucks

By U.P. International

Lew Alcindor still can't beat a healthy Willis Reed.

Earlier this month Milwaukee defeated New York for the only time this season while the Knicks team captain was suffering from one of his numerous ailments. Reed made up for that painful engagement Tuesday night when he led New York to a 107-98 victory over the Bucks with a 35-point scoring spree.

What's more, Reed held Alcindor, who tallied 29 points, scoreless in the last 6 :22 of the game, just when Milwaukee needed Big Lew's scoring punch. Oscar Robertson picked up the slack with six points in a 10-point Buck outburst that whittled a fourth quarter one-point Knick lead to one at 95-94.

But Reed's final field goal, two key baskets by Dick Barnett and five points by Bill Bradley in the last 52 seconds gave New York its third victory over the Bucks this season.

It was Reed's ability to hold Alcindor to a standoff that enabled the Knicks to beat Milwaukee in last season's playoffs.

Robertson refused to see any significance in the fact that three of Milwaukee's nine losses this season, lowest in the National Basketball Association, have been at the hands of the Knicks.

"We didn't get into our patterns very well and when you do that against the Knicks; you're in trouble," Robertson commented. "Reed was a lot more steady tonight, but the result shouldn't have any bearing on our future meetings."

Tommy Davis Returns To A's

OAKLAND (UPI) —The Oakland Athletics hace re-acquired free agent outfielder Tommy Davis and signed him to a 1971 contract.

The two-time batting champ hit .290 for the A's last season before being sold to the Chicago Cubs during their pennant drive. The Cubs recently released him and he'll be used primarily as a pinch-hitter for Oakland.

The A's Tuesday also announced the signing of durable righthander Chuck Dobson, who was 16-15 last season, and minor leaguers Don Boyd, Dwain Anderson and Ron Clark.

A New Car For Howley; Haywood Can Keep Playing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Linebacker Chuck Howley of the Dallas Cowboys was awarded an automobile by Sport Magazine Tuesday for being the Most Valuable Player in the Super Bowl game on Jan. 17.

Howley's Dallas Cowboys were beaten 16-13 by the Baltimore Colts, but Howley played brilliantly on defense and intercepted two passes.

Howley became the first member of the losing team to receive the award that was won by Len Dawson of Kansas City last year.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Spencer Haywood can keep playing with the Seattle Supersonics — at least for a while.

The Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday denied a motion by the National Basketball Association for a stay of a lower court injunction permitting the 21-year-old Haywood to stay with Seattle.

A Los Angeles judge last week issued the injunction and set a March 2 trial date for the case of Haywood, the 6-8 Olympic and Detroit University star who jumped to Seattle from Denver of the rival American Basketball Association.

VILLANOVA, Pa. (UPI)—Howard Porter, basketball star at Villanova University, has been given the green light to keep playing for the 17th ranked Wildcats, who sport a 15-4 record.

The 6-foot-7 forward was reported to have signed an agreement to play in the American Basketball Association, but this was denied by Porter.

Football

NEW YORK (UPI)—The New York Jets and the Kansas City Chiefs, two former Super Bowl champions, will meet in an exhibition game the night of Aug. 30 in Kansas City, it was announced Wednesday by Jets' coach and general manager Weeb Ewbank.

The Jets will also play preseason games against the Detroit Lions in Tampa, Fla., on Aug. 7 and the Pittsburgh Steelers in Cleveland on Sept. 4.

General

COLUMBIA, S. C. (UPI)—Harold "Bo" Hagan, former head football coach and athletic director at Rice University, is returning to the University of South Carolina where he was a star quarterback in the post-World War II era.

Hagan will be an administrative assistant to Athletic Director Paul Dietzel and will assume his new duties as soon as he winds up his affairs in Houston.

Skiing

ADELBODEN, Switzerland (UPI)—Helene Sonderegger of Switzerland defeated Tamara Marcinuk of Fitchburg, Mass., Tuesday by more than three seconds to win the women's giant slalom in the seventh World Winter Games for the Deaf.

Psycho-Cybernetics And The S.F. Giants

Psycho-cybernetics is a tongue twister with which the Giants wrestled last spring. "What's it all about?" asked Willie Mays who missed the first clubhouse meeting at which the baseball club was introduced to psycho-cybernetics.

"Concentration," explained Jim Davenport to the captain of the Giants. "That's it in one word. The doctor wants us to concentrate, think positively."

"MAN," REPLIED Mays, "what does he think I've been doing for 20 years?"

"Maybe," said Davenport, "if you'd been concentrating right you'd have 800 instead of 600 homers by now."

Mays, who had arrived 24 hours late for opening of 1970 spring training because urgent business had kept him in San Francisco, said: "I'm going to be at that next session just to see what the doctor — what's his-name — tells me."

DR. FRANCIS JACKS, San Francisco specialist in internal medicine, would have told Mays precisely what he had told all other members of the Giants but Horace Stoneham cancelled the course in positive thinking after the initial session.

Stoneham wasn't dissatisfied with the results of Dr. Jacks' program in mental training. Indeed, the owner of the ball club ordered the program for the entire team because of Dr. Jacks' success during the winter with several Giants who had volunteered for positive thinking lessons.

BUT STONEHAM was disappointed at the negative reaction of the team's veterans to any formal course in positive thinking. It sounded silly to them and, in fact, the first clubhouse meeting last spring did resemble an early morning seance.

A sleepy-eyed squad began filing into the clubhouse at 8 a.m. Dr. Jacks explained what the program was all about. Then he urged the players to relax, to lower the lids of their eyes, stretch out their legs and even to wiggle their toes to speed the relaxing process.

The players were further urged to concentrate on their good hitting days and how they were swinging and striding. In other words, as Dr. Jacks explained, they might by themselves discover the reasons why they enjoyed success. Banish negative thoughts of slumps.

THERE WERE snickers from skeptics when Dr. Jacks began asking individual members of the team what they were thinking about.

"Hitting," said Davenport when the question was put to the former Gold Glove third baseman.

"And how are you doing?" asked the doctor.

"Not so good," said Davenport who later in the season retired as an active player to become manager of the Phoenix Giants.

Bernie Williams, a talented rookie outfielder who was a year away last spring but may make the big team this year, drew a big laugh when he said he was mentally hitting the ball good but pulling everything foul.

Rested Marin Tars Host Santa Rosa

By DAVID EINSTEIN

After a week of rest and recuperation, the College of Marin Tars take their home court tonight for a Camino Norte Conference basketball game against Santa Rosa Junior College.

The Kentfield club needed a rest following a disastrous loss to Contra Costa in the last game before the semester break. The great San Pablo catastrophe, 91-62, cost the Tars a share of first place in the CNC, even though it was only their second loss of the season.

Overall, Marin's record is 18-2, still the best of any junior college in California, and good enough for a seventh place state ranking. Contra Costa and West Valley, with whom they are tied for second place, are ranked fifth and 14th; all three have 4-1 league records. At the top of the league is De Anza of Cupertino, undefeated in five games and ranked 17th.

With four teams in the top 20, the CNC is now considered the toughest league in the state, tougher even than the always powerful Southern California Conference. How Marin will fare in such company the rest of the way will be somewhat determined Friday and next Wednesday, in games against De Anza and West Valley that wrap up the first league round robin. Needless to say, whoever made out Marin's schedule was a sadist.

Maybe Marin coach John Panagakis should lay in a supply of aspirin. Because if his troops play no better in those games than they did against Contra Costa, they'll need a funeral, not a rest.

But the coach isn't overly worried. He believes, as do most of the Tar fans who saw the Contra Costa game, that "We just didn't play that night. It just wasn't our night." As a matter of fact, he is optimistic, saying, "It's early in the year, and one loss doesn't end our season."

For now, the Tars are concentrating on Santa Rosa, which, though winless in league play, is an arch rival. "Anything goes in this game," says Panagakis. "They've got nothing to lose."

Marin's fortunes, as always, rest largely on the shoulders of guard Joe Smith and center Roosevelt Green. Neither had a particularly good night against Contra Costa — they only got 26 points between them. But Smith's average through 20 games is 19.4, and Green is 17.7, and they stand to improve those statistics tonight.

The game, which begins at 8 o'clock, will be broadcast by KTIM FM (101.9), with Bob Dinsmore handling the play-by-play.

FOOTBALL DRAFT BEGINS TOMORROW

Time Is Running Out For Undecided Patriots

NEW YORK (UPI)—Time is running out on the Boston Patriots.

The Patriots, who finished with the worst record in the National Football League last season and thus earned the No. 1 choice in the college draft, aren't sure what to do with it.

The draft opens Thursday at 10 a.m. EST at New York's Belmont Plaza Hotel and the Boston front office must decide whether to exercise the choice and take Stanford's Jim Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy winning quarterback, or trade the rights for established veterans.

"We haven't made any decision yet," said a Patriots' spokesman Tuesday. "We're still thinking it over. We may still trade the choice. If that happens, it could be anytime up to Thursday morning."

Representatives from close to 20 pro teams have been on the Patriots' doorstep ever since the season ended. At least eight teams are in dire need of a quarterback and Plunkett, who set NCAA career and single season passing records, seems to fit the bill perfectly.

The Baltimore Colts, the World Champions who have two first round choices, are one of the leading candidates for Boston's choice. The Colts supposedly have offered a wide receiver and a linebacker, two of the Patriots' critical needs, plus one of their first round picks.

Baltimore earned an extra pick on the first round when Miami was forced to hand its over for signing Colts' Coach Don Shula last year. The Colts are the only team with two first round selections.

The Colts are looking for the heir apparent for John Unitas and Earl Morrall, a pair of aging veterans, and feel Plunkett or Santa Clara's Dan Pastorini would fit in perfectly.

San Francisco, where Californian Plunkett's rooting interests lie, is another club seeking the Stanford star as an heir to John Brodie.

New Orleans has second choice in the draft and presumably will take Mississippi's Archie Manning. The Saints traded away Bill Kilmer, last year's quarterback, to Washington Saturday and probably will hand the first-string quarterback slot to whichever signal caller they choose on the first round.

Other selections in the first round in order are:

Houston, Buffalo, Philadelphia, the New York Jets, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, Denver, Washington, Chicago, Green Bay, San Diego, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, St. Louis, the New York Giants, Oakland, Los Angeles, Detroit, Baltimore (from Miami), San Francisco, Minnesota, Dallas and the Colts' own choice.

A time limit of 15 minutes per choice is in effect for the first two rounds and a five-minute deadline is set on the remaining 15 rounds. A total of 442 players will be drafted in the two-day session.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Beware Of Pushing Resourceful Foe — He Might Make Overbid

The normal object of a sacrifice bid is to lose less at a deliberate overbid than the opponents could make at a contract of their own. If the opponents are stubborn they may bid past your sacrifice and wind up with a minus score instead of a plus. But beware of pushing a resourceful opponent too far; he may manage to bring his overbid home.

SLAM GAMBLE

When today's hand was played some years ago in a national tournament, the late Mike Michaels refused to let East play the hand at six spades. The penalty was bound to be insufficient, and Michaels preferred to gamble that he could make a grand slam.

East should have gone on to seven spades. He would have gone down six, for a penalty of 1,100 points. This would have been less than allowing South to make a vulnerable small slam, let alone a grand slam. But North was willing to gamble that he had pushed Michaels overboard.

SURE LOSER

Declarer ruffed the opening spade lead and looked at the dummy with some doubt. Apparently there was a sure diamond loser.

Michaels cashed the ace of clubs, led a trump to the king, ruffed a club in dummy, returned to his hand with a trump and cashed the king of clubs to discard a diamond. If the queen of clubs fell, he could discard dummy's other diamond.

When there was no such luck, Michaels ruffed his last club in dummy, ruffed a second spade, and led his next-to-last trump to discard dummy's last low diamond.

FOUR CARDS

This left South with one trump and three diamonds. Dummy had two spades and the two top diamonds. East couldn't come down safely to four cards.

If East saved three diamonds and only one spade, South would lead a diamond to dummy, ruff a spade, and return to dummy with a diamond to cash the last spade. If East saved two spades and only two diamonds, declarer would cash both of the top diamonds and then ruff a spade to cash the last diamond in his hand.

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 27, the 27th day of 1971.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aquarius.

On this day in history:

In 1880 Thomas Edison was granted a patent for an electric incandescent lamp.

In 1943 the 8th Air Force staged World War II's first all-American raid on Germany, striking Wilhelmshaven.

In 1964 Sen. Margaret Chase Smith became the first woman to challenge for the Presidential nomination of a major party. She lost.

In 1967 astronauts Virgil Grisson, Edward White and Roger Chaffee died when their space capsule caught fire during a test at Cape Kennedy.

A thought for today: Thomas Edison said, "There is no substitute for hard work."

District Of Columbia Crime Rate Declines

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The crime rate in the District of Columbia dropped last year for the first year since 1956, and local officials credited an expanded police force and narcotics treatment programs for the change.

In 1970, compared with the year before, homicides dropped 23 per cent, rapes 6.8 per cent and robberies 4.9 per cent among crimes reported.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Airline Troubles May Slack Off

By ROGER E. SPEAR

q. I am interested in your opinion of the airline industry and in particular Pacific Southwest Airlines. — D.C.

A. If the economy can stage at least a moderate recovery in 1971, most carriers should experience significant revenue improvement. Whether this can be carried down to net is another story. Current estimates place the 1970 deficit for the 12 major carriers at about $120 million compared with a profit in 1969 of $147 million.

If the downtrend of the last three years continues unabated, this deficit would exceed $200 million in 1971. Further additions of the 747 aircraft to fleets may result in a 10 per cent capacity gain for 1971, and if passenger traffic regains some of its former lustre, this gain can be converted into a sharp profit upswing. And December figures indicate that traffic may be picking up.

The industry has already instituted several economy measures. At last count 2500 workers had been dropped from the carriers' payrolls, scheduled flights had been reduced by 5 per cent and a 30 per cent reduction in spending for aircraft and facilities has been budgeted for 1971. Other sources of aid include mergers and possible assistance from an administration anxious to avert an airborne Penn Central with elections in the offing.

The proposed easing in depreciation rulings would also prove beneficial. Pacific Southwest is in a somewhat unique position, operating solely in California and thereby avoiding CAB regulation. Thus fares have been scaled to optimum levels, emphasis placed on frequently scheduled flights and the reservation system simplified.

Revenues for the nine months ended September, advanced 30 per cent year-to-year, while net income gained 44 per cent to $1.11 a share. A labor cost squeeze was offset by reduced fuel and insurance costs, enabling margins to widen for the period.

1971 results should benefit from higher receipts in both car and aircraft leasing activities and by authorization to round off fares. Purchases in speculative accounts could prove worthwhile.

Kodak Plans Hike In Capital Outlay

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Eastman Kodak Co. said it plans $364 million in capital expenditures this year, an increase of about 17 per cent from 1970's spending.

The program will provide facilities for product improvement and increase capacity in heavy demand areas, according to Chairman Louis K. Eilers. Of the total, $281 million is slated for the United States and Canada and $83 million for associate companies of the international photographic division.

Phone Rates Higher For Interstate

NEW YORK (UPI) — The telephone company began charging higher rates on certain types of interstate phone calls Tuesday, marking the first general increase since 1953.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said the rate hikes, which went through on a temporary basis pending full approval by the Federal Communications Commission, were expected to increase its interstate revenues by about 3 per cent.

The rates went up on calls requiring operator assistance, such as collect calls, person-to-person calls and credit card calls. Smaller increases also were applied to shorter-haul station calls dialed by customers during busy weekday daytime hours.

The FCC has scheduled hearings for March on AT&T's 6 per cent rate boost on interstate calls. The telephone company is keeping track of the extra money collected through the interim boost and will refund it if the FCC says no.

Rates for person-to-person calls went up 20 to 30 cents for the first three minutes. Station to station calls placed with an operator's assistance, including credit card and collect calls went up five to 30 cents, depending upon distance.

Trade Balance Hits $2.7 Billion In '70

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U. S. exports exceeded imports by $2.7 billion last year, more than double the $1.3 billion favorable trade balance recorded in 1969, the Commerce Department reported.

The department said exports for the year totaled $42.7 billion, an increase of 14 per cent over the 1969 total. Imports last year totaled $40 billion, an increase of about 11 per cent over the year.

Indonesian Oil

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Natomas Co. said it has discovered oil off the southeast Sumatra, Indonesia coast. The company said a subsidiary, Independent Indonesian American Petroleum Co., said a well tested oil of about 5,500 barrels daily from four separate intervals.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

Self-Employment Tax Applies To Income Of $400 Or More

Everyone who has self-employment income of $400 or more is required to file a Social Security Self-Employment tax return. That is Schedule C-3 of the Federal Income Tax Return, Form 1040.

Your social security self-employment tax is credited to your social security account and will be taken into account in computing the amount of social security you will receive on retirement.

Your self-employment tax is .069 of your self-employment income up to $7,800 for 1970 — a maximum of $538.20.

Self-employment income is the net profit of your business or your farm income.

You may have more than one business or farm. Then you combine your self-employment income or loss from all businesses.

You may be a partner in a business. Then you must include your share of the partnership income or loss in computing your net earnings for self-employment.

Wages (but not drawings) your receive from the partnership must be included, plus your share of the earnings or minus your share of the losses. All individuals engaged in a trade, business or the pursuit of a profession in any capacity, other than employees, are subject to the self-employment tax, except public officials elected or appointed.

Duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed ministers of churches, members of religious orders (who have not taken a vow of poverty), and Christian Science practitioners are now subject to self-employment tax, but may, under certain conditions, request exemption by filing form 4361. If you file form 4361, write "Exempt-Form 4361" on the back of form 1040.

If you previously filed an effective waiver certificate, form 2031, to pay self-employment tax, you may not now file for an exemption. See Publication 484, Social Security for Clergymen.

Ministers and members of religious orders must include in their earnings from self-employment (but not for income tax purposes) the rental value of a parsonage or allowance for the rental value of the parsonage and the value of meals and lodging furnished them for the convenience of their employers.

If your wages subject to social security tax were in excess of $7,800, you are not subject to the self-employment tax on any self-employment income you may have.

Ecology Agency Urges Warnings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A White House office has served notice on all federal agencies that they must come clean with the public before they do anything that might damage the environment.

Advance notice of any such action, to give the public time to react, would be required under revised "guidelines" projected by the Council on Environmental Quality headed by Russell E. Train.

Under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1970, federal agencies must prepare "environmental impact statements" on anything they plan to do that might "significantly" affect the human environment directly or indirectly, now or later.

Beth Steel Reports 42.5% Profit Drop

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bethlehem Steel Corp., which recently touched off a row with the government over steel price boosts, slashed its quarterly dividend by one third today and reported a 42.5 per cent drop in 1970 profits despite higher sales.

Beth Steel directors cut the quarterly dividend to 30 cents from 45 cents per share, beginning with a payout March 10 to holders of record Feb. 9. The nation's second largest steel producer had been paying 45 cents quarterly since the second quarter of 1969 when the steel industry was on its way to a record year in production and shipments.

Market Is Lower Near Final Bell

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market turned lower today after nine consecutive advances. Trading was heavy.

With less than an hour to go, the Dow Jones Industrial Average of 30 selected blue chips was off more than 6½ points at 860.08. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was off 1.03 at 94.56.

Of the 1,657 issues crossing the tape, 1,081 pointed lower, while 330 declined.

A four-hour volume of 14,760,000 shares compared with 15,820,000 shares traded at a comparable period yesterday.

Many analysts said most of the market's pressure stemmed from pent up profit taking following a lengthy advance. Others felt the setback also reflected depressing corporate earnings news from the steel industry, and a preliminary report of a rise in wholesale prices in January which dampened the administration's claim that it had turned the corner in its fight against inflation and rising prices.

Wholesale price increases usually point to higher consumer prices.

The government also reported that its index of leading economic indicators, regarded as a barometer of future movement in the economy, advanced in December for the second consecutive month.

A government spokesman said last month's rise reflected the end of the General Motors strike and the continuation of the basic uptrend underway in the indicators since the low point last May.

Harold C. Passer, assistant commerce secretary for economic policy, said the index "strongly suggests that the economy will continue to expand in the months ahead."

Among the day's most active issues were Trans-World Airlines, Madison Square Gardens, Pennzoil, Eastern Air Lines and Addressograph-Multigraph.

Just What Is Meant By U.S. 'Withdrawal'?

When he was campaigning for the presidency in 1968, Richard M. Nixon said he had a plan for ending the Vietnam war. But he said he could not reveal it until after the election.

Shortly after taking office in January, 1969 — two years ago — Mr. Nixon announced that his plan "envisages the complete withdrawal of all American combat forces."

In June, 1969, he expressed hope that "all U. S. ground combat forces" could be withdrawn by the end of 1970.

In November, 1969, the President said: "We have adopted a plan which we have worked out in cooperation with the South Vietnamese for the complete withdrawal of all U.S. ground combat forces and their replacement by South Vietnamese forces on an orderly scheduled timetable."

In November, 1970, he said: "I again reaffirm this government's acceptance of eventual, total withdrawal of American troops." But, he added: "In turn, we must see the permanent withdrawal of all North Vietnamese troops and be given reasonable assurances they will not return."

EARLY THIS MONTH, Defense Secy. Melvin R. Laird said at a press conference in Bangkok, Thailand, that most U. S. troops "with combat responsibility" will be withdrawn by May 1. And he mentioned a goal of mid-summer for ending "U.S. combat responsibilities."

Laird's remarks called forth the usual Washington "clarification." Jerry W. Freidheim, a Pentagon spokesman, said the 385,000 American soldiers still in Vietnam would be reduced by about 100,000 by May 1. But he said more than 100,000 of the 285,000 then remaining will be "combat troops."

All this tends to be confusing. But a likely sounding explanation was given a few months ago by Walter Lippmann, writing in Newsweek.

"OUR STRATEGY is not to buy concessions from Hanoi with our military withdrawal, but to buy patience and endurance from the American people for an indefinitely long American occupation in South Vietnam," wrote Lippmann.

"The theory is that a long occupation, using some 200,000 support troops and the artillery and the Air Force, can be made acceptable to the American people."

The emphasis on "ground combat troops" and "troops with combat responsibility" seems to bear out Lippmann's analysis.

Withdrawal of such troops, however, in no sense means U. S. disinvolvement from the mess in Southeast Asia. We got in there originally with a handful of "advisers."

MUCH IS MADE of the presence of a small number of Russian aviators and missilemen in the United Arab Republic. Much is made of the possible presence of a few Russian military men in Cuba.

Can we expect to promote the cause of peace if we keep a much larger number of fighting men indefinitely in Southeast Asia?

The "complete withdrawal" President Nixon has "reaffirmed" is hinged on ending of the war. But that is a matter between the North and South Vietnamese governments.

Isn't it about time we left it up to them to settle it?

AFFAIRS OF STATE

Conservation License Plates — Great Financial Fiasco

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — When, as and if the state wants money to combat air and other pollution, it's going to have to dig deep in the taxpayers' pockets.

Because the California Environmental Protection Program Fund not only is broke, but in the red.

Reason, there aren't enough tax-paying patriots buying special "prestige" automobile license plates to meet the obligations of the fund.

The state legislature tried a noble experiment, and voted a law providing for issuance of special license plates, with any combination of letters and numbers within reason.

The special plates cost the state $5 to make. The sales cost was $25 per plate. The theory was that public-spirited citizens, who at one time used political favoritism to get the license numbers they wanted, would flock to the motor vehicle department in droves to pay for the special plates.

It was, perhaps, the biggest bad judgment the legislature has come up with in many a long day. So certain were the solons that the special plates couldn't miss that they appropriated nearly two million dollars from the special fund set up by the bill.

So far, the Department of Motor Vehicles reports the gross sales have amounted to $350,000. Figuring the cost of production, and the clerical costs of handling, not to mention the special files necessary to look up the special numbers in case they have to be checked, the total take comes closer to being a loss rather than a profit for the environmental fund.

One of the biggest complaints is the repeat $25 fee every year for renewal. Many persons say they would enjoy having a special plate to inflate their ego and as a conversation piece, and wouldn't mind paying the extra $25. But when it comes to an extra $25 every year, it just isn't worth the money.

It was suggested in some quarters that the special license plate be made a project of the Sierra Club, the super-duper conservation organization, so the members could contribute to improvement of the ecology.

But probably Sierra Club members are on the same plane with other citizens, attempting to meet the steadily increasing tax bills of the federal government, the state, the counties, the cities, and the special districts, and mayhap are thinking of saving a buck rather than contribute it to the state.

Any way you look at it, the plan won't make much, if any money.

When the legislature conceived the idealistic method of raising money, it did not call in the hard-headed businessmen who have had experience in sales work. In fact, there are few hard-headed businessmen left in the legislature, now that it's turned into a professional body.

Joyless Nature Handicaps Board

Re: Jan. 23 article on the recall petition of Mr. Gordon C. Wright

There is little to be questioned in the action of the two women, Mrs. Ann Goff and Mrs. Carolyn Hunter, who have filed for the recall of Gordon C. Wright of the Reed District school board. Mr. Wright is a man whose cold and joyless nature has permeated the school atmosphere too long. His is a hostile showmanship that curbs even the most enlightenen enthusiasm of those attending the board meetings.

The sad climate of negativism that in the beginning of Mr. Wright's term wore the guise of a serious "getting down to business" of wise spending of district monies and a reevaluation of educational philosphies was, in reality, a reversal of all the healthy progress this district had made under the previous board. Unfortunately, we must hold ourselves responsible for remaining silent until the long overdue but brave action of Mrs. Goff and Mrs. Hunter.

Let us hope that now that the silent majority has spoken we learn our lesson well and not allow ourselves to be lulled to sleep by men such as Mr. Wright who reign with secrecy and mistrust and whose weapon is the intimidation of those who must associate with him. Let us also hope that once the negative act of recall is done with, we positively act to elect persons to our school board who do not need to use their office to enhance themselves.

Blame Must Rest On Social Worker

Regarding your welfare story of Jan. 6 on the "Litteral family" and their wholly disgraceful treatment of their rental residence. As Mrs. Vel DeLeon wrote on Jan. 13, a very large share of the blame must fall on the incompetance of the welfare department, and particularly the shameful "welfare at any price" philosophy of people like social worker Mary Culver. If social workers refuse to use their jurisdiction to prevent such situations and indeed insist on subsidizing such situations, then these workers must be replaced. They should realize their action, or lack of action, eventually guarantees that private housing will be made unavailable to all welfare families.

Regardless of their asinine desires to cater to welfare recipients' every whim, these workers must realize that property owners, too, have rights.

Furthermore, as the Supreme Court has recently ruled, welfare monies are in the nature of trust funds, for which the social worker must assume a fiduciary responsibility. The taxpayer is entitled to know that his money is being properly expended. . .

School Trustee Deserves Support

The attempt to unseat Gordon Wright, chairman of the Reed Union School District board of trustees, reported in the Independent-Journal last week, is utterly incomprehensible.

Mr. Wright is a man of exceptional ability, dedicated to the concept that children of this district should have the finest possible education. He consistently seeks objective evidence to ensure this.

It is obvious that he also has courage and stamina in the face of rather persistent abuse. May we suggest that his detractors join with him in an objective examination of district problems, rather than introducing more dissention on the basis of inadequate information.

Mr. Wright deserves the support and cooperation of his fellow citizens — and their thanks.

Saving Of Birds Gets Top Priority

This article is addressed to the people of Marin County and the Bay Area who offered their free services to clean the beaches and save the birds who were helpless victims of the oil slick. I have been working at the Novato Humane Society, and we have set up a wonderful operation to save every bird we possibly can.

Each individual life, to us, is previous, and we are spending a tremendous amount of time caring for each and every bird. We have a bird hospital and a small staff of very patient and loving people. Our death rate is now about 80 per cent, about 12 per cent lower than the expected 92 per cent.

On Sunday, two representatives of the Fish and Game Department and the Fleishacker zoo came to Novato asking for our birds. We abruptly refused, and sent a highly respectful representative to the zoo to check out the situation. There at the zoo, the hundreds of birds they have are dying at a very tremendous rate, much greater than ours. The scientists there do not care at all if the birds die, they just experiment with them. They have no special care for sick birds, so virtually all their sick birds are going to die, if they haven't already. Now they want to have every bird that has been rescued, but they aren't going to get ours. They know, as well as we do, that if they were to transport our birds to the zoo, most of them would die during transportation. When confronted with this fact, one of the representatives stated directly that they do not care. This is insane, cruel, and positively against the whole idea of saving any birds. Besides, it is highly probable that any birds that survive there will be sold to other zoos, instead of turned back to wildlife!

We want to save every bird we have from sickness and death, and we are going to turn them back to nature when they are well again. We hope that the people who read this will understand our situation, and help our cause. We still need many towels and warm flannel clothes for our hospital, and we are very thankful for the previous donations of clothing, fish for the birds, food for the workers, and everything else, including volunteers. Let us all hope for the best, and save every little life we can, while they're still there.

THE DRUMMONDS

Can Nixon And Congress Learn From Mistakes Of The Past?

By ROSCOE and GEOFFREY DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON — Now that President Nixon is asking Congress to join him in enacting a worthy and ambitious domestic program to improve the State of the Union, the question is: What next?

Will Nixon work in cooperative spirit with this newly elected Democratic Congress or will he lapse back into barking at it and quarreling?

Will the President do far more than he did during the past two years to mobilize public support for the challenging, needed new measures he outlined in his State of the Union message? If not, he will likely lose most of them.

Finally, will the dominant Democrats in the Senate have the wisdom to realize that they can be grievously hurt themselves politically by devoting most of their time to attacking the President instead of attacking the problems?

ON THE SURFACE the outlook is not encouraging.

The elements which turned the Senate into inefficient stalemate last year are still present.

Nixon has not proved himself an effective advocate of his domestic programs and it remains to be seen whether he becomes one.

Many of the most influential Democratic senators see themselves as potential presidential nominees and each will be often looking to further his own pollitical interest, and not that of the party as a whole. This does not augur very well for a Democratic Congress co-operating with a Republican President to get things done — although the country is crying out for government to govern.

BUT THERE ARE some new factors which could bring about a productive legislative session.

Nixon learns from adversity. He wouldn't be President if he didn't. He had sharp setbacks from Congress in his first two years, and he had some adversities in the November election. In his recent conversation with four TV reporters, he was asked how he felt he had changed in office.

"The changes," he replied, "are more in an understanding of the job . . . I think I know better how to do the job."

The tone of his "State of the Union" message last week shows that Nixon aims to bring a new spirit of conciliation in his dealings with the Democratic Congress. If he maintains this spirit it will be politically hurtful to them to spurn it.

Mr. Nixon's message shows that he is decisively reordering priorities in ways many Democrats have been urging. He is untying the purse-strings on the budget in order to deal more boldly with a long list of social needs from welfare reforms to health care to rescuing the states and cities from imminent bankruptcy through revenue sharing, plus a radical restructuring of the executive branch.

IS IT INTELLIGENT for the Democrats to deny to Nixon the things which they said he should be doing? The party's 1968 presidential nominee, now back in his old seat in the Congress, Hubert Humphrey, is saying the right things at the right time. He's telling his colleagues that the most important and politically advantageous thing they can do is "to show the country that the Democrats can govern."

Right. And they can best do that by either helping to enact the urgent Nixon programs or improve them.

Humphrey knows from first-hand observation how a negative congressional record can wreck a party. He was there in 1948 when Senate Majority Leader Robert Taft announced that the Republican Congress would not approve any domestic legislation President Truman was asking because he (Taft) preferred to wait "until Dewey was elected." That "do-nothing" Republican Congress helped to elect Harry Truman.

What this country needs is a "do-something" Congress working co-operatively with a do-something President to get done what shouldn't wait.

BY NO MEANS NEUTRAL

The Consummate Senator: Russell Of Georgia

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — The United States Senate is what it is today in considerable part because of Richard B. Russell, yet it will never be the same without him.

He was publicly flat wrong on the most fundamental politcal issue of his time, yet he was respected by those who opposed him, and even by some of those whose lives were made miserable by the tradition he upheld.

Thousands of well-reasoned words were spoken at the Capitol this week against the rules of congressional seniority, but this one man's career as chairman of the Armed Services Committee was the best single exhibit of what is sensible about the system. Politicians as unalike as Harry Truman and Richard Nixon said out loud in the past that if Russell had been from anywhere but the Deep South he surely would have become President.

THERE WAS a time, when Russell was not long in the Senate and furious at northern civil rights advocates, that he suggested a federally financed shift of 1.5 million black families to the North and the same number of whites into the South, thus helping "equalize our racial problem."

But that was not typical of him. He was not a demagogue. He was an aristocratic, honorable southern gentleman, in all the decent connotations of the phrase.

He defeated a memorable demagogue, the gallus-snapping Gene Talmadge, to come to the Senate. In recent years, he left Georgia's share of fiery senatorial oratory to Gene's son, Herman. In the long-delayed action against civil rights legislation, he concentrated instead on constitutional and especially parliamentary tactics.

Although Russell organized the issuance of the defiant Southern Manifesto after the Supreme Court desegregation decision of 1954, that was show business, and he would not have denied it. And a decade later, when Lyndon Johnson mounted a total effort to put through John Kennedy's civil rights proposals, Russell let the new President know that he would not block it if in the end there would be none of the typical Johnsonian compromising to get the bill passed — if instead he and his southern colleagues were allowed to fight bravely and go down with flags flying. They did.

ALL THAT is the most familiar Russell, standing in the well of the Senate, his head tilted back to look down his hawklike nose through his bifocals, producing like a rabbit from a hat some long-buried parliamentary technicality to further delay the inevitable. What is less widely known is the breadth and depth of his intellect, particularly in political and military affairs.

Those with him at the NATO parliamentarians' conference in 1956 remember his handling of a resolution to condemn Russian intervention in Hungary. Calmly, he delivered a brilliant 15-minute analysis of internal politics in each allied country and concluded the resolution should be handled by Belgium. It passed.

He was just as informed about American state politics. Younger senators constantly came to him for advice — among them northern liberals who would never want their constituents to know — and when he counseled them he often began by saying, "Now, if I represented your state, I'd . . ." He knew their business as well as they did.

Other people said Lyndon Johnson was the consummate man of the Senate; Mr. Johnson would say Dick Russell was.

His positive achievements include guiding rural electrification and universal military training into law, keeping the Dixiecrats at home in the Democratic Party in 1952 by running as their candidate within the party and defusing the passionate controversy over Gen. Douglas MacArthur's dismissal by him impeccable conduct of the joint congressional inquiry.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

Voucher Plan Providing Explosive School Issue

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

The voucher plan has shaped up already as California's most explosive education issue for 1971.

The California Teachers Association is against it. The California Congress of Parents and Teachers is against it. Most school trustees and superintendents so far heard from are against it. State Supt. Wilson C. Riles is worried about it.

However, Gov. Ronald Reagan, who has espoused the plan, and Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan, D-South San Francisco, who is carrying the ball for it in this year's legislature, are by no means alone.

RYAN'S AB 29, which would authorize demonstration scholarship (voucher) programs in one or more districts, has been expanded and reintroduced as AB 150. And this time he has as co-authors Assemblymen Leon Ralph, D-Los Angeles; William Campbell, R-Hacienda Heights; Kenneth Cory, D-Anaheim, and Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico.

AB 150 seeks to eliminate one of the objections raised by the plan's opponents: that it would promote segregation because private schools accepting the vouchers might discriminate against minority race children. The new bill provides that "no school shall be eligible to negotiate demonstration scholarships" (that is, to cash the vouchers) "unless it is racially, ethnically, and socioeconomically integrated."

The new bill also would limit test of the plan to a seven-year period in one school district or group of districts with no fewer than 25,000 nor more than 200,000 enrollment, and provide for funding from the federal government.

WHAT IS THIS voucher plan that is causing the uproar?

It is very simple.

Under the voucher plan, parents of each school child would be given a voucher redeemable for that child's cost of education at either a public school or a private or parochial school. The parents would then endorse the voucher to the school where he entered his child, and that school would cash it with the state or the school district.

The results, however, might be far-reaching and far from simple.

Traditionally, the state bears a responsibility to provide schools. If the voucher plan were adopted statewide, it would instead bear a responsibility to provide each individual child an education.

It is conceivable — although extremely unlikely — that with such a plan the state in time would not need to provide schools at all.

THE MOST TELLING argument against the voucher plan is that it would be impossible for a school district to budget funds with such a plan in effect.

School budgeting already is full of guesswork. It would be almost all guesswork if the school board had no idea how many children would be in its schools the next fall. It could easily find itself with many more teachers than needed — and without money to pay them, since state support is based on attendance.

Proponents' answer to this is that the district would be obligated by the plan to provide schools so good that parents would send their children to the public schools by choice. This, they claim, would result in upgrading education in both the public and private schools.

Governor Reagan, in his "State of the State" message, urged that the voucher plan be given a limited trial to find out which side is right. State Superintendent Riles, although deeply distrustful of the plan, said after a conference with the governor that he would go along with that.

INCIDENTALLY, although the CTA has come out foursquare against the voucher plan, its state council (the top body in its organization) has not flatly opposed performance contracting in the schools. Elmer Wells, who runs CTA's Education News Service, for that reason took exception to the statement in a recent column that CTA opposes performance contracting. However, CTA leaders have on several occasions condemned what they see as serious dangers in such contracting, and CTA succssfully opposed a performance contracting bill (AB 272 by then-Assemblyman Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood) in last year's legislature.

Five Days Jail For Pot Charge

Thomas Keene Warner III, 27, of San Rafael, has been sentenced to five days in jail by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court.

Warner, who had earlier pleaded innocent, pleaded guilty Monday to a charge of possessing marijuana. He was arrested Aug. 14 in San Rafael when an off-duty policeman noticed what appeared to be marijuana plants at a house next-door to where the policeman was visiting.

High Court Upholds Antibussing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court has ruled that school districts may assign pupils to specific schools for integration purposes but may not force them to go there on a school bus.

That is the essence, the Supreme Court said yesterday, of the state's new "anti-bussing" law, which prohibits districts from bussing students outside their own school neighborhood without parental consent.

The court upheld the two-month-old anti-bussing law, which provides that no school district "shall require any student or pupils to be transported for any purpose or for any reason without the written permission of the parent or guardian."

But in a unanimous opinion, the high court held that all the law prohibits is the practice of forcing students to use district transportation in getting to the assigned school.

An interpretation that the law gives parents rights to refuse pupil assignments, the opinion said, "would beget a parental right to discriminate, and do so in a context of racial strife that would enable many to exploit that right to inflict racial prejudice.

"It would empower these private persons to inject the venom of racial discrimination into the veins of government. Such a statute would be unconstitutional on its face."

The case arose out of controversy concerning the proposed Park South Complex in San Francisco. The court decision upheld the legality of the school board's program under the new statute.

The majority opinion, written by Justice Mathew O. Tobriner, was concurred in by Justices Raymond E. Peters, Stanley Mosk and Raynond L. Sullivan. Justices Louis H. Burke, Chief Justice Donald R. Wright and Justice Marshall F. McComb wrote a brief separate concurring opinion.

"We know that racial animosity chiefly develops in the child who is reared in an environment that fosters it," the majority opinion said.

"We would keep our schools free from its contamination; indeed, our Supreme Court has said that our constitutional obligation compels the immediate cleansing of every schoolroom where the law countenances its presence.

"How, then, can we uphold as constitutional a statute that categorically bars a principwl and sometimes exclusive antidote to the spread and growth of this ugly toxin . . .?"

The court conceded that in some cases pupil assignment by school boards might not be "constitutionally compelled."

"In some situations, however, it is the only practical and efficient method of achieving school integration," and any law which prohibits it "necessarily legislates the preservation of racial imbalance.

"It therefore violates constitutional imperatives."

Another $42 Million For Liner Conversion

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state has approved nearly $42 million in tidelands oil revenues for Long Beach to convert the former luxury liner Queen Mary into a tourist attraction, the legislature was told yesterday.

At the same time, the city through last June had actually spent $21.5 million in tidelands funds on the project, reported Auditor General William H. Merrifield.

In a report to the legislature, he did not discuss the propriety of the expenditures but merely compared actual expenditures with authorizations for the project approved by the state Lands Commission.

In 1967, the city estimated that the cost of acquiring the liner and its conversion into a tourist attraction and maritime museum would be less than $8.7 million. Total investment of both private and public funds has since been set at roughly $60 million.

A staff report of the Lands Commission last month raised "legal questions" about the city's expenditure of tidelands revenues for reconditioning the ship. City Manager John Mansell immediately asserted that "all the money has been spent and will be spent in accordance with the state law."

Merrifield, in a report made public by Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, chairman of the legislature's Audit Committee, listed the biggest expenditure at $17.3 million for ship conversion.

This contrasted with $23.7 million authorized by the commission. Another $4.1 million was spent on site preparation, contrasting with the $8.4 million authorized by the commission.

Up to last July 1, the commission had authorized $32.1 million and $21.5 million in tidelands funds had actually been spent, the report showed.

But the commission last October made a "conditional nonobjection" to another $9.7 million for extra conversion and site development costs, bringing the total authorized expenditures to date to $41,978,550.

Merrifield also said the $21.5 million in expenditures did not include the city's Queen Mary Department administrative costs of $2.5 million or other city departments' costs of $328,515.

$200 Fine For Forgery Charge

Carolyn Rae Martinson of Mill Valley was fined $200 Monday by Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court for forging a prescription in order to obtain narcotics.

She had earlier pleaded innocent to the charge, but changed her plea to guilty yesterday.

Judge McGuire, who declared the crime a misdeameanor, also placed her on probation for one year.

Eight Big Firms Have Drug Woes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—More than eight out of 10 large companies have a problem of drug abuse among employes, a survey by the California State Chamber of Commerce disclosed Tuesday.

The study showed that the reported incidents of drugs in the factory or office increased 33 per cent in 1970 over the previous year.

"The large California company that doesn't have a drug problem is the exception rather than the rule," the chamber concluded.

The chamber sent questionnaires to the medical officers of 25 firms employing about 600,000 persons. The industries ranged from automotive manufacturing, to chemicals, missiles, public utilities and oil.

All but three of the firms said that drug abuse had been detected among employees. Nineteen said they had incidents during the first six months of last year.

Most of the companies said they gave an employee caught using drugs a chance to straighten himself out, but about 20 per cent of the firms said immediate disvissal was routine in drug cases.

The chamber's survey indicated that 83 per cent of the incidents involved employees under age 35. Men were involved 67 per cent of the time.

Attorney General Rips Speculation Development

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Local governments should have the power to reject a land development that "is not in the public interest and is not economically feasible," the state attorney general's office told a legislative committee yesterday.

"Developers should not be permitted to cut up land into raw lots for speculation," Assistant Attorney General Herbert E. Wenig told the assembly subcommittee which has been investigating subdivisions sold as lots for future development as vacation or retirement homes, or for speculation.

"A subdivision for this purpose should not be considered a proper use," Wenig said.

He told the committee that often developers in rural counties "can just subdivide the raw land" meeting minimal legal requirements "and sell lots to the public on the speculation that the land will increase in value."

"Like 'Humpty Dumpty' it may not be possible to put this type of subdivision together again for home construction," he said, because of the difficulty in getting cooperative action by buyers for putting in needed improvements. "Thus, the land lies subdivided, raw and barren."

Real estate agent Jerry Tucker of Redding told the committee that sales methods used by developers are "almost scary" and "almost compare" with high pressure tactics of car salesmen. He recommended buyers have the right to withdraw from their contracts six months after the sale is made.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Afflicting Man For Centuries, Gout Now Increasing Frequency

Gouty arthritis has plagued man for centuries, but only recently has it increased in frequency. If any form of arthritis had to increase, we are happy it was gout. Unlike most joint afflictions, it is easier to diagnose and responds well to treatment.

Two main forms of gout are recognized. The familial or primary type, which has always been with us, is an hereditary defect in the metabolism of certain proteins. The outcome is an excessive amount of uric acid in the blood and tissues, including the joints.

SECONDARY or iatrogenic gout follows the use of certain drugs, such as the thiazide diuretics. The latter products are used frequently in the treatment of hypertension, obesity and dropsy. These chemicals increase the amount of uric acid in the blood, but this is not too serious, because the usual gout remedies are effective.

Many people think of gout as a disease that develops suddenly with pain and swelling of the big toe. This is not surprising, because many old prints, paintings and cartoons depict the victim with one foot bandaged and hobbling about on crutches. It is true that the initial attack most often involves the big toe, but the ankle, instep and heel may also be painful. We know now that the knee, shoulders, elbow, wrist (and especially the middle joints of the fingers) may become swollen, red, warm and exquisitely tender. Occasionally backache is gout related.

COLCHICINE (an old drug) brings quick relief, but we do not know why. In fact, it is so dependable that if it does not work, the diagnosis of gout is questioned. Phenylbutazone, indomethacin and the adrenocorticotropic hormones also are effective.

Gout has a tendency to recur but probenecid or allopurinol do an excellent job of keeping the uric acid level reduced. Colchicine also may be added to either of these drugs for control of the symptoms.

SWEETS GAG HER

Mrs. W. writes: Most elderly friends of mine have a sweet tooth, but I don't. Years ago I loved candy and desserts but now sweets make me gag. Can you explain this turnabout?

REPLY

Likes and dislikes change with the passing years. Stop eating sweets if they affect you in this way. You can do without them. Examination is advised, however, if you begin to gag on other foods.

HALITOSIS DURING SLEEP

P. E. writes: What causes bad breath during sleep?

REPLY

How do you know — did your best friend tell you? Decaying food particles between the teeth or in the crypts of the tongue may play a role. Other causes include drainage from infected teeth and dental caries. In addition, gas absorbed from the intestinal tract is eliminated via the lungs.

COLORFUL SON

Mrs. P. A. writes: My son's skin turns green when he eats spinach, and orange when he eats carrots. Is he allergic to these vegetables?

REPLY

No. If what you say is true, your boy has a rare disorder of some kind and should be taken to a competent child specialist.

No Anti-Commune Move In Palo Alto

PALO ALTO (UPI)—The City of Palo Alto is not cracking down on communes despite a federal court ruling, city attorney Peter Stone declared on Tuesday.

In question is federal court approval of a 20-year-old ordinance which prohibits more than four unrelated persons from living in the same house in many city residential areas.

Commune residents had challenged the law in U.S. Disstrict Court, contending that by giving preference to the traditional family over voluntary ones it violated their constitutional rights.

Judge Albert C. Wollenberg found the law constitutional and said that communes do not have the "biological links which characterize most families."

"Emotional ties between members may exist, but this is true of members of many other groups."

The judge also said that "communal living groups are voluntary, with fluctuating memberships who have no legal obligations of support or cohabitation."

Such groups, he said, are indistinguishable legally from religious communities and residence clubs.

Stone noted that communes are "perfectly OK" in parts of the city zoned for multiple dwellings and added: "We're not trying to exclude communal living from Palo Alto."

The ordinance, he continued, was to provide neighborhoods with "a low volume of noise and traffic and municipal service requirements."

"There's certainly no member of the city staff out looking for over-occupancy," he declared.

"Our present policy is to go in only when we receive a complaint," said Arthur Nagel, the city's chief building inspector.

New Approach Proposed To Labor Negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A businessman proposed today a new approach to labor negotiations in which an impartial arbitrator would listen to both sides and then select "the most reasonable and most responsible proposal in its entirety."

He said his plan would force both labor and management to submit reasonable proposals instead of labor making excessive demands with the idea of toning them down and management making a stingy offer with the idea of an 11th hour compromise.

The idea was advanced in testimony prepared for a hearing of the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee by Joseph B. Danzansky, president of Giant Food Inc., which operates 93 supermarkets in Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C.

He said the idea first was proposed by two former labo secretaries —George P. Shultz of the Nixon administration and W. Willard Wirtz of the Kennedy-Johnson administrations.

Danzanksy said his idea was better than the "sham of traditional arbitration in which the arbitrator takes a "down-the-middle" approach between labor's demands and management's offer.

Under his plan, after the arbitrator had selected the "most reasonable" proposal, both sides would have an opportunity to reconsider and resubmit their proposals.

"Our present version of collective bargaining was born in pain and strife in the early decades of this century," Danzansky said. "It served its purposes well in those days when ancient and ingrained attitudes of management had to be drastically changed."

But now, he said, labor holds the upper hand and management is willing to accept excessive settlement and merely hike prices. His plan, he said, would make certain the public interest played a role in negotiations.

Big Storm Strikes In East

By United Press International

Cold winds, snow and rain glazed the highways of New England today, stranding cars "in piles" on expressways. Across the nation, at least four persons were killed when scores of vehicles piled up in dense fog near Bakersfield, Calif.

Arctic air clasped the Northeast today. Near-blizzard conditions prevailed from western New York to Maine. The cold air stretched south, covering most of the eastern part of the nation.

A blizzard warning was up in western New York. Locally heavy snow squalls driven by gusty winds were expected. Travelers warnings were in effect for parts of New York, New Hampshire, Maine and Ohio.

Arctic air pushed as far south as central Florida. Freezing temperatures extended from the Carolinas to northern Texas. Georgia was warned of a hard freeze for tonight.

Winds gusting to 50 m.p.h., snow squalls and low temperatures slowed commuter traffic in New York City today. Drivers inched forward on icy roads while commuter trains were delayed because of frozen switches and mechanical difficulties.

Upstate and western New York bore the brunt of the storm. Heavy snow and winds up to 65 m.p.h. shut down most major highways and closed schools and businesses. Rochester was virtually snowbound and Xerox Corp. told its 13,000 employees to stay home.

At least two storm-related traffic deaths were reported—one of them a 16-year-old boy in a car-school bus crash—in the state.

While New England ski resorts sent out telegrams announcing new snow after two days of "January thaw," drivers were stranded as cold winds and snow swept through the northern parts of the region and sleet and freezing rain glazed highways in the southern parts.

"You could skate on it," a Boston area motorist said after driving on one of the highways. "I'll bet it was an inch thick. Cars were stranded in piles on expressways ramps. You would spin with a feather touch on the brakes."

Part of Interstate 93 was washed out by Tuesday's heavy rain. Cars hurrying through hit a two-foot depression that blew out their tires. Motorists slogged through a field looking for jarred-off hubcaps.

Connecticut's weather was described as "squally" by police at Westport, where winds hit 58 m.p.h. and highways were icy. Ski resort owners in New Hampshire and Vermont said new snow and tonight's zero temperatures would improve skiing.

As the storm moved east, Indianapolis, Ind.. had its coldest reading of the winter this morning, 2 below zero. South Bend, in Northern Indiana, dug out from a six-inch snowfall on Tuesday, and schools in the area were closed for the second day today.

Michigan was still snow-clogged. The state's overnight low was 15 below zero at Sault Ste. Marie. High winds drifted snow up to 15 feet deep at Cheboygan.

In California, 60 to 70 vehicles piled up in dense fog on U. S. 99 north of Bakersfield. At least four persons were killed and many injured.

In Washington state, a warm snap mixed with heavy rain melted record snow packs, causing the worst flooding the low-lying western counties had since 1937. In the Cascade Mountains, the warm weather touched off new slides, bringing east-west traffic to a near standstill.

As the northeastern storm moved toward Canada, it brushed Chicago, dropping the temperature to 2 below zero. But icy winds caused the "chill factor" to drop as low as 55 below zero.

Quickie Divorce Threat In Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexico's "Quickie divorce" soon may come to an end.

The Federal Chamber of Deputies Tuesday passed a bill establishing a six-month residency requirement for foreigners wishing a divorce. Judges who defy the new law will be fined or jailed.

Senate approval is expected within a month. The new law will go into effect two weeks after publication in the official government gazette. It will supersede existing statutes in Mexico's 29 states and two territories.

Puzzle To Fleeing Atlantis Residents

ATHENS, The Melbourne Herald — Toronto Telegram News Service — Evidence of a once-thriving city abandoned in haste years ago has turned up in excavations on an island that some archeologists hold to be the place of origin for the legend of the Lost Continent of Atlantis.

But the biggest mystery of all in the island discovery is this: What happened to the 20,000-to-30,000 inhabitants of the city when they apparently fled from their homes to escape the grasp of a volcano and earthquake?

The question was posed recently by Prof. Spyridon Marinatos, Greek Inspector-General of Antiquities, who was reporting on the fourth year of excavations under his direction on the volcanic island of Santorini (Thera).

Santorini, in the Aegean Sea north of the island of Crete, is frequently described by the comparatively few tourists who visit it as picturesque in the spriit of a scene from Dante's Inferno, with black lava rock and white pumice, short of water and with little cultivation.

But once it was a much larger and more fertile island, able to support an important Minoan city and commercial centre.

Twice, about 25,000 years ago and around 1,500 B.C., the island was destroyed by the eruption of the still-smouldering volcano, earthquakes and subsidence. The second catastrophe buried the city now being excavated.

According to Professor Marinatos, the current excavations have so far uncovered no skeletons.

"We believe that the earthquake occurred before the explosion of the volcano, and that the inhabitants had time to remove their valuables from their homes," he said.

So far, he said, nothing had been found of silver and gold, and nothing carved. Painted jars and pottery, and such household furnishings as a wooden bed, with the remains of a mattress upon it and a beautifully decorated Minoan chamber pot beneath it, "were of no interest to them, though they are treasures for us."

Most valuable of all, he said, were the frescoes. One, depicting monkeys climbing the rocks of Santorini, indicated that "at that time, it seems, monkeys lived in the areas along the eastern Mediterranean, as they still survive today at its western extremity, on the rocks of Gibraltar."

Another, found intact and covering about 45 square feet of wall, represented the arrival of spring and the regeneration of nature, and showed the vivid and rich colors of the landscape before the explosion of the volcano.

Professor Marinatos said it was planned to stage a first exhibition of the finds from Santorini in Athens next year.

"One has the feeling here," he said, "that one is living amidst a happy and civilized society, which was suddenly swept away by a Biblical catastrophe while thriving and palpitating with life."

Air Board Revamping In Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation was introduced in the Assembly yesterday reducing the 14-member Air Resources Board to five specialists with "expertise" in air pollution.

Assemblyman Peter Schabarum, L-Convina, the author, said he wasn't critical of the existing board but "we are now faced with challenging problems in air pollution that must be faced head-on."

He said the "best method of attack" seems to be appointing members with a "broad background of expertise" in controlling smog and other air pollution problems.

The bill calls for the appointment of an attorney specializing in air pollution and conservation law; an engineer in motor vehicle smog control; an engineer in nonvehicular pollution control; an atmospheric chemist; and a public member.

They would be paid $12,000 annually and meet at least once a month. In addition, the board would be given the power to subpoena witnesses. Currently, members are paid expenses only and meet once a month or semimonthly.

A jury trial was set for the week of March 15.

A Lift On Two Cities On Streets

Novato and Mill Valley have won the support of the Marin County Urban Thoroughfare Priority Selection Committee in bids to acquire matching county funds for street improvements.

The committee, which met Monday at Larkspur, agreed to recommend the county supervisors allocate $120,000 to Mill Valley and $60,000 to Novato.

Formed in 1965, the committee is made up of representatives from each of Marin's 11 cities and three from the county. Its purpose is to recommend allocation of county gas tax revenues for improvement of the county's road network without regard to jurisdictional boundries.

The $120,000 proposed for Mill Valley will split the cost for the widening of Camino Alto to four lanes from East Blithedale to Miller avenues. It also includes extension of a bridge between Miller and Sycamore avenues.

Novato proposes improvement of the intersection at Novato Boulevard and Diablo Avenue. The $60,000, if approved by the supervisors, will be matched with a like amount of city funds for widening of the intersection, traffic chanalization and installation of traffic signals.

The committee's recommendations must be forwarded before March and will be considered during county budget sessions.

Probation Given In Burglary Case

James J. Kuhns, 39, of Fairfax has been placed on two years probation in Marin Superior Court for the second degree burglary of a Fairfax home June 9.

Judge E. Warren McGuire on Monday also ordered Kuhns to pay $15 restitution on the recommendation of the district attorney's office. McGuire declared the crime a misdemeanor.

Being Where Pot's Used: Two Fined

John Salpas, 25, and Irving E. Weinstein, 23, both of Massachusetts, were sentenced yesterday in Marin Municipal Court after pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of being in a place where marijuana was smoked.

Salpas, who had earlier pleaded innocent to possessing pot, was charged with the misdemeanor in an amended complaint filed by the district attorney's office yesterday. He was fined $75 and placed on probation for one year.

Weinstein was fined $35 and placed on probation for a year.

A charge of being in a place where marijuana was used — against a third defendant, Lorna Drevitson, 21, of Massachusetts — was dropped in the amended complaint.

The three were arrested Dec. 4 in a van at the Marin Motor Movies in San Rafael after other persons told police they smelled marijuana coming from the van.

Sentenced To State Prison

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — A 26-year-old Alameda County man, convicted of nine felonies in a 1966 crime spree which included a Marin auto chase, was sentended Monday to an indeterminate stay in state prison by Alameda Superior Court Judge George W. Phillips.

James Reece was found guilty on Dec. 23 after a jury deliberated three hours.

During an escape from Highland Hospital in Oakland, he was recaptured after pursuing the car of San Francisco entertainer Yvonne D'Angier of Fairfax into Marin County. The pursuit in a stolen car, ended in a two-car crackup in Fairfax Creek.

Charges against Reece also included two counts of kidnapping, three robberies and two burglaries, according to the clerk of the court.

Staying Alive In Lebanon Is A Very Tricky Business

Lebanon's figures for 1970 showed why.

According to judicial sources, there were 232 premeditated murders, 100 persons killed by stray bullets fired at weddings or funerals, 60 persons slain in clashes with Israel, and 300 traffic fatalities. Further unknown numbers died in clashes between Palestinian guerrillas and Lebanese rightists and troops.

It is clear that in a nation where crimes of passion are treated with Gallic sympathy, where the hanging penalty is never enforced and where every family has at least one gun, the chances of a steep death rate are being amply fulfilled.

The trouble is that some of the killers have difficulty in knowing exactly whom they want to eliminate. Things got so bad in Lebanon's famed Roman city of Baalbeck last year, for instance, that citizens hung out a banner warning travelers to "Carry a placard on your chest and back stating your name so you don't get killed by mistake."

Nationally, the crimes ranged from the shocking to the bizarre to the plain ridiculous.

Back in January, four men went hunting for sparrows. The bag? Five birds and three hunters. The lone survivor said there was a dispute about who shot the fifth bird and the sportsmen turned their rifles on each other.

More calculated was the case of the businessman whose senior partner announced the was closing their steelworks. According to police, the businessman, fearing for his livelihood, knocked his partner out, tied him up, went home to pray, then returned and dumped him in the blazing furnace.

The dangerous age in Lebanon seems to be 20 to 30 for it was this span that provided the vast majority of victims. Most of the killers came from this age bracket, too, though there were notable exceptions.

A young maid poisoned the baby of the woman for whom she worked by diluting the milk in its feeding bottle with liquid weed spray. She said the infant's mother had been cruel to her.

And a boy of 13, angered by an elderly woman, produced a gun and shot her dead.

A constant risk in Lebanon is death by stray bullets.

In traditional Arab fashion, volleys are fired into the air with equal enthusiasm at weddings and funerals. But no event in recent years matched the fusillades that marked the death of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt.

In three days of virtually nonstop firing, 18 persons were killed and 114 wounded. The telephone department got 900 requests to repair ruptured cables, and the electricity office reported 350 cases of shot-up power lines.

One incident during the year started reports Lebanese and Palestinians were fighting again. As gunfire crackled across Beirut at dawn, residents rushed to their balconies expecting to see fighting in the streets. What they saw was a number of men blasting wildly at a flock of storks gliding gracefully over the city. Dozens of birds plummeted to earth and for a few hours were carried proudly through the streets until, inedible and useless, they were discarded without ceremony.

And a point of responsibility was raised by the young thief who grabbed a woman's purse in a Beirut street. The woman's younger sister, a girl of 22, gave chase and dropped dead of a heart attack.

Apollo 14 Command Ship Built For Emergencies

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The Apollo 14 command ship carries more oxygen, power and water than past Apollos to get its crewmen back to Earth in almost every conceivable type of emergency.

The Apollo 13 astronauts had to rely on the oxygen and power in their still-attached lunar landing craft to sustain them for the trip back home after a command ship oxygen tank exploded. If the accident had occurred after they had abandoned the lunar module at the moon, they would have been doomed.

To eliminate such a possibility in the future, engineers installed a third oxygen tank in Apollo 14's command ship, isolated it from the other two tanks, added an extra battery and put aboard five more gallons of water.

Inadequate oxygen tank heater switches that led to the Apollo 13 explosion have been eliminated, tank wiring has been encased in metal conduits and fans have been removed from the tanks to make them virtually fireproof.

"I would say that, as a result, Apollo 14 has a safer spacecraft, said command module pilot Stuart A. Roosa at a recent news conference.

Mission director Chester M. Lee said the extra oxygen and battery would enable Roosa. Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell to get back home without their lunar module in almost the worst possible case —An Apollo 13 type failure when the command ship is being flown solo behind the moon in lunar orbit.

Lee said a return from such an accident would be "very austere", but the three crewmen would get back safely.

There are still two types of emergencies, however, for which there would be no way out—the failure of the command ship's main engine while the astronauts are locked in lunar orbit, or the failure of the landing craft's takeoff engine on the moon.

"There's still a finite possibility that we can always have a problem that we haven't seen before, or even one that we have seen before, but it's a pretty small probability," said Mitchell.

Indian Move To Redefine Native

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Federated Indians of California have decided to petition Congress to revise the definition of who is a native California Indian.

The organization Sunday adopted a resolution calling on the government to restrict the definition to Indians whose ancestors were in the state before 1850.

The measure stipulates that only Indians of tribes pre-dating the 1850 cutoff would be eligible for $29.1 million in federal reparation payments made for the taking of Indian land.

Gerald Davis, president of the federation, said when the 1968 reparation law was written, California Indians were unaware that non-native Indians could qualify for the money as well.

The Future Of Nuclear Energy

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI)—U. S. Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif. said here there is "no alternative" to nuclear energy in the long run.

Holifield, chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee On Nuclear Energy, addressed the Toledo Area Chamber of Commerce Monday night.

"Environmental zealots and headline seekers of various persuasions who have argued against the advancement of any kind of electrical generating facilities in order to block the construction and operation of nuclear power plants," said Holifield.

"For long range needs there is no alternative to nuclear energy," said Holifield.

Teachers Join Teamsters Union

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A group of 65 administrative employees of the San Francisco School Unifed School District has joined the Teamsters Union it was announced today.

A rival AFL-CIO union for school administrators was also reported to be recruiting among the district's 154 administrative employes.

The administrators are currently represented by an independent professional association.

Piccard Fears Earth Suffocating

ROME (UPI)—All life on earth may suffocate if man keeps dumping poisonous waste into the oceans, Swiss scientist and underwater explorer Jacques Piccard said recently.

Piccard, in Rome for a conference of experts on the possible construction of undersea laboratories and "cities," said the problem was an urgent one.

"We are living more and more with the sea and we are depending completely on the sea, not only for food but also for breathing," Piccard said in an interview with the press service of the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO).

"About two-thirds of the atmosphere's oxygen comes from the sea, produced directly by phytoplankton (microscopic plant organisms) or algae. There are no precise values for this process, but one can say that between 50 and 70 per cent of all oxygen is produced directly from the sea, churned into the air by wind and waves and carried over into the land. If by pollution we destroy these algae, it is a real possiblility that all life on earth could suffocate."

Piccard said it was "very important, not only in the long term but also in the very short term, to ensure that we do not throw anything into the sea which could endanger these phytoplanktons."

He said man is dumping into the oceans 200,000 tons of lead, one million tons of oil and 5,000 tons of mercury a year, plus large quantities of detergents and herbicides.

Piccard, 48, who has made more than 60 deep sea dives in the Mediterranean, Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, was one of a working party of seven experts on underwater research meeting last week at FAO headquarters in Rome. The purpose the conference was to draft a manual on the use of submersibles—manned undersea craft and underwater stations where marine scientists can live and work as divers.

William High, a U. S. Fisheries biologist who last year lived for two weeks at a depth of 50 feet in an underwater house in the Virgin Islands, said he was able to swim to depths of up to 100 feet, carry out his research on fish behavior and return "home" for lunch without having to decompress.

"It was an indescribable experience," he said. "I would wake up in the morning—probably having watched television the night before—and see fish at the windows look in at me."

High said he saw little future in underwater hotels, but felt habitats such as the one he lived in would go deeper and allow scuba divers to work at 400 feet.

John M. Anderson, director of the biological station of the Canadian Fisheries Research Board at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, said submersibles would give scientsts their first chance to take a direct look at fish life.

"Fishing has been like trying to harvest potatoes from a balloon with a long rope and some gear at the bottom and a cloud between you and the potatoes," Anderson said.

He said submersibles will take down "what I like to remind people is the most complicated research mechanism in the universe—that is a pair of eyes attached to a brain.

"There is nothing to compare to this enormous, computer-like apparatus. Send that down with television and all the otther complicated aids and you really come back with all kinds of information that could not have been got any other way."

Woman Winemaker: Life Is Berries

By CLARENCE ZAITZ

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—When Mary Reinke arrives at work each morning at 6:45 —seven days a week mostly —she is there to do battle with "the whims of nature."

Mrs. Reinke runs Oregon's only commercial winery and, as she sees it, "we have to rely on the whims of nature to make wine. The winemaker only guides it."

She was not born to winemaking and feels that, even after seven years, she is still learning.

Mrs. Reinke went to work for the Honeywood Winery as an office secretary in 1943 and recalls that "I knew everything about the workings in the office, but what I knew about winemaking you could put in a thimble."

She assumed control of the small company in 1963 when it was about to go out of business. The stockholders asked her to run things temporarily. But when a buyer could not be found she acquired enough stock to assume permanent control.

Today the winery, which produces 200,000 gallons of berry wines a year, is run by only eight employes —half of them women.

"Each one of us is capable of doing each job," Mrs. Reinke explained. "Not one of us is afraid to go out and grab a mop."

She has a neat, small office at the front of the plant, but does not spend much time there. She's in the winery "at least once an hour" and often will pinch hit for an ill workman.

"Last week my gal who makes the wine jelly broke her leg —can you imagine? Right during our busiest season! So now I have to run the jelly line, too. Sometimes I'll even pinch hit on the bottling line. I can do every job in the plant except the heavy manual work."

As she was being interviewed her ears perked up suddenly as she heard a strange sound. She quickly analyzed it as sounding "like a pump is going out," and hurried off. Later she explained other noises as being "the men dumping barrels of frozen loganberries."

In the olden days the winery would work full tilt during the berry production season, then slack off in the winter. Now thousands of barrels of fruit are frozen in cold storage to provide material for winter winemaking.

Mrs. Reinke's husband, Donald, is a battalion fire chief and has little to do with the winery except for contributing ideas. He likes to spend some of his spare time in the small laboratory developing new concoctions.

A recent addition to the roster of berry wines is a berry and grape wine containing six different essences which has been named "turkenblut" and is being touted as a skiers' drink.

Watching things at the winery is a seven-days-a-week job, according to Mrs. Reinke. "Every minute of the day something new can develop. It's not like a hardware store where you can go home at night and nothing is going to change. Wine can do erratic things while you're in bed sleeping."

The ever-present concern is that bacteria will get into a 10,000 gallon vat of wine and turn it to vinegar. "And there is no market for vinegar," she said.

The dynamic 49-year-old winemaker is a familiar figure around the Oregon Legislature, where she has twice successfully lobbied for special legislation. Once it was to allow retail sales at her plant, and another time it was to allow a wine-tasting room.

Honeywood is now financially sound, Mrs. Reinke proudly declared, "and is growing 20-25 per cent a year." She worries about getting too large, however, because "then it wouldn't be any fun."

Her wines are marketed in 12 states —"But we don't spend any money on advertising," she said. "We put all our money into the product."

Canada's Northern Command Is Vital

OTTAWA (UPI)—A jumbo jetliner on a transpolar flight comes down in the barren Arctic, stranding 300 thinly clad passengers in subzero darkness and howling cold gales . . .

It hasn't happened, but more than 3,500 jet passengers every day pass through the Canadian Arctic skies on the increasingly popular over-the-pole routes — more people than live in the forbidding land beneath them — so the possibility of accident must be provided for.

Should something happen, the rescue job would become the responsibility of the youngest general and the newest outfit in the Canadian army, Brig. Gen. Ramsey Withers and his 60-man Northern Command.

The youngest general appointed in Canadian peacetime history, the 40-year-old Withers and his men face a big job in their demanding territory north of the 60th parallel.

It includes policing the growing number of Arctic oil wells against pollution, planning to clean up a big spill if one occurs, and aiding the inhabitants against the forest fires, floods and other hardships of the Arctic.

Most important, to the Canadian government, Withers and his men will be showing the Maple Leaf flag and aiding by their presence Canada's claims to jurisdiction over the Arctic archipelago.

The genial general, a vigorous outdoorsman who began his career as an electrical engineer, obviously is delighted at his new job but he admits to at least one "nightmare" —that something should bring down one of the giant jets flying over the arctic.

There was at least one incident last spring that reminded Withers and other concerned authorities that the possibility is always with them.

A DC8 strayed off course last May in the high Arctic and was directed by northern defense radar installations on the Dew Line into the airport at Norman Wells, Northwest Territories, where it took on more fuel to continue its journey. The plane was carrying 250 passengers from Prestwick, Scotland, to Tokyo.

The International Civil Aviation Organization predicts the weekly average of polar flights over northern Canada will rise from 240 this year to 300 in 1974 and 400 in 1978.

The increasing number of overflights and the growing use of jumbo planes, carrying 300-plus passengers, are increasing both the possibility of accident and the difficulty of a rescue operation if one came down, Withers said.

Presently, the Canadian armed forces have stationed Hercules transport planes in Ottawa and Edmonton to bring out stranded passengers after a crash or forced landing.

But if the downing occurred in an inaccessible area, rescue would depend on helicopters and rugged short takeoff and landing (STOL) planes.

Withers said his rescue plans involve three stages: "One, find the plane. Two, provide life support —temporary shelter, supplies, tents, medical men and materials. Three, get them out.

"My nightmare is 300 people in miniskirts and summer clothes stranded somewhere up there. They would need some kind of help within minutes, and airlifting 300 people would take 10 sorties in a Buffalo (STOL) aircraft."

Withers said one of his highest priorities was to prepare adequate plans for dealing with oil pollution incidents and arrange for regular surveillance to help prevent spillages and spot them quickly when they do occur.

"With people now searching for oil all over the Arctic, an incident is bound to occur sometime. Our job is to make it as unlikely as possible — through regular patrols and monitoring —and to make sure we can move in an effective cleanup operation immediately if one does occur."

He said he would be consulting with local authorities, oil companies and pollution experts this year to work out complete contingency plans and surveillance arrangements for the exploration area.

From his headquarters in Yellowknife, the capital of the Northwest Territories, and from a small auxiliary post in the Yukon capital of Whitehorse, Withers hopes to be able to make the best possible use of Canada's relatively small defense forces to meet the needs of the far north.

"My responsibility is to coordinate. If a unit is going to train in the north, for example, I will provide them with information and make arrangements with local authorities. For all forces, our command will act as an information bank on the north. We will advise about food, fuel, clothing, availability of medical services —all the information that is needed for a military operation."

In general, Withers said he had four priorities for his command:

"The maintenance of Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic —this means we must have surveillance and a presence.

"Operationally ready forces that can operate in the north, that will be able to live in it.

"Search and rescue —this is a big job and getting bigger.

House Speaker's Bluff Called

A brief conversation with assemblywoman Mary Frazzini, a Reno Republican, convinced Jacobsen he didn't want to make good on his threat to eject any of the Assembly's five women members who wore a pantsuit.

"He did," she added.

Jacobsen, who had no ban against miniskirts, had said pantsuits and maxis were not in keeping with the decorum of the assembly.

Fate Of Jobless Space Worker

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Gordon Blackburn came to Southern California in the late 1940s and got into the airplane building business as an assembly line worker for Lockheed.

With a background of engineering at Kansas State University and service in the Air Force, Blackburn advanced steadily in the industry, moving from one firm to another and finally going to work in 1963 for North American Rockwell.

Blackburn was assigned to North American's part in the space program—construction of the second stage of the Saturn rockets. He has worked as an instrumentation expert on the building of all 15 of the huge launchers which put man on the moon.

Last October he was laid off.

As a result of the cutback in the nation's space program, there was simply no work for him.

Blackburn became one of 155,000 workers in the aerospace industry in the state of California who have lost their jobs in the past two years. The work force has dropped drom 615,000 to 460,000.

Blackburn, a pleasant, articulate man in his late 40s who comes originally from Lynnville, Ky. was asked in an interview at his home in the sprawling San Fernando Valley whether he was bitter at being discharged after so many years of service.

"No, I'm not bitter at all," he said. "I'm not concerned about getting another job. It may not be in the space or even the aeronautical field but I have qualifications that are needed and I am accustomed to moving from one job to another.

"Working on the space program was the greatest thrill of my lifetime. It was an opportunity to be part of one of the greatest moments of history.

"What I do feel is sorrow. In the space program this country built the greatest technological teams this nation has ever known or probably ever will know and now they are being broken apart and I'm afraid they will never be brought together again."

Blackburn says the American public does not realize that in reaching the moon the nation created a corps of scientists, engineers, technicians, mechanics and just plain thinkers with a dedication that transcended the interests of businesses or individuals.

Any thought of a severe cutback in the space program over the long run would be sheer idiocy in Blackburn's opinion.

"It would be as if Columbus came back after finding the new world and orders immediately went out that no ships were to go more than 200 miles from Europe's shores," he said.

But his main point is that the technological team created in the space program is qualified to tackle other major problems.

"Pollution is a perfect example," he said. "It is a typical systems engineering job right up their alley. They could turn around to that problem and find solutions just as they conquered space. It would be expensive but there is no cheap way."

When Blackburn was laid off in October, he still had a month's paid vacation coming. At the end of that time, he put in for unemployment compensation.

In the past few years, Blackburn's annual salary was in the $18,000-22,000 range. He owns his own house although the mortgage is not fully paid off. He has spent his time since his layoff installing a second bathroom in the home.

He met his wife, Sheila, an exceptionally pretty dark-haired woman, whe he was stationed in California while he was in the service. They have no children.

Mrs. Blackburn is extremely proud of her husband.

"His work on the space program was really a labor of love," she says. "You wouldn't believe the hours he put in. If we had a couple of hours together a week, it was a treat."

While Blackburn says he is not discouraged, he admits that a number of his friends are.

One of his colleagues with a doctorate in engineering is tending bar. Another has started farming in northern Florida. Many of them say they are getting out of engineering and would advise young people not to get into it.

"That's absolutely wrong," he says. "This country needs more engineers, not less. The trouble with some of the younger fellows is that they have never been without a job before and they're scared and upset.

"There's nothing to be ashamed of about being out of work. Actually it's a good thing to change jobs, to branch into an entirely different field now and then.

"No, I'm not bitter. But I am sorry about the breaking up of these great teams."

Shepard and Mitchell are due to land in the moon's rolling FRA Mauro area at 4:17 a.m. EST Feb. 5 while Roosa remains in lunar orbit. The three astronauts are set to return to a Pacific ocean splashdown at 4:01 p.m. EST Feb. 9.

Highlights of the nine-day mission include (all times EST and subject to change): Sunday, Jan. 31 3:23 p.m. — Launch from Cape Kennedy, with Apollo 14 reaching a 118-mile-high Earth orbit 12 minutes later.

5:54 p.m.—Top stage of Saturn rocket refires and drives Apollo 14 toward the moon.

6:24 p.m. —Apollo command ship separates from Saturn, turns around and docks with its lunar module landing craft. Live telecast of this operation begins at 6:28 p.m. and lasts 25 minutes. 7:19 p.m. —Apollo 14 command ship-lunar module combination separates from Saturn third-stage rocket.

7:23 a.m. —Astronauts begin 10-hour sleep period.

5:23 p.m. —crew wakes up.

9:59 p.m. —Apollo 14's main engine fires, switching the astronauts from a "free return" course to one that will not bring them safely back to Earth without additional engine firings. This course is required to reach the lunar landing site.

TUESDAY, FEB. 2

8:23 a.m. — Astronauts begin 10-hour rest period.

6:23 p.m. —Astronauts end rest period.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3

THURSDAY, FEB. 4

1:48 a.m. —Apollo 14 swings behind moon and is out of radio contact with earth. 2:00 a.m. — Six-minute 7-second braking blast from the command ship's main engine places the astronauts in orbit ranging from 196 to 66 miles above the moon.

2:20 a.m. —Apollo 14 resumes radio contact with Earth.

2:31 a.m. — Top stage of Apollo 14's Saturn rocket smashes into the moon, 258 miles west of astronaut landing site. Apollo 14 will be passing above the eastern side of the moon at the time.

4:08 a.m. —Apollo 14 begins second lunar orbit.

6:15 a.m. —A 21 1-2-second firng from the command ship's main engine drops Apollo 14 into an orbit ranging from 67 to 11 miles above the lunar surface. This occurs at the start of the fourth orbit.

Astronauts' Buddy System

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—The two Apollo 14 moon walkers will be able to share vital cooling water if necessary to triple their hiking range on the lunar surface to a mile and a half or more.

Using the buddy system technique long practiced by scuba divers, Alan B. Shepard and Edgar D. Mitchell will carry a 6 1-2-foot hose that will be able to transfer coolant from one spacesuit to another.

This would be used if one backpack fails while the astronauts are on their second surface excursion. Each astronaut carries an emergency oxygen supply and previously that oxygen would have to be used to cool the astronaut as well as supply his breathing needs if the main backpack fails.

Mission director Chester M. Lee said the buddy system, carried for the first time on Apollo 14, will double the time the astronauts would have to get back to hte safety of their lunar module in event of a backpack failure. The limit in such an emergency before was half an hour and half of that time would be used in repressurizing the lander.

Shepard and Mitchell will hike to the rim of a scientifically interesting crater on their second surface excursion. The crater is about 4,000 feet from the landing site and the buddy system will give them the walking range to reach it.

Ancient Surgery Evidence Found

MOSCOW (UPI) —It was a brilliant job, according to Soviet scientists. The surgeon amputated the young woman's left foot and used the bone of a ram to fashion an artificial one to go in its place.

It happened 2,300 years ago.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Sunday archeologists and physicians found evidence of the surgery in a skeleton discovered in a burial mound in Kazakhstan.

"An X-ray examination showed that the operation was successful," Tass said. "The patient lived for several years afterward, as shown by the bending of the end of the shinbone from the constant pressure of the artificial foot."

Nixon's Plan On Cancer Attacked

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the oral polio vaccine, believes President Nixon's proposed $100 million plan to fight cancer will not produce any miracles.

"You can't buy solutions to problems with money," Sabin said at a news conference Saturday.

Sabin, who gave up cancer research a year ago to head the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel, said, "Money alone is raw material. Unless you get good people to use it, it will not achieve its goal."

Used Car Buyer Protection Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill enabling a used car buyer to determine if the dealer turned back the mileage indicator on the vehicle was submitted Monday by Assemblyman Ken MacDonald, D-Ojai.

The measure would require the Department of Motor Vehicles to be notified of the mileage recorded on the odometer of a vehicle every time it is sold or leased. The buyer then could check with the DMV to determine the previous mileage reading.

It is already illegal to turn back odometers.

Nader Switches Consumer Crusade To Grass Roots Area

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Six years after coming to Washington, Ralph Nader is switching the focus of his consumer crusade to the grass roots.

His goal is to enlist an army of students, housewives and particularly young lawyers to do at home what Nader has done from his Washington base.

Nader says nearly all the best lawyers work for the highest bidder, usually big business. He feels this results in an almost unbroken string of decisions which shortchange the public.

Nader believes the solution is to give the public equal representation in the legal arena —the same caliber of lawyers, accountants and scientists hired by business.

For instance, Nader says it is often hopeless for a homeowner to protest his property tax. The answer, he says, is for all local homeowners to chip in, hire a lawyer and perhaps an accountant, survey all the tax assessments and argue for lower rates on homes and higher rates on business.

He says this is precisely what industry does with the result that many localities grant tax favors to local business and make up the difference by taxing homeowners more.

Now 36, Nader still works 16 to 20 hours a day. He foregoes vacations and social life, works closely with consumer-minded congressmen, needles federal agencies and petitions for tougher action against deceptive advertising, hazardous cars and contaminated foods.

But he is spending more and more time on the road, not just giving speeches —which for years have helped finance his office —but trying to spark creation of local and state public service enterprises.

"We've got to get more people into this kind of work," Nader told UPI in an interview. "There will be 1,000 public service lawyers by 1975, compared with perhaps 50 now. But that's too slow."

Nader said his primary recruiting targets are college students and young lawyers.

His approach to students runs like this:

You say you want to fight racism, pollution, consumer abuses. Well, put your money where your mouth is. Chip in $3 a year each for a statewide public service fund, elect your own board of directors, pick your targets, hire lawyers and other skilled help and go to work.

In one long day late last year, Nader delivered that message to students at nine campuses in Oregon. Within a few weeks, he said, 50 per cent of the entire enrollment of nine colleges and universities signed up to participate.

The result was OSPIRG, the Oregon Students Public Interest Research Group. Nader says similar groups are being organized by college students in Illinois, Minnesota and Georgia.

"If you could get just one of these in every state it would make a tremendous difference," Nader said.

To young Wall Street Lawyers, Nader makes this pitch: right out of law school you make $16,000 to $18,000 a year from business. You owe something to the other side of issues. Chip in $500 a year each and set up an independent law firm to do public service work.

"I call it a 'breeder law firm' because it would prompt similar lawyers' efforts elsewhere," Nader said. "They can dig up or borrow $500 to improve the system which is paying them so well."

With skilled grass roots representation, Nader said, the consumer movement can be "action oriented." So far, he said, it has been largely "informational and educational."

Nader's Washington goals this year are the same broad consumer protection laws that narrowly failed to win approval by Congress in 1970.

One would establish an independent federal agency to represent the consumer. In effect, the taxpayers would finance on a large national scale the kind of public service firm Nader is trying to create privately elsewhere on a small local scale.

Another, also linked to Nader's idea that consumers must band together, would let one aggrieved customer sue a firm on behalf of everyone victimized by the same shoddy product or phony sales pitch.

Such suits usually are impractical individually because the legal fees cost more than the amount sought. Under the "class action" proposal, the judge would award money to all affected customers, and the lawyer's fee would be taken proportionately from each recipient.

"This is real stuff," Nader said of the proposals. "Up to now we've just had subject matter bills —cars, flammable fabrics, toys. But these are substantive changes in the ground rules, all in favor of the consumer."

Nader's Washington office is frequently pictured as a small, threadbare operation populated chiefly by a few idealistic students.

Nader actually runs two Washington offices. The main one, the center for the study of responsive law, is the home of the widely publicized "Nader's Raiders," student groups whose investigative reports have scorched federal bureaucrats.

The center is tax exempt, sticks to investigations and public disclosure of alleged scandals and shortcomings in government and business, and has an annual budget of $285,000. Its half dozen lawyers make up to $15,000 a year, but the full-time staff totals fewer than 15.

Much of the money goes to the student "raiders," about 200 of whom worked last summer on 20 projects. They were paid $200 to $1,000, based mostly on need. Nader purposely pays poor students more so his center will not become an exclusive haven for the do-good rich.

The second office, with a $170,000 budget, is called the Public Interest Research Group. This is a nonprofit firm of 14 young lawyers who receive $5,000 their first year out of law school. Nader signs them up in the expectation they will move on to more lucrative jobs. A few stay two years or more, however.

It was one of Nader's young lawyers who sued the Food and Drug Administration seeking stiffer warning labels on birth control pills. Another is looking into environmental hazards of nuclear power plants. A third is exploring ways to force more public disclosure of government activities.

Still another is investigating whether the federal civil service system promotes those who make no waves rather than employes with initiative and ideas.

Where does Nader get his money? Small foundations finance most of the center's activities, Nader said, with a substantial but lesser amount coming in small contributions from individuals.

He said the fund raising gets harder with fame, not easier.

"You get less money the more effective you get," Nader said. "Some foundations have cut us off because we're too controversial for them."

The law firm is not tax exempt and hence not eligible for charitable donations. Its money comes mainly from two sources. One is the more than $400,000 Nader got in his suit against General Motors Corp., which had hired private detectives to trail the author of "Unsafe at Any Speed."

The second source is Nader's own fund raising, mostly lecturing and writing. Nader estimated he spends 20 per cent of his time raising money to pay office bills.

"Almost everything I earn is turned back," he said. "I don't need much to live on. I'm not much of a consumer."

New Shock Absorber For Saturn Rocket

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)— Apollo 14's Saturn 5 rocket is equipped with a new shock absorber to eliminate the "pogo" vibrations that prematurely stopped one of five second-stage engines during last April's Apollo 13 launching.

The early engine shutdown did not affect the moon mission because the other four engines compensated for the lack of thrust by firing longer. Nevertheless, the rocket's performance was reduced and a similar shutdown could lead to a moonflight abort.

To reduce the buildup of oscillations, a donut-shaped device was installed in the liquid oxygen feed system to cushion the pressures of fluid going to the engines. This dampening effect causes the propellant column to vibrate at a frequency different from the engines and stage structure and prevents the three from vibrating together in rhythm.

Similarshock absorbers were used successfully in Titan 2 rockets that launched two-man Gemini spacecraft in 1965 and 1966.

Detergent Ban By Suffolk County Leaders

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (UPI)— The Suffolk County legislature Tuesday banned sale of all detergent products, making Long Island housewives the first in the nation to be legally limited to soap and soap flakes.

The 18-man legislature voted after a 20-minute public hearing on an amendment to an existing law, passed last November, which banned sale of most laundry detergent products, including many national brands. Under the new law, any detergent including those with non-ionic ingredents, will be banned from sale to Suffolks 1.1 million residents.

The legislation resulted from increasing pollution of Suffolk's water supply, which had led doctors in some communities to advise use of bottled water in making baby formulas. The only cleaning substances that can now be sold in the county are those made of vegetable oil or animal fat that are clearly marked "soap."

Billboard Banning Bill Is Introduced

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill banning billboards in California by June 1975 was introduced Monday by Assemblyman Frank Murphy who said the outdoor signs are "all over the damn place and they don't do anything."

The Santa Cruz Republican said his measure would require 25 per cent of the advertising signs to come down by June 1972, with 25 per cent more to be demolished each year until they are all gone. The bill would be administered by the state Director of Consumer Affairs.

Dogs And Cats Faring Better On Their Tuna

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (UPI)— A scientist who has gained recognition for his studies of mercury levels in tuna and swordfish said Tuesday "cats and dogs are faring a lot better than people."

Prof. Bruce McDuffie, a chemistry professor at State University at Binghamton, said he had examined six brands of cat food and one of dog food containing tuna. He said all were below the mercury-level standards set by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Last year, McDuffie's findings of mercury in tuna and swordfish samples above the 0.5 parts per million acceptable level for human consumption led to the FDA ordering certain brands off supermarket shelves.

Four of the cat foods tested were of a tuna-base variety and the other two had tuna flavoring added, McDuffie said.

Airlift Plan For Vietnam Soldiers

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Two Milwaukee men, one a Vietnam veteran, have founded Wisconsin Operation Airlift Inc., and hope by March to be able to provide trips home for Vietnam servicemen on leave.

The group planned to solicit funds from the public to finance the $502 round trip air tickets. They are cooperating with state government agencies and several airlines and plan to place the names of kevicemen in a pool, based on length of service and leave eligibility, and draw names once a month for the available tickets.

Newark Public School Teaching New Class In African Culture

By RONALD BURNS

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—A group of black youngsters stand, arms folded, eyes front, chanting the slogans of the red, black and green tricolor of black nationalism that is unfurled at the front of the classroom.

Around the room are several instructors, young, black and barefoot, dressed in dashikis and turban-style headgear called geles. Along the walls are colorful posters depicting African life.

The children clap their hands and smile, and the teachers lead their chanting:

"Red is for the blood of our forefathers which has not been shed in vain. Black is for the color of our faces and the job we must do. Green is for youth and new ideas."

Though it sounds at first like the underground school of some far-out fringe group, it is an experimental class now being taught in the Newark public school system that incorporates the African Free School methods originated by Newark-born poet and playwright Leroi Jones.

Thirty youngsters are learning Swahili, reading Zulu folk tales and listening to the wisdom of Bantu philosophers in the daily class in Room 309 at Robert Treat School in Newark's rundown Central Ward.

The class is aimed at giving the children "a black frame of reference," Jones said in an interview, because "African children —wherever they are — relate better to African descriptions, whether through literature or philosophy."

"Nobody thinks of teaching the Bantu philosophers to the white middle class, like, say, they teach Thomas Aquinas," Jones said. "The trouble is that only Aquinas is taught in both white and black areas so what we're trying to do is help black children learn by using images that show their own development."

The class had its origin in a weekend version of African Free School launched last year by Jones at 33 Stirling St., site of the writer's Spirit House project, a local theater and arts workshop.

The African curriculum was incorporated into the city's school system this fall through a federal grant made available for educationally deprived children under the Education Act of 1965.

Dr. Alma Flagg, assistant superintendent of Newark schools, who plugged for the inception of the program, says that as far as she knows it is "unique in New Jersey, possibly in the country."

It is being conducted in a city whose population of 402,000 is more than 70 per cent black, and in the heart of one of the nation's shabbiest ghettos that saw bloody riots three years ago in which 26 persons were killed.

Jones thinks that since the election in Newark last June of Kenneth A. Gibson, the first black mayor of a major Northeastern city, the ghetto's mood has shifted "to a much more positive approach" and the accompanying feeling that Newark can become a national showcase for black accomplishment.

"We look on the black community as in need of general improvement," Jones said, "And we think it's the black community's responsibility to initiate this improvement, not anyone else's."

Dr. Flagg emphasized that the Free School program was set up "only after there was an indication of strong interest in the community."

She also stressed that "there is a control class going on in the same building, similar in every way possible to the Free School, but using the conventional curriculum."

She said the major similarities include a multi-level approach that groups together children from grades five through eight, as well as the use of several instructors for the one class. She said the program's future was up in the air until the evaluation of its results at the end of the current school year.

A major emphasis of the class is the "family" approach and relationship of teachers to students. Teachers use only Swahili names and are called "Mama" or "Baba," which are Swahili for mother and father.

"We are like their parents," said Mama Furaha, who administers the African Free School both at Robert Treat and at Spirit House.

Jones noted that the teachers "stress the kind of discipline that is unknown in the uncontrolled school situation that you usually find today."

"In a sense it is traditional and we think of the school as traditional," he said. "Tradition in a degenerated situation becomes innovation."

Month's Delay If Apollo 14 Doesn't Go On Sunday

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—If Apollo 14 is not launched by 7:12 p.m. EST Sunday, its pilots will have to wait until March 1 to get another shot at the moon.

Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell are scheduled to blast off at 3:23 p.m. Jan. 31, but launch crews have 3 hours and 49 minutes of leeway should weather or some technical problem cause a delay. The last hour of the launch period is after nightfall.

But because Apollo 14 is programmed for only one landing site on the moon, and because special sunlighting conditions are needed for visibility during the descent and surface operations, there is just one optimum launch opportunity a month.

The next favorable launch date is March 2. However, a high priority part of the mission is to photograph a future landing area near the Crater Descartes and to do that, Apollo 14 would have to be launched March 1 and the astronauts would spend an extra day in lunar orbit.

A launch March 3 also is a possibility, although sunlight conditions would not be as good at the landing site and the Descartes photography would be missed.

If those launch opportunities are missed for some reason, Apollo 14 could be lunched on March 31 or April 1,. but Descartes photography would not be possible.

An average of more than 400 billion gallons of water flow down the Mississippi River past New Orleans each day.
